Prediction - n.
To state in advance

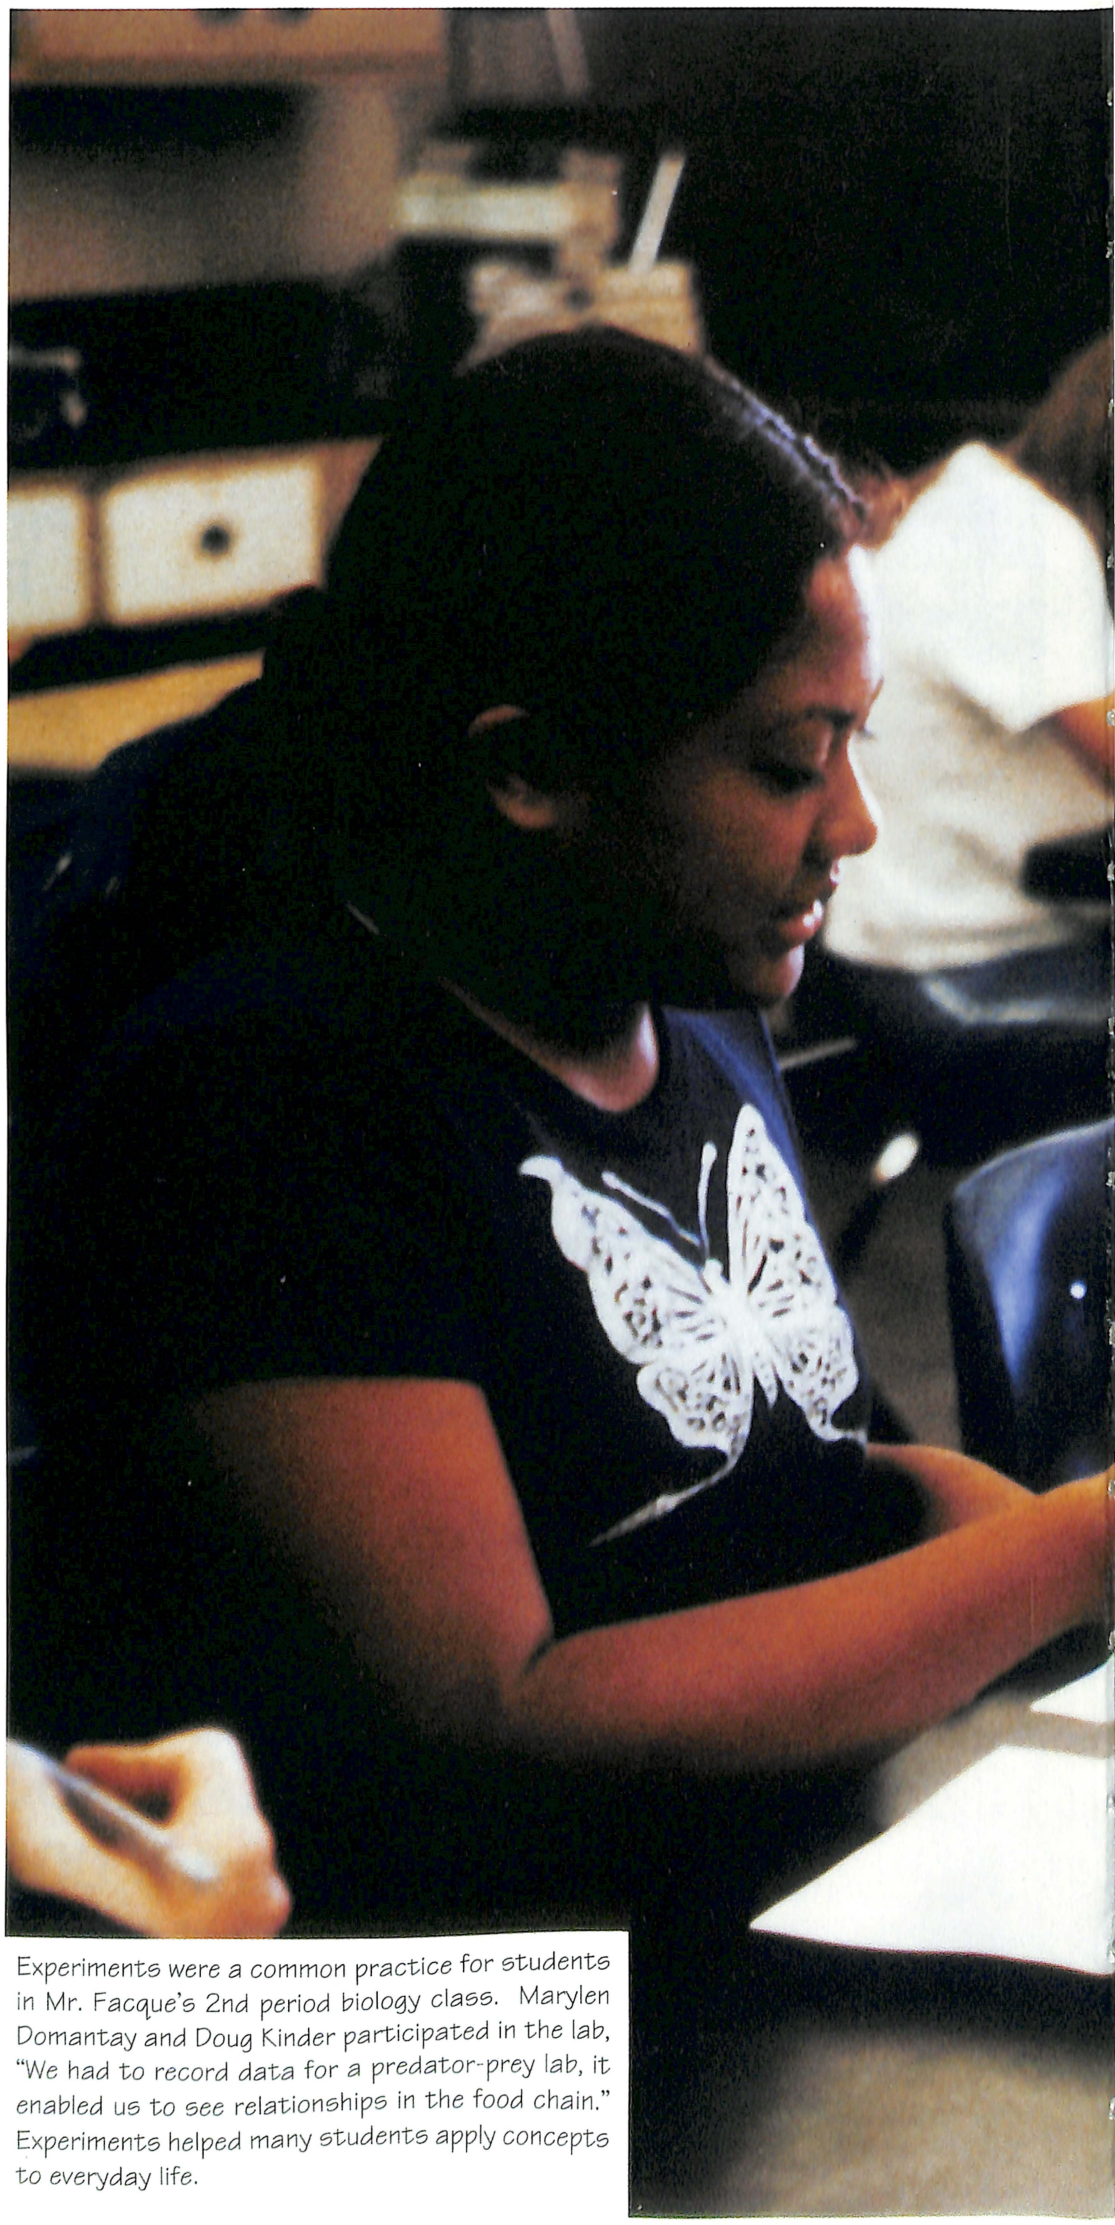

Dynamic energy showered the students at AHS in the 1998-1999 school year. The world we knew came to a sudden halt and things began to change instantaneously.

Vast amounts of students became involved, it was no longer just the handful of students showing up to homecoming and powder puff. "It's encouraging to see all of the spirit and participation. The crowds are overwhelming but the more the better!" Said .

Redundancy was no longer a problem with everyday life of generation X. Students experienced life to its fullest brink by getting involved with creating and decorating the "All Around the World" floats. Students went past the classroom and tried kayaking and cliff diving. Freshman Arthur St. Germain let humor get rid of redundancy, "I would put tape on my forehead, reminding me not to do it again."

Predicting the future is an impossible task but the outcome was changed because we reached for the stars together as family and individuals. "We can influence the future by learning all that we can in school and becoming great people," said Sophomore Kelley Carrier.

Experiments were a common practice for students in Mr. Facque's 2nd period biology class. Marylen Domantay and Doug Kinder participated in the lab, "We had to record data for a predator-prey lab, it enabled us to see relationships in the food chain." Experiments helped many students apply concepts to everyday life.

No matter what Armijo students set their mind's to they came out victorious. Determination, family, pride, and hard work is what made the students successful in their everyday lives. Paving the way to the future was what the students did in the 1998-1999 school year.

PREDICTION

Over the years, Armijo had been stereotyped as being "dangerous and ghetto," but in reality that is not the truth. "We have had 5 straight years of excellence, and I'm looking forward to many more with my family here at Armijo. This generation is forthcoming into the new era. Paving the way for the future," stated Mr. Lanpheir with true pride.

We are a large family with loads of spirit, unity, and determination. The only thing that could be anticipated from the students and faculty of AHS is their absolute best.

No one can deny that the new millennium is coming and changes are inevitable. The only one's that can are the students, staff, and community members that make the school what it is today. Students held walk outs to express their fourth amendment rights. Trying to the prove the point that changes had to be made. Change was already happening at the very moment.....

With diginity, four ROTC students carried flags across the football field. "I get nervous in front of the crowd but I like doing it, so it's worth it," exclaimed sophomore Quentin Aten. Many students had fears about being in front of crowds.

Spirit bonded us together throughout the year enabling us to alter the future. Even though the future did not always have a postive outcome, we learned to accept what happened in our lives. We grew to be thankful of all good and bad things knowing that we would gain knowledge from it.

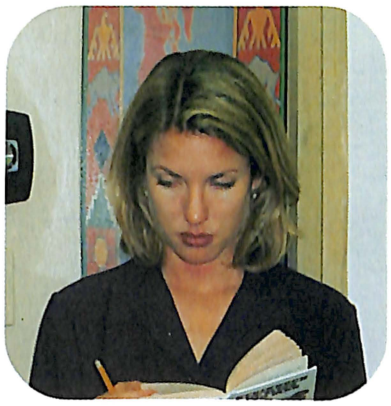

Looks can be decieving, stereotypes were proved wrong with the football team crushing the Napa Indians at homecoming, the sophomores coming in first place in izzy dizzy at WNJ, and the boy's showing no fear by dressing up as cheerleaders during the mock funeral.

On October 21st Wedensday night jam occured Freshman Ace StGermain threw 8 lemons out with his head."It's important that we have fun so we can relax later in life," said Freshman Jarom Hillery . The Sophomores won this event .

From new teachers beginning their career, and creating a new atmosphere in classroom. Seniors got to choose the color of their caps and gowns. It was no longer the tradition of girl's wearing gold and guy's wearing purple

An important aspect that was accomplished in the 1999 school year was that the student body had one goal and that was to

PROVE THE UNESTABLISHED.

As a generation represented by X, we had to prove ourselves as Leaders, Achievers, and Creators. DeAndria Graham a dedicated senior said," Wild teenagers, is what adults see us as. I'm going to become a doctor to prove them wrong." Proving that the sky is not the limited but the much farther depths of the universe were was a main goal of the students.

Grasping for new unique ideas didn't have students falling back in fear but it gave everyone a willingness and interest in learning.

Cheerleading is no longer just a girl's sport, Dan Garcia and Mike Clagg proved that.

Football was no longer just a guy's sport, Emily Sundblad put on full gear to play football. Seniors and juniors took the role of mentors linked up with the freshman class to help them gain an understanding of high school life.

Generation X learned to deal with stereotypes that surrounded their every move as they strived for their goals. Showing we only wanted the best for our community. In Fact we had taught the people of this community to

DOUBT THE UNCERTAIN.

Coaches put 110% in their teams and players put in a solid 210%. The old motto hard work pays off is what senior Kalei Colridge believed in, "Practice started a week before school started and with super swimmers we got better and better. "Which in turn gained them a MEL championships win.

Throughout the year the strong family pride at Armijo proved all the stereotypes that surrounded our school wrong. The only thing that did not change was to

EXPECT THE UNEXPECTED

Attentively listening to the pep talk Coach Evens was speaking to the varsity boy's soccer team. Junior Jim Bosch said, "When we started this year no one believed that we would do as well as we did this season." The boy's came in 4th place in MEL's.

For every action there is a reaction, we are primary examples of that concept. During the school year we put in tons of effort to getting things done. From producing good grades by comprehending details in the classroom to the girl's waterpolo team winning the MEL title with a 10-0 record.

Football Homecoming

Homecoming lit up the night of October 23rd. With the theme "All Around the World" the anticipation was pure joy waiting for the excitement to begin. The week began with sunglasses day on Monday, and it continued with events like Wednesday night jam, homecoming court elections and finally the big game Friday night. As the mourners at the mock funeral paraded down the hallways of Armijo High School wailing shouts of sorrow, students would gather at the doors decked out in their Hawaiian clothes to show their support and spirit.

As the game began the excitement was felt by both the crowd and the players. Armijo was going up against the Napa Indians. The final score of the game was 29-27. "It was nice to see Armijo finally win a game, even though my boyfriend was hurt on the side line. Plus I saw old friends I have not seen in a while," commented Andremica Mcfadden.

The floats were a highlight of the game that night. Laura Valcarcel worked on the sophomore float. "It was a lot of fun and hard work," she said, "It gave me a lot of stress, but it paid off because we won in the end." Besides the four class floats, the key club, drama club and AFS also added floats. Some of the entries included the senior rendition of "Its a Small World" and the juniors "Jungle safari." In the end the sophomore float won with their description of passport to the tropicana.

At halftime anticipation filled the air. Homecoming attendants were escorted in convertibles to the stage set up on the track. "I was glad to be chosen out of my class to be an attendant and I was exited for myself and all of the others ," said Jayme Andrews. The 1998 King and Queen were announced, Kristen Aberson and B.J. Pomeroy won. "It was cool that my girlfriend and I won king and queen, it was something that I will never forget".

The seniors cheered as their float passed by the 50 yard line. "I really wanted to be on the float," said Ernesto Villanueva. They had created miniature replicas of The Great Wall of China, Egyptian pyramids, and the Taj Mahal. Seniors on the float also dressed in clothes from around the world.

The sophomore class received first place in the float competition . "It was a good experience, we all put a lot of time into it, even though our palm tree caught on fire! And in the end all of our hard work payed off because we got first place," said Marrissa Sponholz.

This years homecoming king and queen were B.J. Pomeroy and Kristen Aberson. "I was so happy that B.J. and I won! It was the perfect night," said Kristen. The couple was excited to have the honor of winning the homecoming court.

Rachel Curtis and Danny Wells were the sophomore attendants. "I didn't think I would win so when they called my name I was surprised," commented Rachel. Excitement was one of the many feelings that the winners experienced.

The freshman float was entitled Arabian Nights. "I enjoyed working on our float. Since it was our first year we still didn't know what we were doing," said Laura Wolman. On homecoming day many students came out to help build the floats.

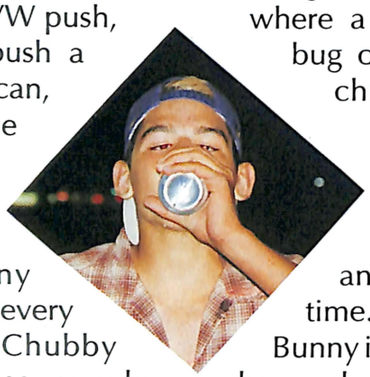

As the sun towered over their jungle backdrop Jane and Tarzan danced around the in the scenery. "It was fun to dress up like Tarzan and run around," said Brad Burzynski. The juniors got second place for their float.

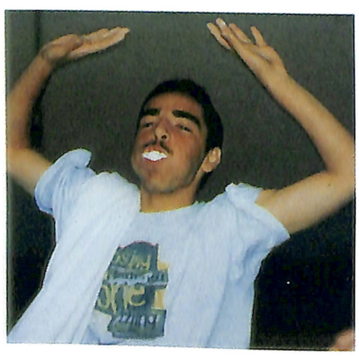

Deana Chiodo and Nick Burton won freshman attendants. "It was fun to be part of the festivities, it was hard to fill out those questionnaires," said Nick. The nominees answered questions that were read at the assembly.

CompetinG

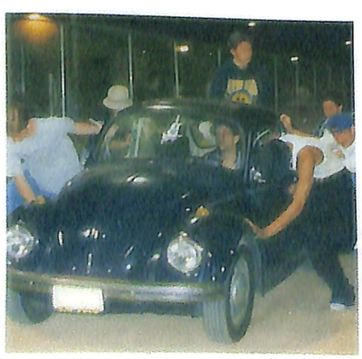

Wednesday night jam was one of the many events put on during homecoming week. It is a time of fun, friends, and wacky games. Students from all four classes meet on the football field where the event committee had spent a lot of time setting up for the night. The games included the VW push, where a team of ten people must push a bug on the track as fast as they can, chubby bunny, where one person starts off with one marshmallow in their mouth and says chubby bunny and then adds a marshmallow every time. "My favorite event was Chubby Bunny it was so funny watching those people, how embarrassing," said Nicole Anderson.

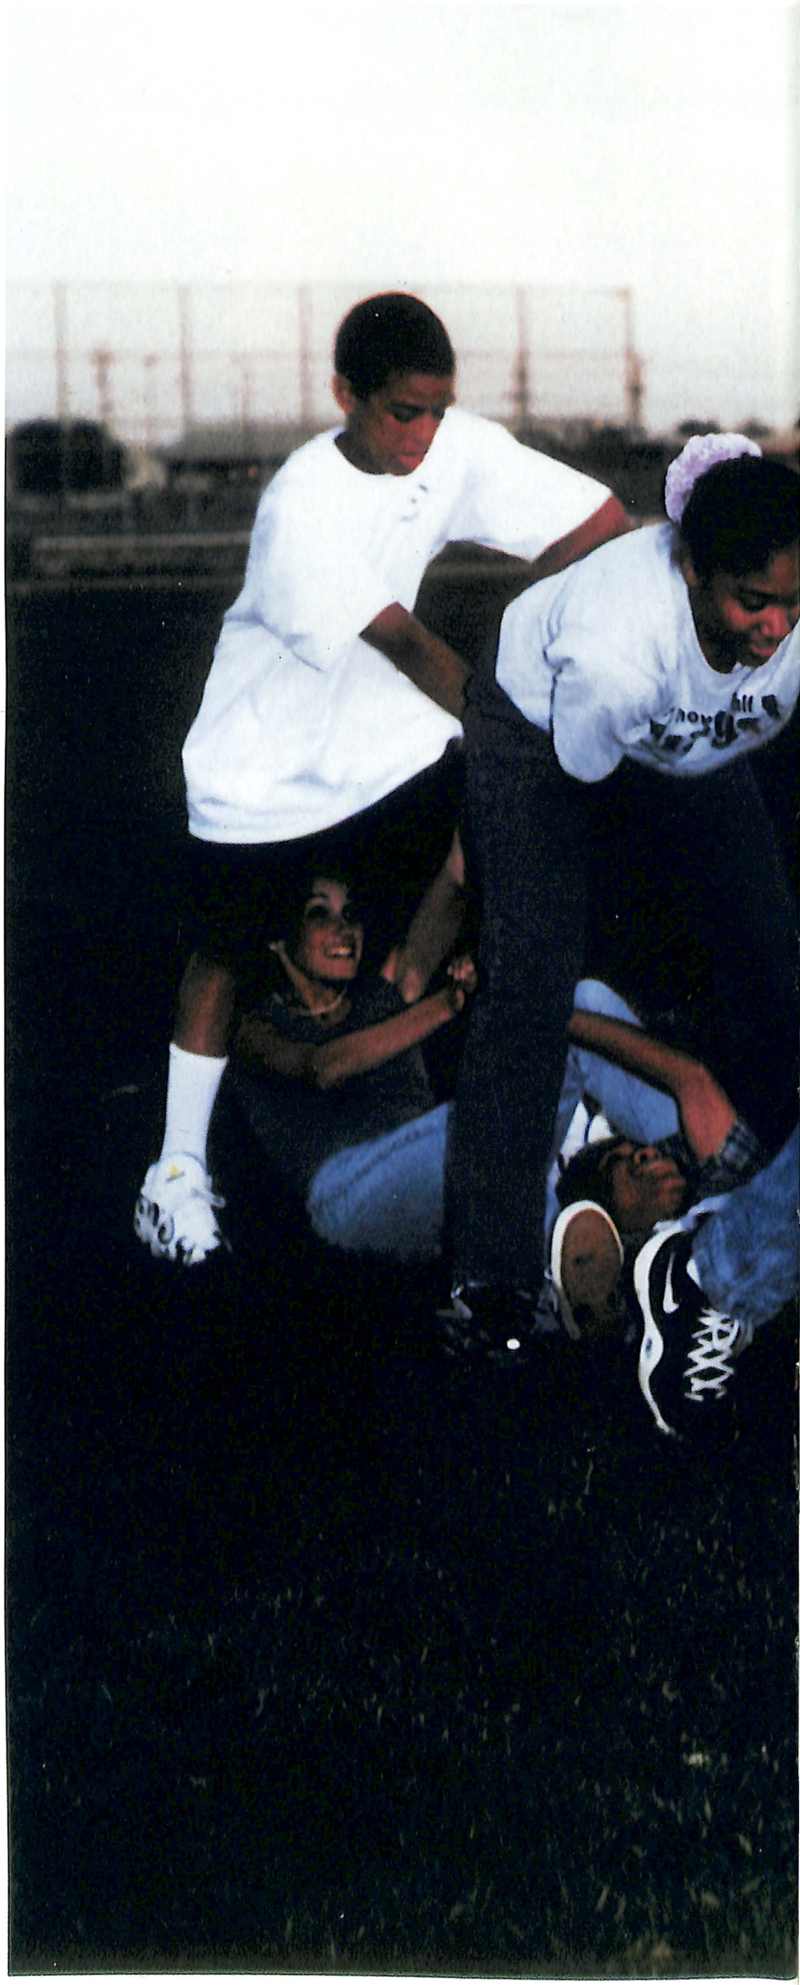

As the games came to an end there was only one question to be answered - who won? This year the senior class came in first place. There was fierce competition by the sophomores. In tug-of-war the seniors and the sophomore battled head to head until finally the seniors won. "The seniors rock! Wednesday night jam is always a blast," said senior class president Sean Almeida. Everyone agreed that Wednesday night jam was one of the major highlights of the weeks festivities. "It was fun for me because I got to watch all of the people who came out to show their spirit," commented Sheena Julian.

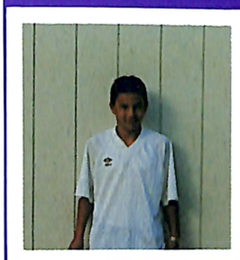

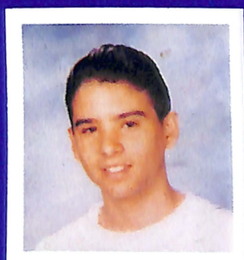

What is your dream job and why?

"I would be a lawyer because that is what my father does and I want to follow in his footsteps."
-Matthew Talley

"My dream job would be a doctor because I want to help the sick people and make them happy again."
-Pamela Fish

"I would be a missionary in a foreign country to meet new people, new adventures, and share my faith."
-Kimber Conklin

"I would be a football player because I have been doing that all my life and want to make tons of money. I would be a quarterback."
-Lucas Ostrout

The junior's raced to finish skin the snake, one of the twelve events of the night. "It was fun to participate in the games, it has become a yearly tradition," said Ryan Sweeney. The Juniors took first in this event.

Nathania Lozda carefully wrapped her fellow calssmate in toilet paper for the Mummy Wrap. "The toilet paper kept on ripping and falling off," she said. In order to win the participats body had to be completely covered in toilet paper.

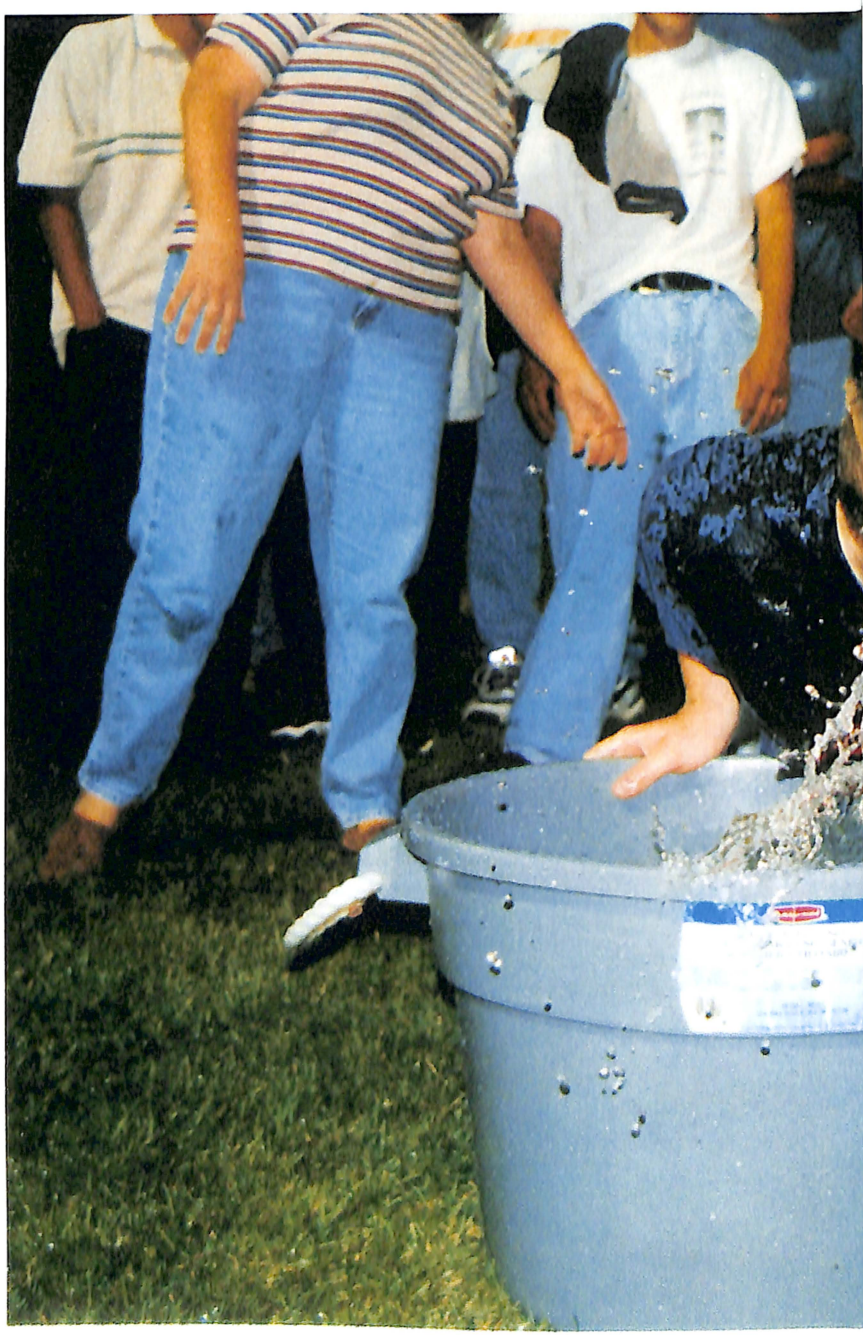

Michelle Smith participated in the licorice rope race with her partner Chris Maddox. "After is was over I felt like throwing up. I've never eaten that much licorice before," said Michelle. The class of 2002 came in first place.

The senior class battled it out with the juniors in a game of tug-of-war. Michelle Martin commented, "It was a lot of fun because it brought everyone together. We had a lot of spirit." The seniors used their strength to capture the win.

Janela Rillo was the victor in the pie eating contest for the Freshmen class. "It was really fun, I would definitely do it again next year," said Janela. The game was really a trick played only on freshmen.

Junior Karl Miller got wet while participating in the bobing for lemons. "Bobbing for lemons and chubby bunny were the greatest events, they were the sloppiest," said Karl. Many events that night ended up being messy for the participants.

"Jonathen Jackson on General Hospital. He is so cute and hot. That would be my dream date."
-Michelle Lovrin

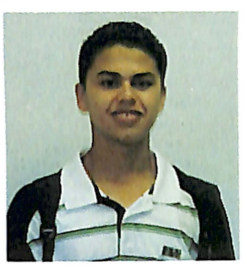

"Someone who is sweet, nice, caring, and thoughtful."
-Daryl Prestwich

What is your idea of a perfact or dream date?

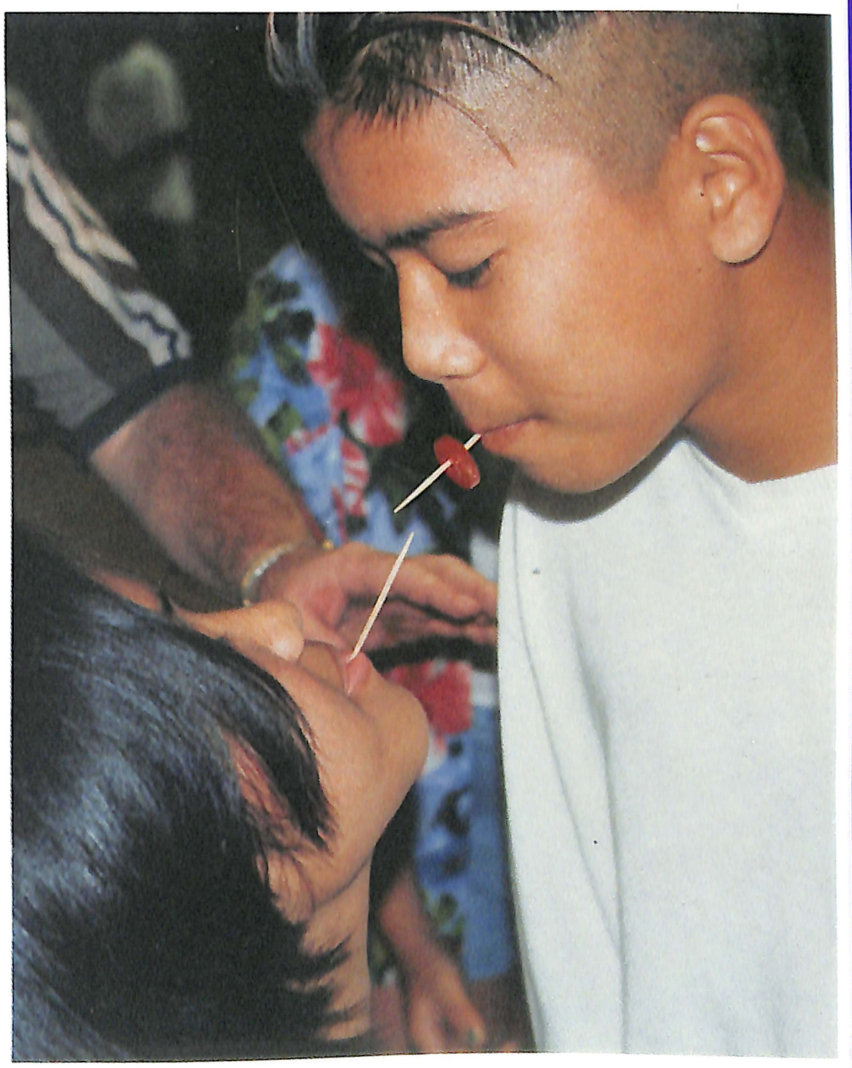

"My perfect date would be nice and caring and would not mind going to the movies with me."
-Miguel Saldana

"A romantic dinner at the beach with my boyfriend."
-Eva Lopez

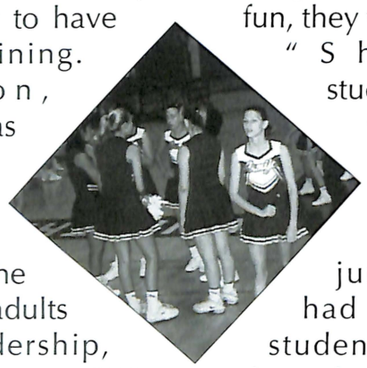

Sophomores Duy Le and Reena Retuta try to pass a lifesaver on toothpicks down a line of people. "I had a lot of fun doing it, I didn't think it was hard. More people should come out to Wednesday night jam next year," said Duy. Many of the events took a little skill in order to complete quickly.

Summer Camps

When the final bell rang on June 11, who some say marked the end of the school year, students started to prepare for the 1998-99 school year over their summer vacation. For many the lectures were not over, they had just begun. An understanding of extracurricular activities were broadened. They didn't get to sleep in or go out every day to have fun, they went to classes and or training. "Showing dedication, students gathered to create ideas for the new school year and improve outdated customs," commented Dana Carion.

From the jump shot to learning that adults had faith in our student leadership, students attended organized camps. "We always had something to do. We had to run from gym to gym to make it to the games," stated Sarah Gutierrez. They united together to improve Armijo's reputation. Not only did Armijo students unite with each other, but schools from all over California shared their dreams and aspirations for their schools.

It was obvious in this past year that the students who participated in summer camps lead the pack because they had extra practice time that others didn't. Armijo students gave their all to strive for the best. Putting their best effort in their work and nothing less. Armijo students did work to be proud of, and they were.

Leadership camp was a great learning experience for Ebony Freeman. "I never thought computers could teach me leadership skills. Technology is really expanding," commented Ebony. Only three students got to attend this camp over their summer vacation.

Cada camp was a fun experience for Brandon Stinnett and other Armijo students. "We had a lot of opportunities to work together and spend time with each other and students from other schools," said Brandon. Many friendships were established at camp this past summer.

Vanessa Van Seigman and the other drill team girls worked on dances over the summer at UC Davis. "We had a lot of fun. We learned more than we could have hoped for," said Vanessa. Our drill team here at Armijo put in more work for our enjoyment this past year.

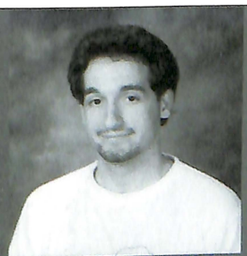

Cynthia Chong helped roll another student at a barbecue. "After all the hard work making a mock yearbook, we got down to the fun and games." At yearbook camp our award winning staff came together to produce ideas to beat other schools they competed against.

If you could change your name, what would you change it to?

"I wish I could have the name Mya. It is a unique name that I really like."
-Parveen Sandhu

"I would never change my name, thats what my mom wanted to call me and I respect that."
-Adam Webber

"I would change my name to Batman. So I could fight crime and save the world being a hero."
-Joey Cimo

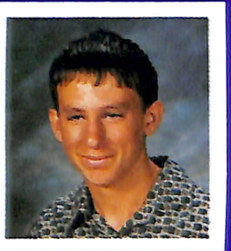

"I hate my name. If I could I would change my name in an instant, to anything!"
-Amanda Harris

"I plan to go to Med School to train and become a pediatrician or a surgeon."
- Jason Stahlberger

"I will be done with graduate school and supporting Sam Caddle."
- Hannah Birdsall

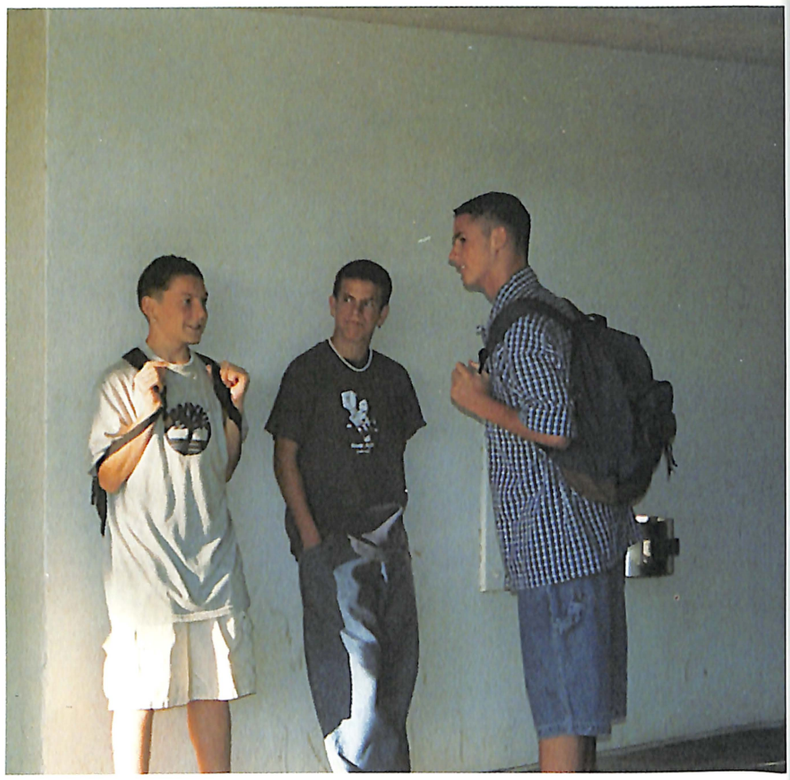

Where do you see yourself in 10 years?

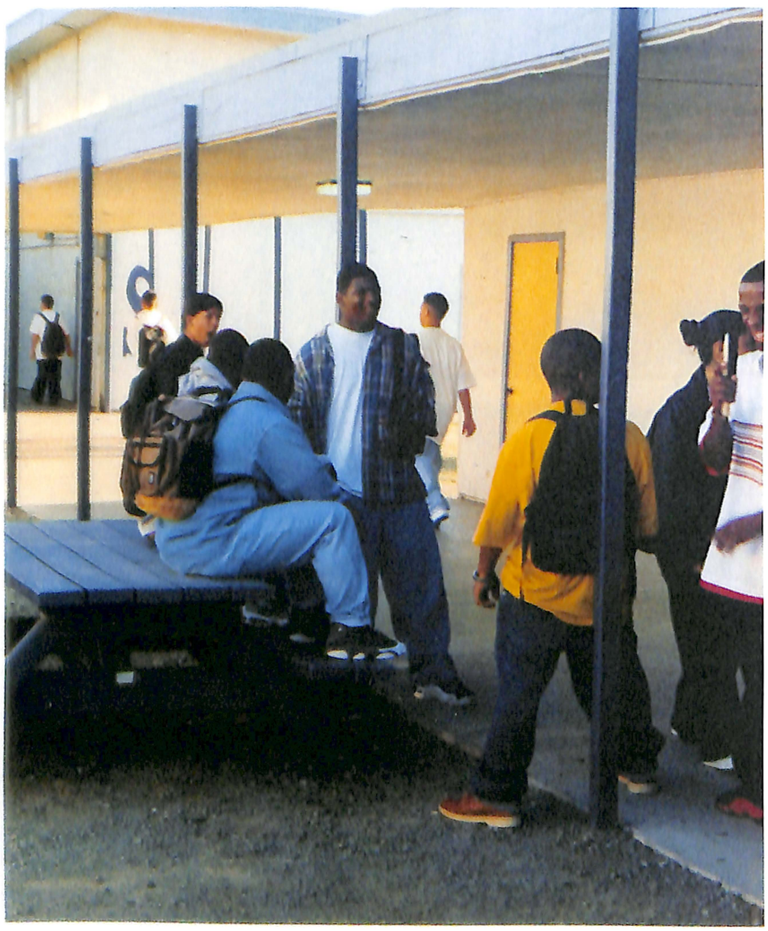

"I see myself as the head cook of a very fancy restraunt"
- Jenny Privatte

"I will have become the boss of all my friends and all my classmates."
- Justin Bramhall

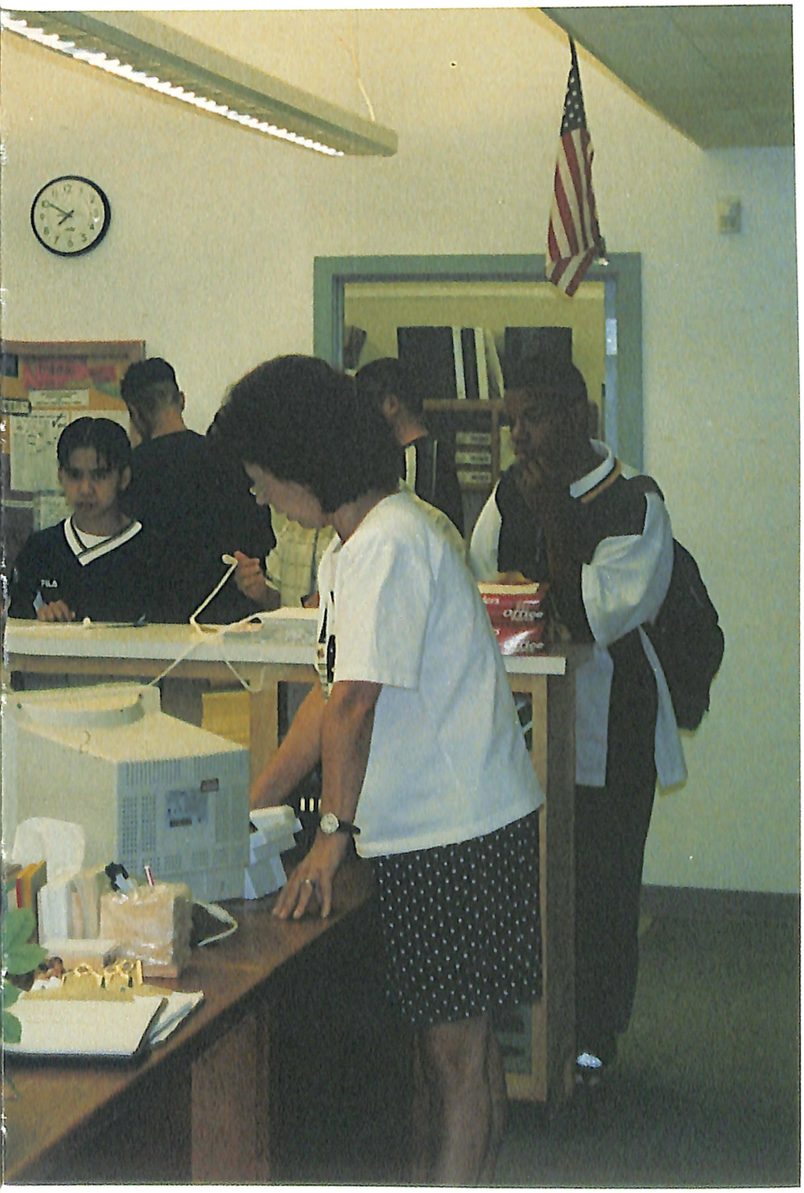

Mike Dean and his friends sat around the picnic table discussing their first day experiences. "I was not nervous on first day because I've been having first days for eleven years," said Mike. Most upperclassmen had gotten over the nerousness that comes with the start of a new school year.

First Day

Mike Harris hung out with some friends the morning of the first day of school. "I can't stand coming back," he said, "the summer seems to get shorter and shorter every year." Many students were wishing that their summer would have been just a little bit longer and school would have started a little later.

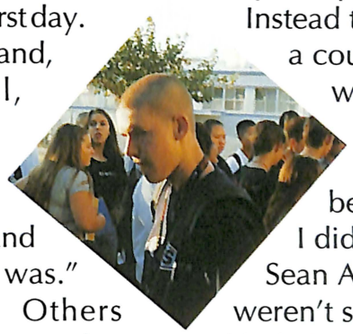

Samantha Mcgregor and a triena stood in the hallway before school comparing classes and teachers. "I really liked getting my schedule before school started, that way I had time to compare them with my friends," said Samantha. There was a lot of confusion with new teachers and lack of classrooms.

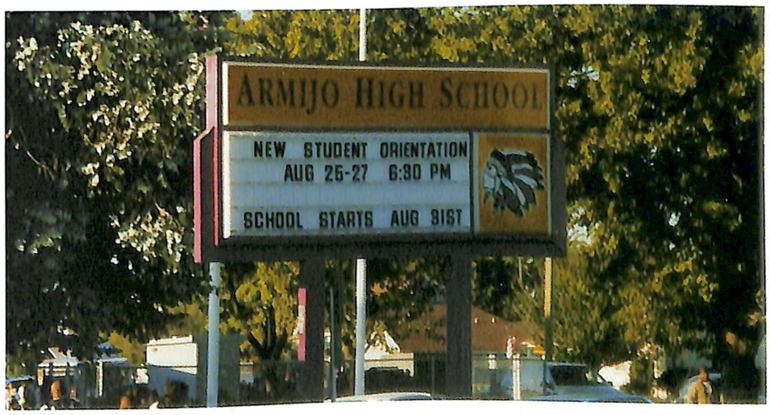

For the juniors and seniors it was just another day when the bell rang at 8:05 on August the thirty-first. As for the sophomores, they enjoyed the day, just glad that they were not freshman anymore. The freshmen were making their debut in high school. A new school, new people, and new schedules, is a lot to take in on one day.

This year students did not pick up their schedules on the first day. Instead they were given out beforehand, a couple weeks before school, which suited most people quite nicely. "I liked getting my schedule before school because I transferred here, and I didn't know where anything was." Sean Arvin commented. Others weren't so lucky. Many students were unhappy with their schedule, causing massive changes in classes, and long lines at the counselors office. Edwina Smith had this to say, "I was very angry about all the schedule changes. It would take a week or more if you wanted to change your classes, and then you might be changed again."

As the 2:57 bells rang to end the first day of school, students filed out of their sixth period class, they headed for their ride home. Many met their friends to discuss how their day went. "The first day was fun because I hadn't seen any of my friends since I left for L.A. over the summer," said Erin Patterson. Others just asked themselves, do I have to come back tomorrow?

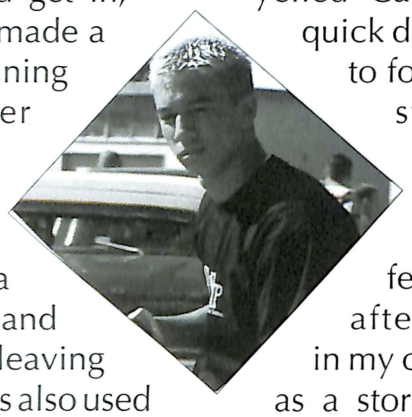

Junior Bonnie Huff stood in the long line of students in the counseling office. "I had to wait in line for thirty minutes just to get one class changed," exclaimed Bonnie. The attendance office was overloaded this year with requests from students wanting to change their schedule.

The marquee in front of school displayed news for new students. Orientation took place a couple days before the start of school. "After the orientation I felt more comfortable about coming to a new school", commented Tracey Hazen. Tracey came from Georgia because her Dad was reassigned to UC Berkeley.

Parking Lot

It was a mad rush to the parking lot as the lunch bell rang. Students with and without cars piled in hoping to escape the crowds and long lines at many fast food places. "Hurry up and get in," yelled Carl Miller to a friend as they made a quick dash for the line that was beginning to form at the gate.

Other students just used the parking lot as a place to park their car. "I only came into the parking lot a few times a day. Usually before and after school, coming to and leaving in my car," said Estela Guzman. It was also used as a storage center for students. Since the parking lot was located right between main campus and the annex it was perfect to use as a locker . "Ever since I got my license and my car, I went to the parking lot between every period to get my books," said Josh Fry.

Between periods the parking lot was almost as crowded as the halls. " In the lot I just kicked back and thought about the upcoming classes and what I needed to get done," said Jason Duval. It was one of the many hangout places during lunch, before and after school, and even during passing period. The parking lot was used for many things. It was place to park, socialize, and eat. People kept in mind that when the bell rang to leave, it was a jungle out there!!!

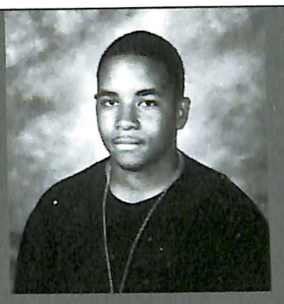

"I do not like the idea of Armijo going year round. I would miss the long summers."
-Amber Mullin

"I do not think we should have it. We have always been traditional and I think it is unfair to students!"
-Brandon Johnson

What do you think about Armijo going year round?

"I dont like the plan of going year round because we will have to work over the summer."
-Pao Thao

"I think the district needs to find a way to deal with the situation better and find another solution to the problem."
-Ali Ries

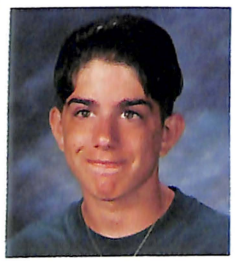

Bryanna Burke and her friends prepared to catch the incoming football. "When people played sports during the lunch period it made it an exciting place to be," commented Bryanna Burke. Many student played games such as soccer or football, in the parking lot before and after school.

At lunch, juniors Caryn Meager and Marcus Burton ate next to a friends car. "The parking lot is a place for me to relax and hang out with my friends during lunch," said Marcus. Many students ate their lunches in the parking lot. On warm days some people even brought out lawn chairs to sit on.

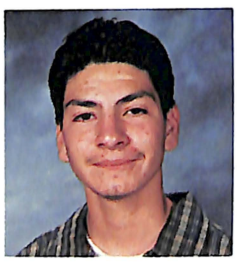

"I would live in Hawaii because there is a lot of sun, fun and a lot of stuff to discover."
-Elliot McNelis

"I would live in South Korea because I would want to be close to my family and be able to learn more about the culture and the language."
-Michelle Martin

If you could live anywhere in the world, where would you live and why?

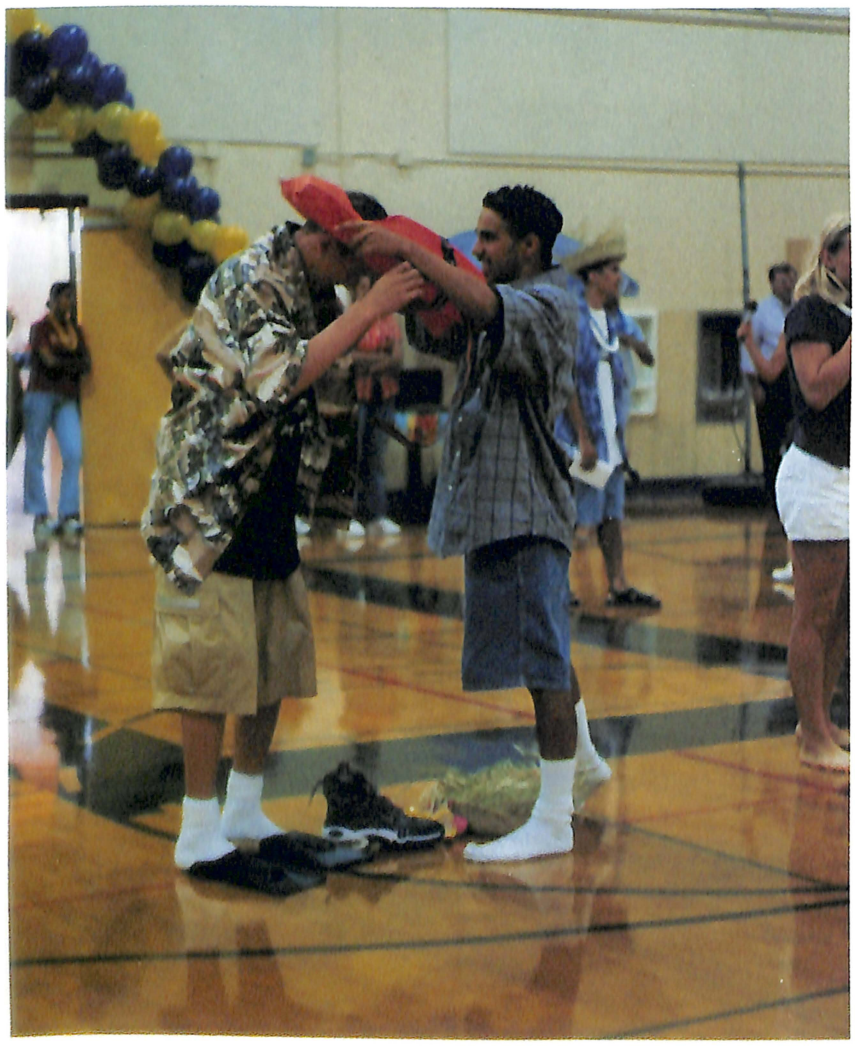

"I would live in the Philippines because most of my family are there and the country is dope."
-Elizabeth Roses

"I would live in Italy, because I am fascinated with the architecture and the history that they have."
- Diego Frias

James Pardi helped his teammate put on all of his beach gear at a rally this year. "I think we did a good job of getting everyone involved. Things were always moving and there was never a time with nothing to do," said James. The rally committee put a lot of effort in to all of the rallies this year.

Rallies

What is the purpose of a rally? To boost school spirit, but most of all to have a lot of fun. Well we have certainly done that this year. We were hoping that the first rally was not a wash out, after all it was set at the beach, but it was far from it. "It was the best rally I have seen in a long time." Commented Mr. Lanphier at the end of the rally.

The rally committee, headed by Bryanna Nethery, organized an interesting display of spelling out AHS in human bodies. However at times it did look a bit dangerous. "It might have been dangerous but I wanted some originality," commented Mike Cook. Mike did most of the flying during that skit.

Then on October 1st the Fall sports rally took place. The theme was Octoberfest. Bales of hay and students in overalls set the scene. All of the fall sports teams were introduced, then the teams competed in a Tug-O-War against each other. After this display of strength the Armijo dance and drill team performed a dance which was followed by the cheerleaders. Then for the grand finale the classes competed against each other in a plastic sheet race where they had to unravel a sheet of plastic to cover their class. "This year the rallies have been really good, and have promoted a great amount of spirit," commented Raychel Palfey after the fall sports rally.

Students had to unroll a sheet of plastic to cover their whole class. "The rallies have been a lot better this year, the games get everyone involved," said Caryn Meagher. This year the rally committe organized many fun and interesting games for the students to participate.

Armijo soccer and football teams battled it out in a game of tug-of-war. "We hadn't really gone into the contest expecting to win, and there was some talk of dropping the rope," said soccer player Jim Bosh. The water polo, volleyball, crosscountry, and track teams also participated.

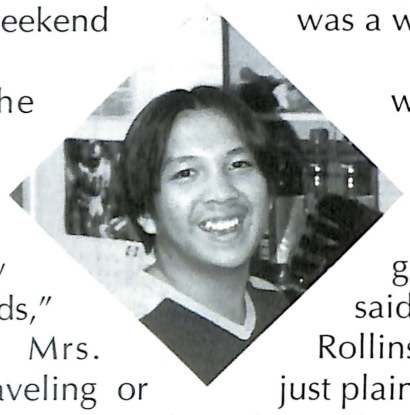

As the main attraction for the "Back to the Beach" rally Mike Cook and partners spelled out the letters AHS in human bodies in the center of the floor. "I wanted to be origional and make the it more realistic. I'm sure that the crowd liked my cannonball," said Mike Cook. There were many skits put on at other Rallies.

The water polo team ran out during the fall sports rally. Hannah Otto commented, "The water polo team was a lot of fun this year and we won the M.E.L's for the first time which was a great accomplishment." The rally was to honor the teams that played fall sports.

Weekends

On Friday afternoon students began to prepare for their weekend. The weekend was the time off from the regular weekday to catch up on all that had been put off. "The weekend was all I thought about during the school week," said senior Sylvia Chavez. For all students the weekend was a welcomed event.

The weekends were days when students and teachers did what they pleased. "I love to play with my grandchildren on the weekends," said junior class counselor Mrs. Rollins. Shopping, exercising, traveling or just plain relaxing was on the students agenda during their weekend. Most just wanted to get away from it all. With some of the rigorous courses that the students had, a break was always needed.

For some, Saturdays and Sundays may not have been all fun and games. "Every weekend you'll find me at work for hours," junior Brandon Osborne commented. In a way, working had its good and bad incentives. Money, of course, was the good part. However students had less time to have fun. Students felt as though they were more independent having a source of income of their own. "I don't mind working even if it is during the weekend because it always beats asking my parents for money," replied senior Issac Bartsch.

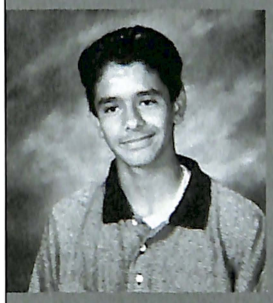

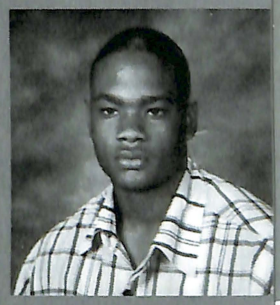

"I show pride at each and every school event including in my classes."
-Renato Calderon

"By going to the rallies and simply being here."
-Miriam Johnson

How do you show your school spirit?

"I wear purple pants and an Armijo shirt to show my school spirit."
-Selene Solis

"By being the good football player that I am. I feel that is showing great school spirit."
-Sydney Dickerson

Senior Chris Claus ironed his clothes so he would look good. "I was getting ready for Carl Miller's party but it was weak!" Many students had to complete their household chores on the weekend before they could go out and enjoy the evenings.

Working at Foot Locker along with everything else, made things complicated for Melanie Ravara. "It was difficult to balance my time between everything I had to do between school, activities, and a job." Like most people Melanie preferred not to work on the weekend.

"My favorite quote is love your neighbor as you love yourself. It has a personal meaning."
-Orin Wakefield

"Eww!!! Foul!!! I use this because some people at Armijo are really gross."
-Jamie Cullum

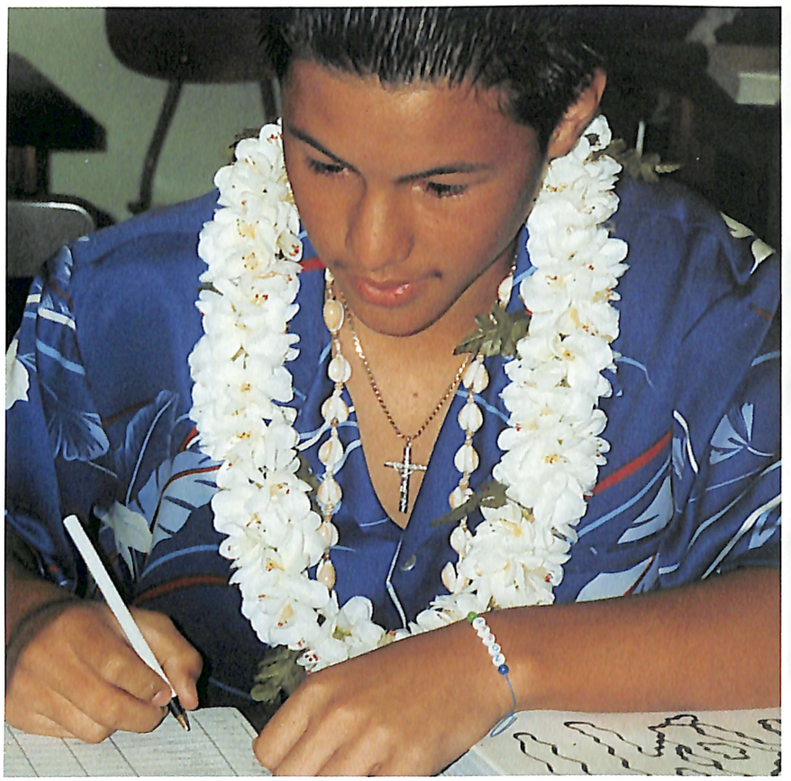

What is your favorite quote or saying and why?

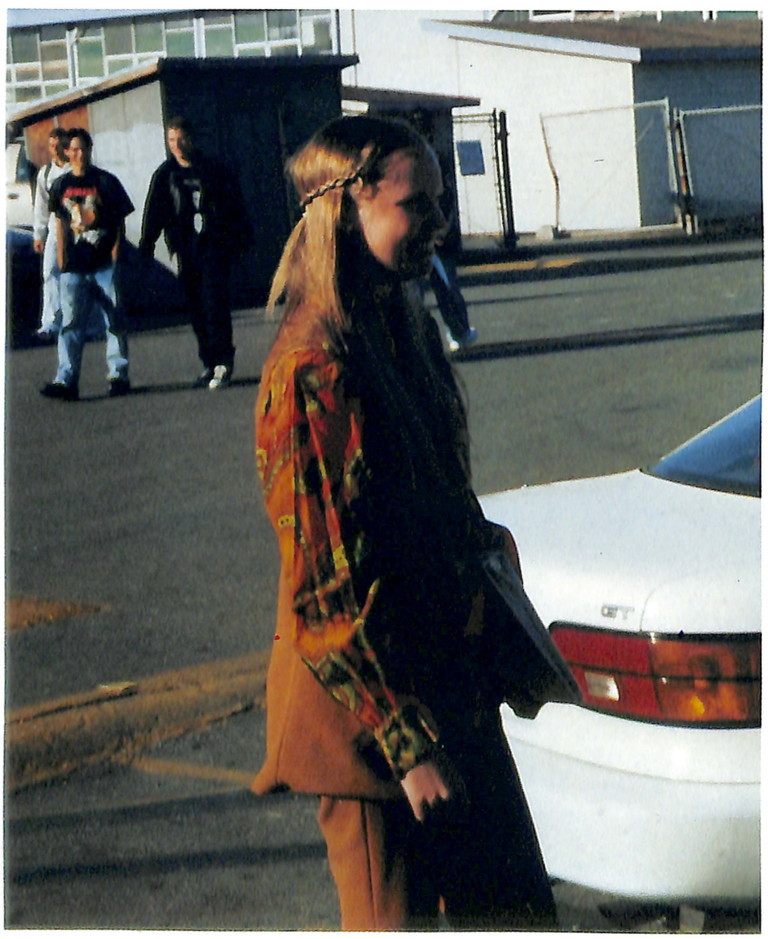

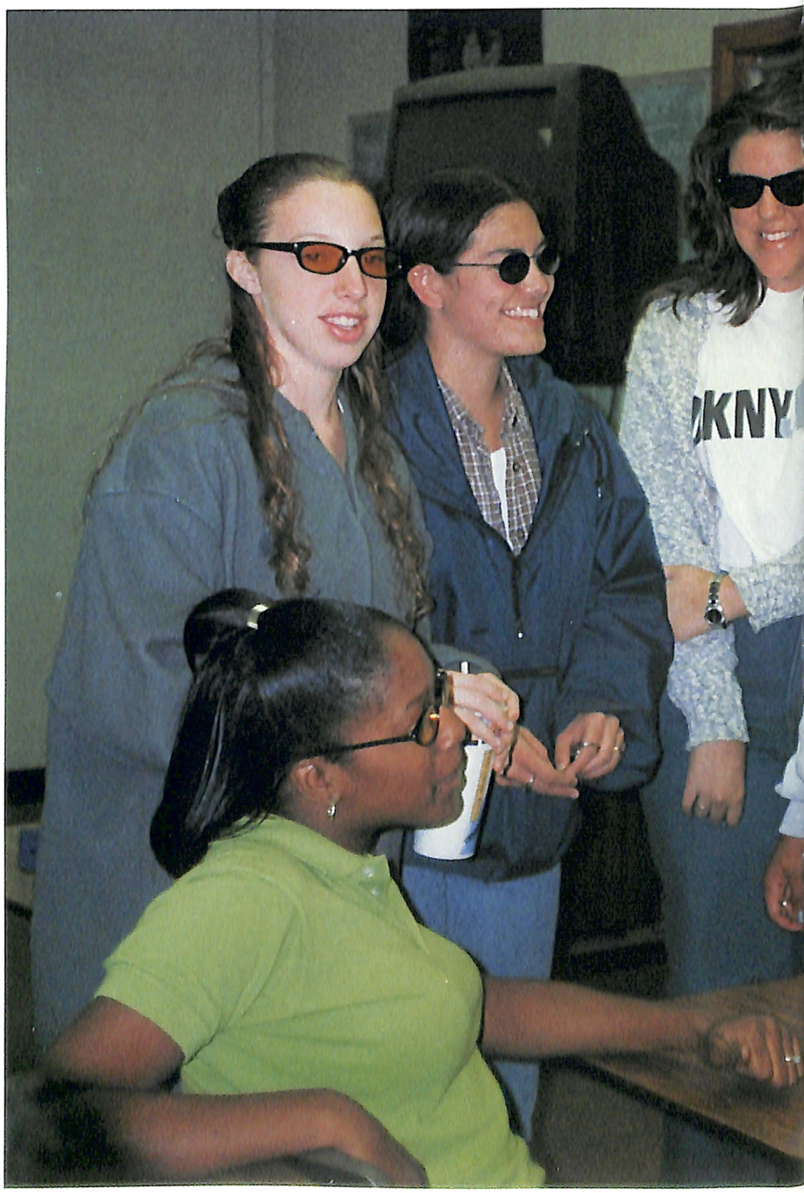

"Bite me!!! It seems to represent my attitude lately. People are really ticking me off."
-Katie Lynch

"Showtime!!! When I play a sport I say that because they have some compition going on."
-Timothy Harlan

Amber Stephens dressed up for 70's day during spirit week. "It was fun acting like a kid again since we are supposed to act mature all of the time. It is good to get a break from it all," commented Amber.

Dress-up Days

When you came to school the week of October 19-23 you might of noticed something a little different. Students could be found wearing their parents old cloths or their favorite Hawaiian shirts. Dress up days were one of the many ways for Armijo students to show their spirit around school during homecoming week. The days included sunglasses day, seventies day, Hawaiian day, pajama day, and the traditional purple and gold day.

Since there was no twin day this year many friends decided to buy matching pajamas or sunglasses. Twin day had always been a tradition until this year when the spirit committee decided to change it. "My friends and I went out and bought yellow shirts and matching yellow sunglasses for Monday," Carolyn Kwok.

Even the teachers got involved in the dress up festivities, and dug out some of their old seventies cloths from the bottom of their closets. "I like getting involved with the school and what is going on with the students, " said Mr. Harrison. Students enjoyed seeing the teachers show their spirit and dress in cloths that were not so normal for them. It was a great week to show the school that we had spirit, plus it was fun to see everyone dress in outfits that we don't normally see them in.

Aaron Liutao worked on some class work while showing some Hawaiian spirit. "I dressed up because I'm Hawaiian and we just got back from Hawaii where I got all these clothes and stuff," said Aaron. Hawaiian day was one of the most popular days, because almost everyone could find a Hawaiian shirt.

Raychel Palfey and Katrina Bjhur dressed up as twins for sunglasses day. "I couldn't find anything to wear that day so I decided to dress up, and Katrina and I had these shirts from twin day last year so we thought it would be cute to wear them," said Raychel. Most students picked a day to dress as twins.

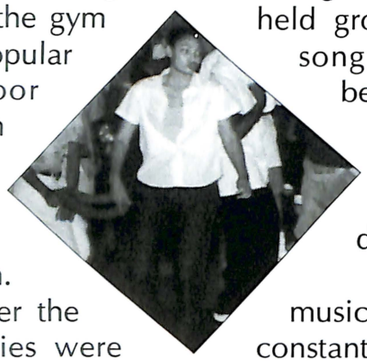

Kendra Griffen and her friends wore their sunglasses during one of the spirit days. "I wanted to dress up to show my school spirit. Plus it was my last year so I thought I might as well," said Kendra. Sunglasses day, which was on Monday, was one of the easiest to participate in for most students.

Students walked down the hall during homecoming week dressed in their pajamas. "I decided to dress up because I wanted to show school spirit as a senior, and also I rarely get a chance to be comfortable and wear my pj's to school," said Nicole Montilliano. Many seniors felt the same way.

Groovin'

A fantastic way to escape the chaos from school was to attend the dances held by Armijo. Many had different reasons to attend the dance. "I like getting together with friends and dancing," said Meghan Kelly. At all of the dances the gym held grooving students. When the popular song came on, the dance floor became a packed with grinding bumping and youths. "Anything I think of is the way I dance," said Ashley Erwin.

Whether the music was rock and roll or rap, bodies were constantly moving. If a song was played that one did not like, they could retreat to the snack bar or the bleachers. "I sat on the bleachers to rest my feet," said Michele Woodruff. The snack bar provided drinks and snacks to revive students, it is one of the busiest places in the dance (besides the dance floor). A fun and interesting thing to do was watch other people groove. Breakdancing has been around for years but it still drew a crowd. Whether you were dancing or just watching, breakdancing was entertaining.

When it was all over, sweaty and exhausted students made their way toward the exits. "I thought it was cool at the dances. You could feel the music from the entrance as you come and go," said Phillip Johnson. The time of fun and socializing has came to an end. We all looked forward to the next time we can groove at Armijo.

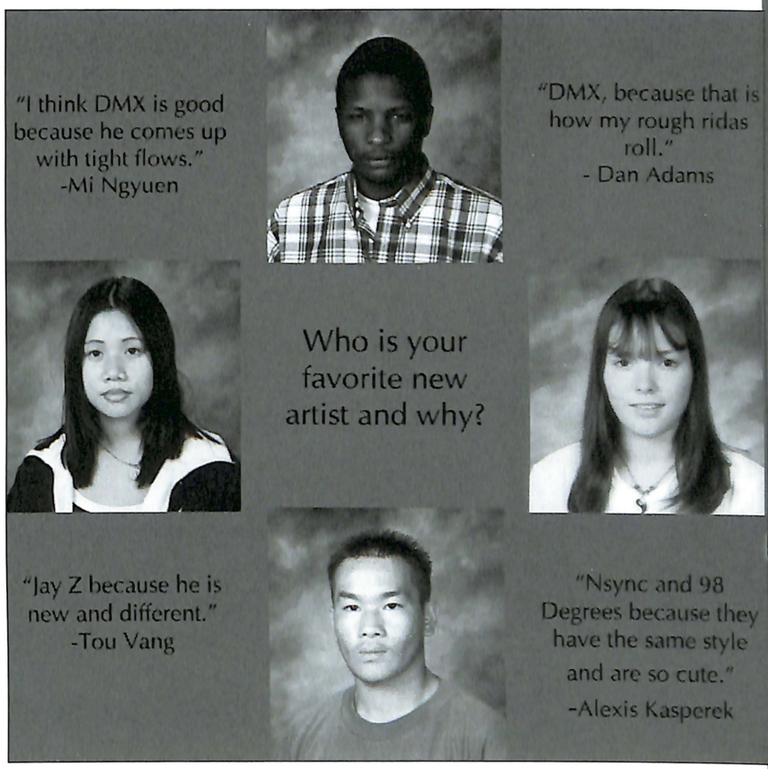

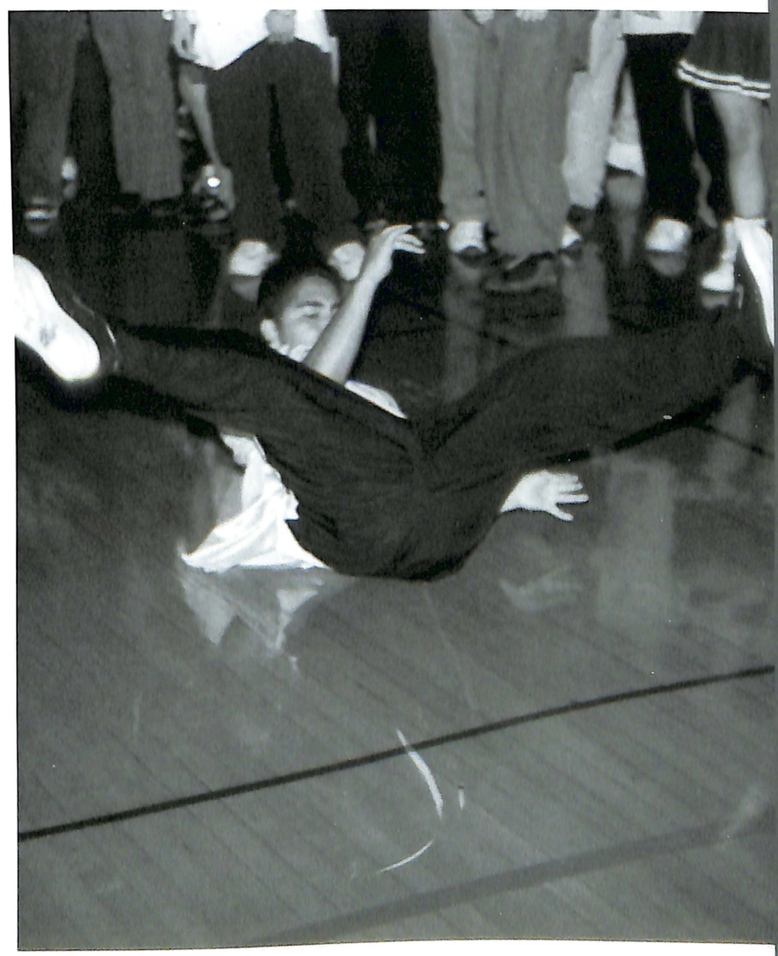

Group dancing was a small part of what went on at the dances. "My favorite thing at the dances was being able to hang out with friends and having a good time," said Kristina Jewell. Kristina was a faithful helper at the Sadie Hawkins dance.

All types of dancing were done at the dances. "I like to breakdance because i fine it to be a challenge for me," said Isaias Vaca. Breakdancing was the most popular among dancers and also the most enjoyable for spectators to watch.

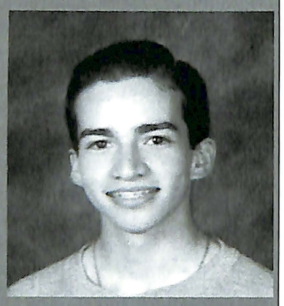

"My biggest regret is that I went to Great America and did not go on extreme flying."
- John Kelly

"I dont regret anything because I have leared from all my mistakes, but if I could I would make a bigger effort to be involved with school and meet more people."
-Jamie Mitchelle

What is your biggest regret?

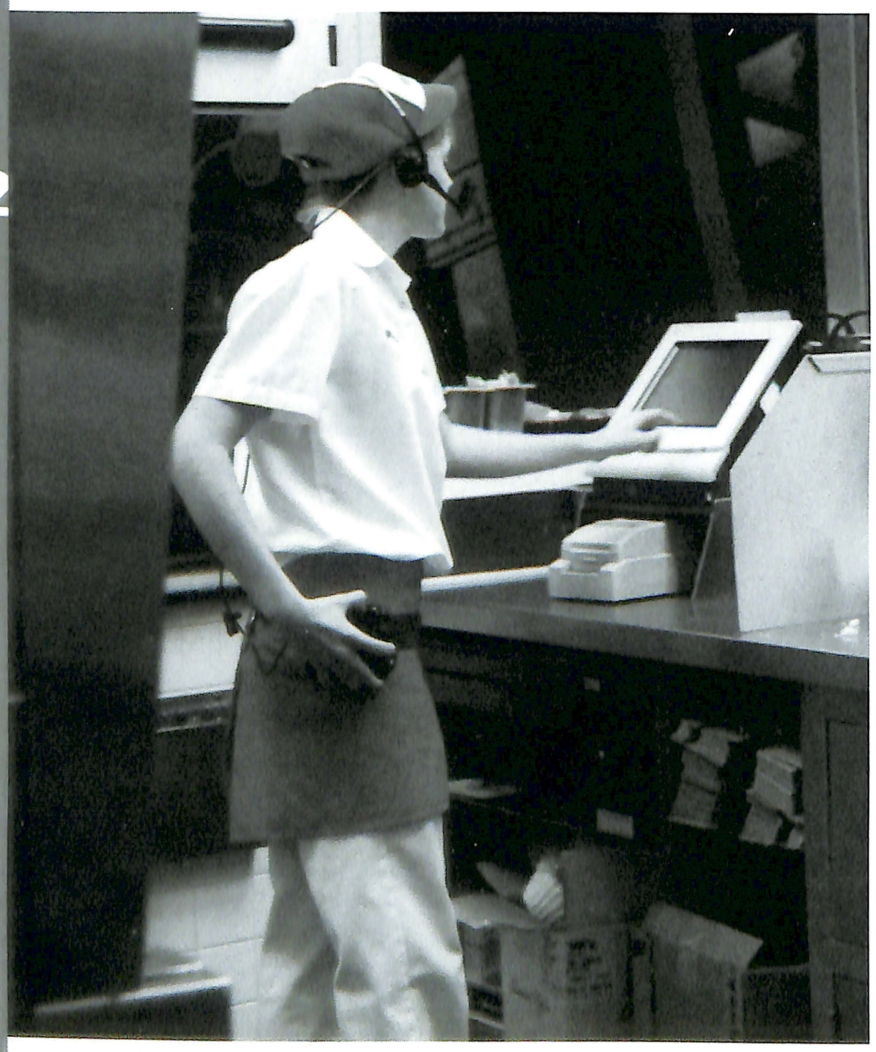

"My biggest regret is that I really did not try my hardest in most of my classes my freshman year.I should have tried harder."
- Dania Mallette

"I feel that I have lived a good life, some things I wish I could do over again, but I have no real regrets."
- Rodrigo Susperreguy

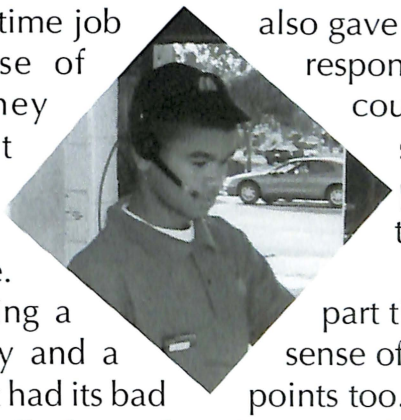

Shannon Harris took a customer's order at In and Out. "I like to work here because I like the people I work with," commented Shannon. In and Out provided a fun work place for many other Armijo High students. Working with friends was an added benefit.

Making Money

From time to time Armijo students reached a point in time when pocket change and allowances were no longer cutting it. It was time to get a job. Students who reached this point took jobs mostly because of the extra money, but others took them to feel more in independent and to prove they could make it on their own.

Taking a part time job also gave Armijo students a sense of responsibility. It proved that they could take on more than just school work it shows to their parents and to themselves that they were responsible.

Although taking a part time job gave you extra money and a sense of independence, it had its bad points too. For one it took up most or all of your free time especially if you work on the weekends. Leaving almost no time for friends. " I don't get to see my friends as much as I used to. " said Ian Barney. Another bad point of taking a part time job is that it affects your school. Especially since most students took part time jobs after school, which could and have taken up most of the homework and study time. "It does not really take up time, it just means you have to manage time better. You also might to sacrifice a little sleep to stay up and do your homework," commented Kristin Sukeforth.

Although part time jobs had some bad points getting your pay check made it all worth while.

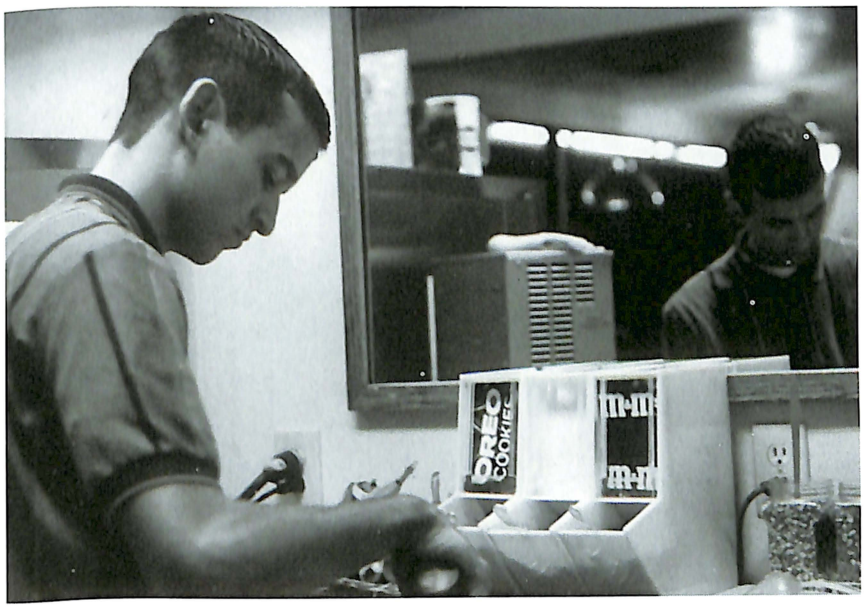

Jennifer Derewsky and Krystal Swarzbach take orders for pizzas at Mary's Pizza shack. "I have been a hostess there for a year now, I get along with all of my coworkers, especially Krystal, who goofs off a lot like me," said Jennifer. It was fun for a lot of people to work at a place with their friends.

Isaac Bartsch taught swim lessons at Allen Witt swimming pool every other day after school " I Like working at the pool because I enjoy working with children," said Isaac. Isaac has been teaching at the pool for almost seven months.

Kristi Lanflisi checks the price on a bag of cereal while working at Raleys. " I started working my junior year to pay for my car. Plus I like having the extra money to spend," said Kristi. Many students got jobs to help their parents pay for a car and gas money.

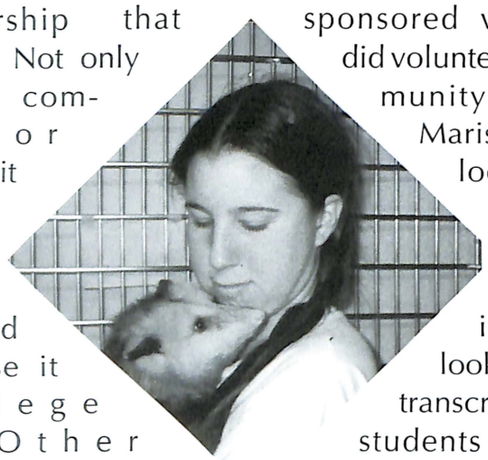

Adam Gross made a Blizzard for a customer. "I've been yelled at by customers of all race, age, and creed. I've also learned the important role that a mop plays in our society," commented Adam. Having jobs during school taught students a lot about responsibility and managing time.

Community Service

The student body of Armijo was very active. There were clubs such as Key Club, AFS, and Leadership that sponsored volunteer work. Not only did volunteering help our community but as Junior Marissa Byrne states, it looks good for college. "I chose to be involved in Key Club because it looks good on college transcripts." Other students felt that there was something that needed to be done and they were the ones to do it. "I would like to give back to the community," commented Freshman Janella Rilla. Patrick Tobin states, "I think that Fairfield should be cleaner than it is now. The community should be getting involved." Patrick was a new member of in Key Club. To be in Key Club you had to have at least two service hours a month. Leadership was also very involved. The members were required to do one community service project a semester to get a passing grade.

Although each student volunteered for a different reason, each ended up helping themselves, and others, to feel good. Armijo was known for their helping hands and the dedication that the students showed.

Key clubbers picked up cans for the Canned Food Drive. "I am involved because I get to meet new people and it is fun to help others," said Junior Jennifer Stokes. Key Club awarded points to each first period class based on quantity.

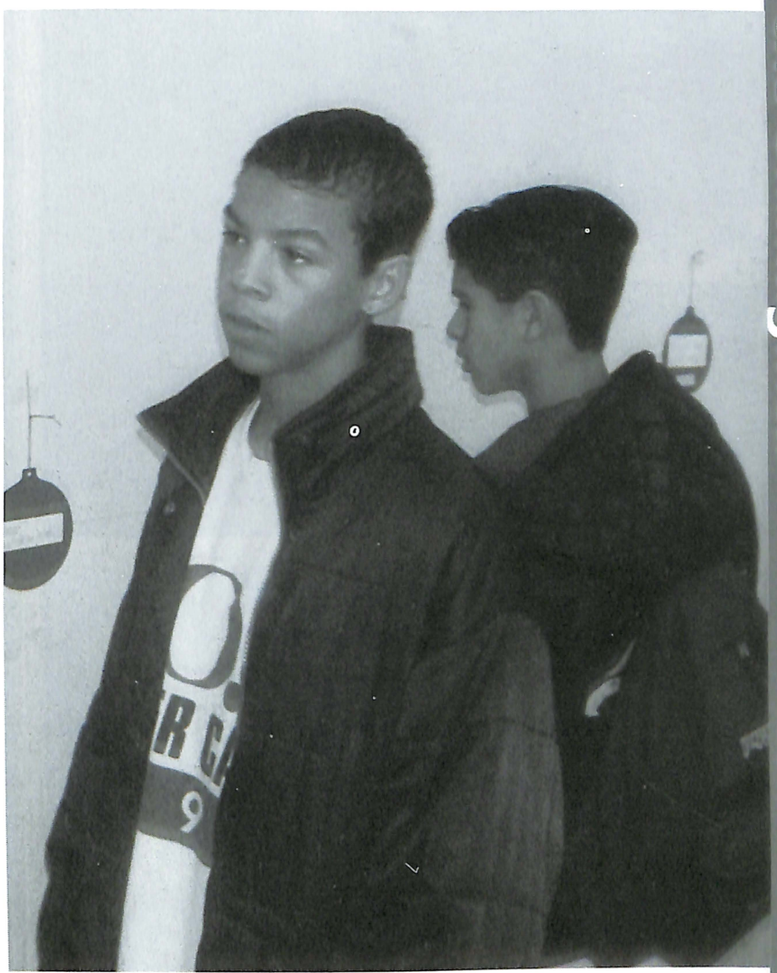

Carolyn Diermier carefully checked the toys collected by Leadership. "I do it because it is the best way to help out the community," she commented. Armijo helped the community by filling close to two hundred wishes of underprivileged teens.

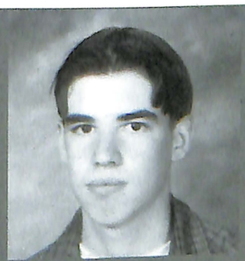

Priya Panderangi prepared cribs for the babies soon to be delivered. "I like volunteering at the hospital because I feel that it is a good experience for me since I want to go into the medical field." Priya filled the bins with blankets, towels, and diapers for the new babies.

Leadership students helped boys and girls from around Solano County by buying gifts for them. "I volunteered to help the community the best way I can," commented Renato Calderan. Armijo leadership sponsored 200 kids from the angel tree.

Rachael Bertram has been deadly during her competitions on the frozen waters. "My teamates are great. I love them all, but I love the rush during the competitions," she said with a laugh. Racael has achieved the admiration of her coaches, as well as her friends, for her dedication to her sport.

Extreme Sports

Despite the regular action in most sports, some students at Armijo preferred a tougher challenge. These are only some of the students who have explored the thrills of the hard-core action in various sports not made for the inexperienced.

Freshman Rachael Bertram has participated in the extreme of hockey. "Well, I liked hockey`s competition, it was very intense." Aggressive rollerblading Sophomore Shaun Meadows said, "It's a challenge and you can still be able to chill with your homies." Fellow Sophomore Jacob Duran participated in the extreme as a kickboxer. "I did it because I wanted to learn a sense of discipline."

Junior Dustin Sullivan burns rubber. "The adrenaline rush was always there in racing." Senior Joshua Banfield and Sophomore brother, Justin, have engaged other racers on the battlefield of water in kayaks. "We just love the sport." Peer Lucas Wickham dares to challenge nature`s sentinels. " Climbing has all the challenge and thrills."

Whether it is mere defiance of nature's creations or merely to test one's limit, these extremists dared to do what many would never. For they were only part of the next generation to capture the thrills most could only dream.

Dustin Sullivan sits on his Kawnsoki dirt bike as he prepared for a race. "My family has always been into racing and I always wanted to be," he said. Dustin has been devoted to racing and continues to test himself as he strives to make nature tremble.

Mike Wirth practiced his skating skills during the weekend. "I just like the thrill of everything when doing anykind of skating. The rush is just extreme and that`s what matters," he said. Mike has been interested, such as many Armijo students, in skating.

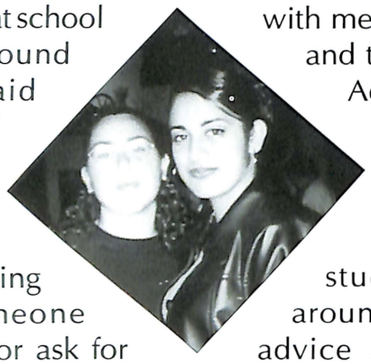

Joshua Banfield, left, and brother Justin, right, battled the power of the element of water on their kayak. "We love the thrills and the excitment that only is in kayaking. Plus the challenges," they said. Josh and his family have competed in several championships and have won many awards.

Lucas Wickham boldly challenged mother nature`s creations as he fights gravity. "Climbing has allowed a challenge for myself and a chance to have fun also," he said remanicing. This rock is located at Mt. Diablo State Park and is rated 5.10+.

SiblingS

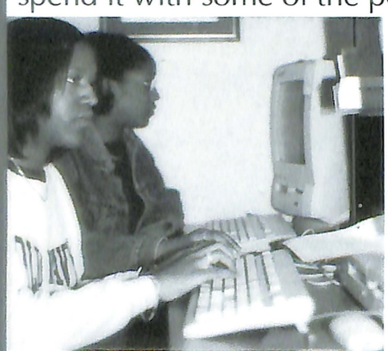

Excitement and embarrassment were just two of the many overwhelming feelings you may have had about a younger or older sibling at school with you. Through the year many people commented about the different and the common features you shared.

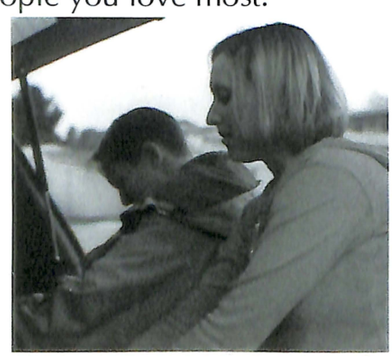

"The only thing I really liked about having my older brother at school with me is that he can drive me around and take me out to lunch", said Adam Goodrich when asked about how he liked going to school with his older brother Matt.

Some sibling students love having someone around that they could talk to or ask for advice about almost anything. Older siblings can also help with conflicts or problem because they have more experience. Susana Zialcita said "Now that my sister and I went to school together, we talked more and became closer. I love having her around!"

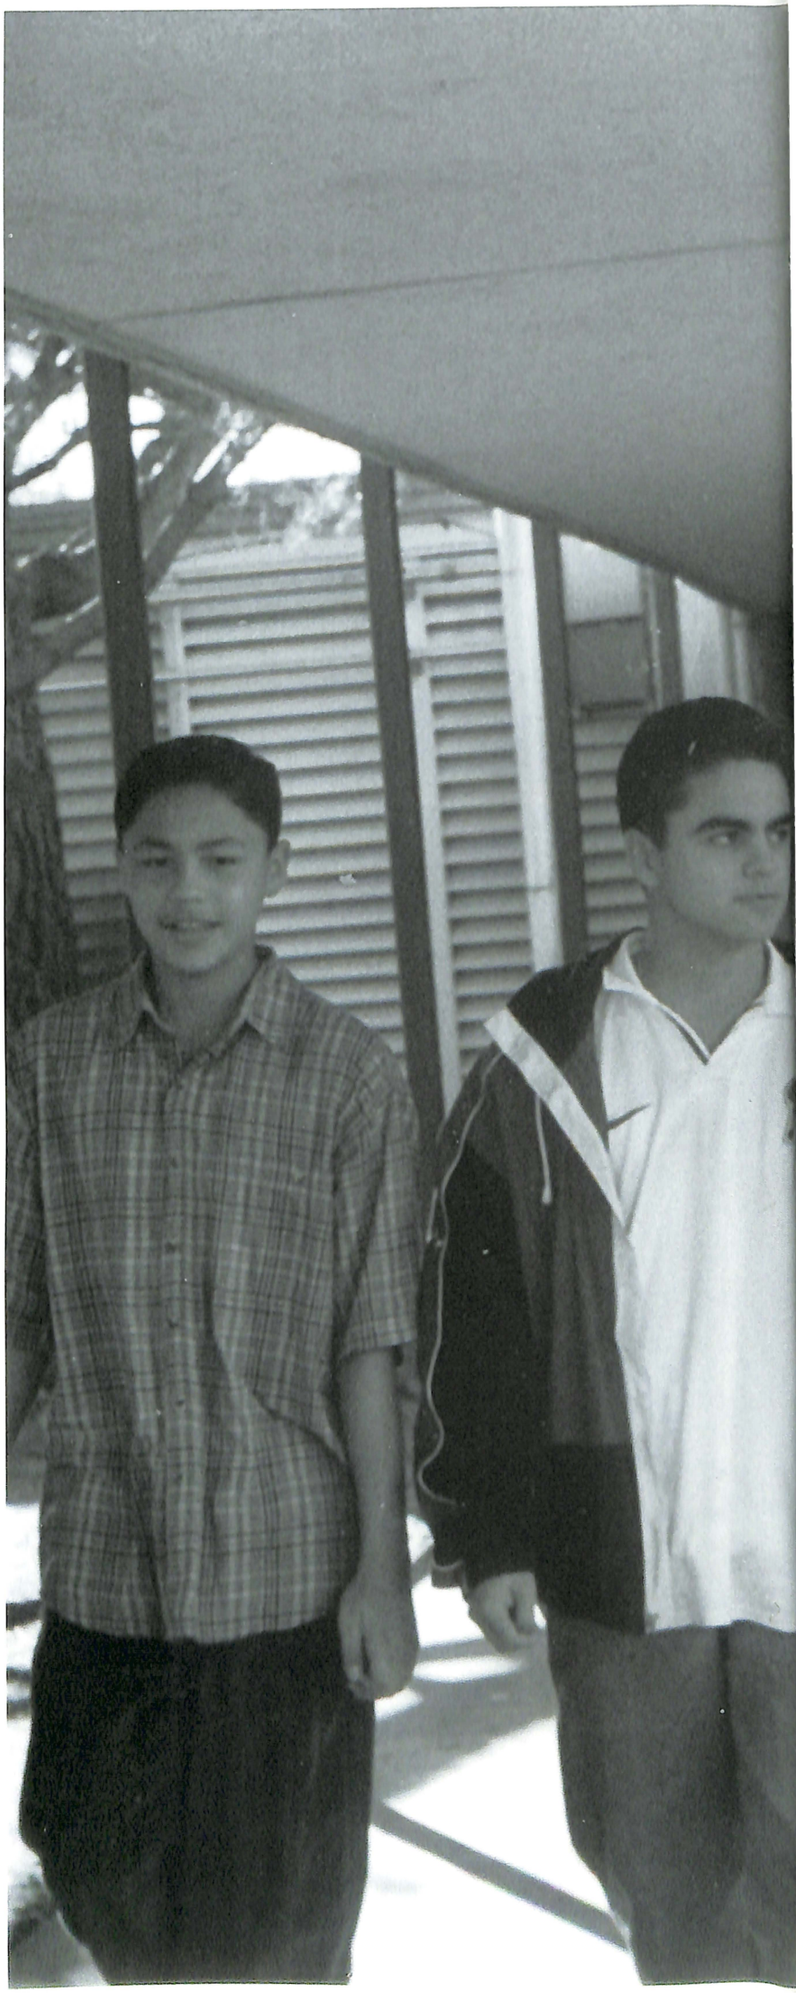

In the end we hopefully learned to appriciate the opportunity to get to know our siblings. If you do not take advantage of having a sibling around the chance may never come again. You should think about spending more time with them it may be fun learning things about them that you had never known before. Your years in high school are supposed to be some of the best years of your life. Take time and think about how lucky you may be to spend it with some of the people you love most.

-Tenesha Craig

"S is my favorite letter because that letter runs in my family."
-Juan Salgado

What is your favorite letter or number and why?

"My favorite is 420 because I think it should be a national holiday."
-Eugene Kwon

"I like the number 3. It seems to be a reliable number."
-Tameka Dossman

Mario Saldana and his brothers Miguel and Manuel walked down the main hallway. "It is cool to have all of us going to the same school, but I don't usually see them around," said Mario. Many siblings didn't spend too much time together at school.

Rachel and Roxanne sat and talked about their long days at school and about the previous class. "I enjoyed having an older sister around. She was a big help all year with classes and just everything in general." Roxanne was the freshmen leadership president. She likes the excitment and responsibility.

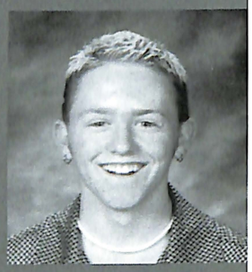

If you had one wish what would it be?

Jeff Barton studies his math book in class. "I only have trouble doing my work one time durring the year, basketball season. I called it seasonal senioritis," said Jeff. A lot of seniors had to make grades for sports so slacking off was not permitted for them.

Zach Sullivan dressed like a sumo wrestler for the senior class float. "I had to gain a lot of weight to win, but we still lost because out float didn't burn down," commented Zach. Many seniors got involved with the class events and had a lot of fun participating.

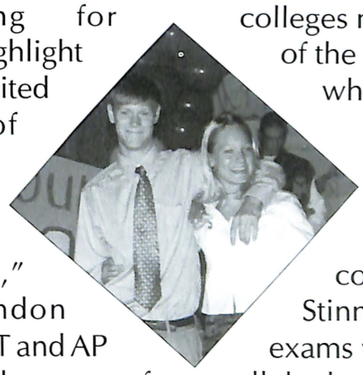

The senior class showed their spirit at the back to the beach rally. "I liked how our class seems to have a lot of spirit this year. Everyone works together," said Gabe Mendez. The level of enthusiasm from the senior class was high during entire year.

SenioritiS

"I love knowing that I am leaving after this year is over," said Kevin Hanson. The long awaited senior year for the Class of 1999 finally arrived for these 535 students. Being a senior meant many things, especially having seniority over all the other classes.

Applying for colleges might not have been a highlight of the year, but most were excited when they got that letter of acceptance in April. "It was so repetitive, fill out this, write this, I am just glad it is over with," commented senior Brandon Stinnett. Studying for the SAT, ACT and AP exams were stressful and often was the cause of all the late night cramming. Most of all, everyone just wanted to have a great, last year in high school.

The class of 1999 had numerous activities that were available to them. All these activities were for seniors only, leaving the junior class to wait until next year. Senior Tea, pictures, class rings, caps and gowns, prom and gradnite were just some of the many things available to the class.

Leaving high school and entering college will be a big change for these eighteen year olds. Stepping out into the real world brings a lot more responsibility that the Class of 1999 is ready for.

Mike McNelis and Nate Smith worked on making a globe for the senior float. "We worked pretty hard on the float and put a lot of time into it but we still got third place," said Mike. The theme for that float was It's a Small World. Seniors dressed up in clothes from around the world.

On the first day of school seniors decorated their cars with car chalk to celebrate being a senior. The celebrating continued throughout the year and was evident in the way seniors showed their pride for the class of 99.

Walkout

It was early Thursday morning, shortly after 9:00 o'clock, Armijo and Fairfield High students planned to meet in a walk-out over the new decision of Fairfield-Suisun year round schooling.

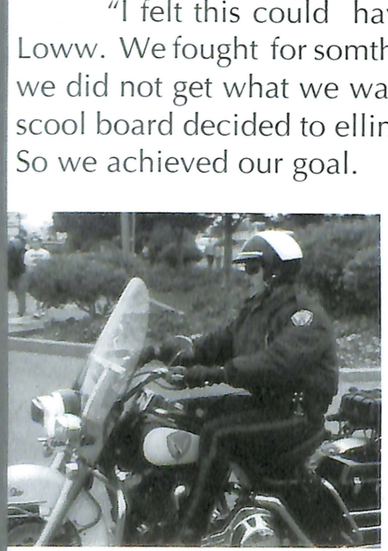

"We should be more important than pocket money," exlpained Steven Sylvester about the decision. Miguel Santiago believes that, "Year round school is weak, and hopfully this demonstration made the school board change their mind."

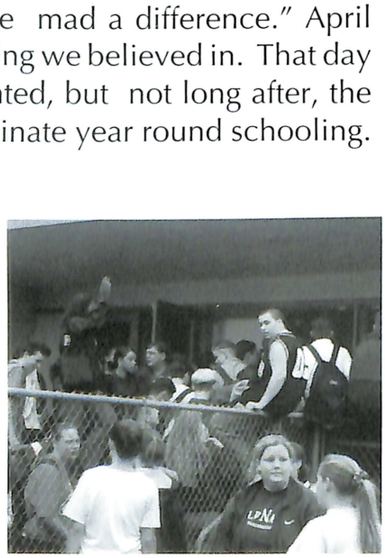

The plan for the 98-99' school year was that students would be split up into three tracks, going at different times to ease over crowding between classes. Because of the protest, the school board claimed they would do anything to help as long as the students could think of a good alternative. Although many thought the protest would only make trouble, the peace was kept by the students.

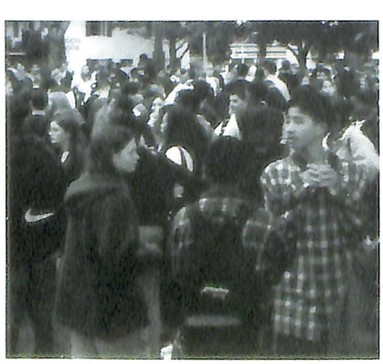

There were resident onlookers watching the 1500 students walking down the streets in seek of their destination.

"I felt this could have mad a difference." April Loww. We fought for somthing we believed in. That day we did not get what we wanted, but not long after, the scool board decided to elliminate year round schooling. So we achieved our goal.

Students walk down Tabor Street to reach their destination of the district office. "I feel the walk out was good, because I got to miss three classes and we made a good change for the students," said Amber Mullin. Many juniors also feel they are getting a raw deal by going year round.

The walk out was an event that many Armijo students were an active part of, including Tim Stacey, an Armijo junior. "I'm glad I was in the walk out, it made people hear us out." This has been the first walk out Armijo has participated in that has allowed it's students to express themself without bound.

Aja Roper and Nick Garcia were this years homecoming king and queen for the senior class of 1999. "The whole experience was so exciting," said Aja. "The homecoming experience was exciting and fun. It will be nice to look back at later in life," exclaimed Nick.

The Senior class used Aladdin as their theme. "All the work that we put into our float was worth it. I had a lot of fun participating in our dance we put together," commented Jayme Andrews. This year all of the classes were especially creative with the over all theme, Disney Magic.

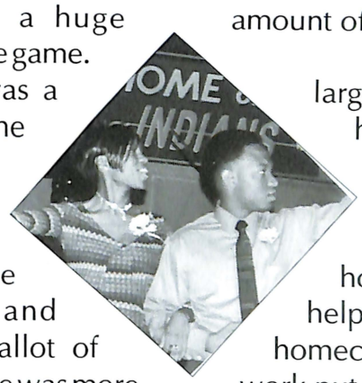

The sophomore class won the crowd over with their swing dancing routine. "Swing dancing was really fun. I enjoyed learning how to do it and dressing up for it," said Jason Ennis. There were more than twenty couples dancing for the sophomore class.

Basketball Homecoming

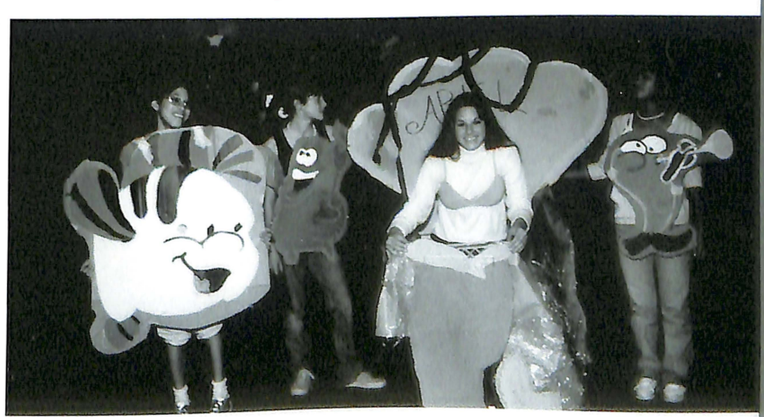

The enthusiasm of the Armijo students shined during the week of basketball homecoming. Everywhere you looked there was spirit. The basketball players were all decked out awaiting the big night. With the pre-game activities all the students got pumped with a huge amount of spirit and energy about the game.

There was a large amount of work put into the homecoming game. Leadership organized spirit week with dress up days, held the homecoming assembly and helped put together the ballot of homecoming nominees. There was more work put into homecoming than most would have predicted.

Many were surprised by how creative the students became when plain carts and trucks were transformed into amazing homecoming floats. Even though the junior class won, everybody put forth their best effort which made a great competition and a lot of fun. "The floats are so much different than football homecoming it really surprised me," said freshman Stephan Dean.

All the students and volunteers made the '99 basketball homecoming a big success. With all the different aspects of homecoming one was bound to have an extremely good time.

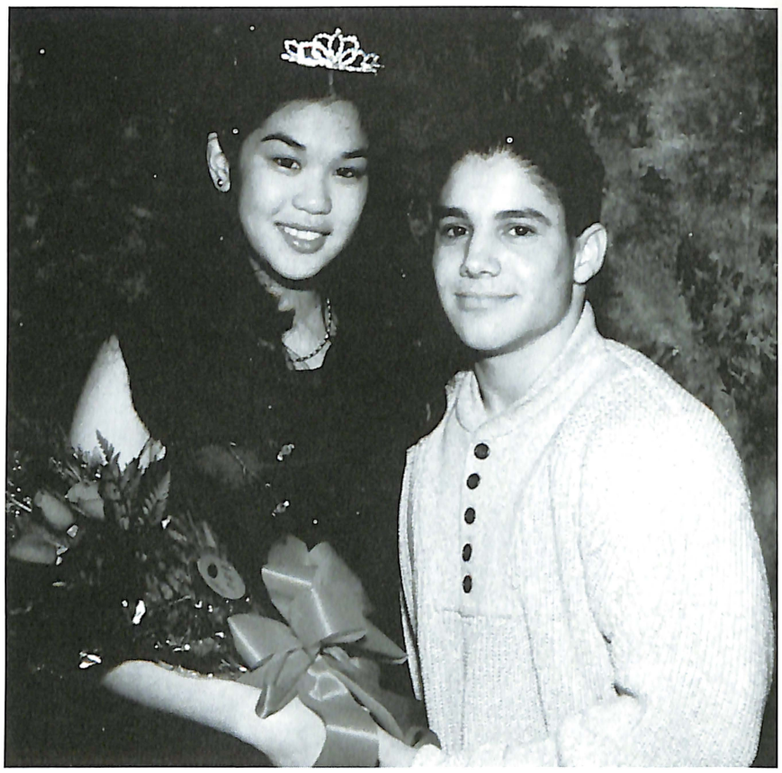

Juniors Mike Cook and Brad Brasinski battled it out while Jesse Hunt stands by. "It was a lot of work. It was worth it. I had a lot of fun working on it and putting it together,"said Jesse. The Junior class won the competition with their "Celebrity Deathmatch."

The freshmen used "The Little Mermaid" to awe the crowd. "It was stressful, but rewarding cause but once we were done everything was perfact," commented freshman Janela Rillo. All of the classes put in an extreme amount of effort.

The junior winners were Michelle Smith and Brian Engell. "It was one of the most memorable experiences of my life. It was great to win," said Brian. " Hearing my name called was a good ending to the crazy week I had been having," said Michelle. Homecoming week was a busy time at Armijo.

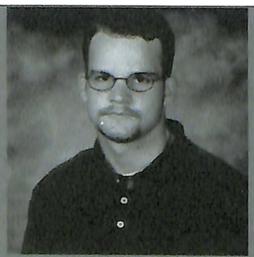

The sophomore winners were Chris Premo and Melissa Revillo. "It was fun. I've never been so nervous in my life," said Chris. "It really did not matter if I won, it was fun just being nominated," said Melissa. All of the nominees did a great job this year keeping their nerves down.

Ace St. Germain and Nina Mandronio were the freshmen winners. "It was cool winning for a second time in a row." said Ace. Ace also had to honor to win a homecoming in his eighth grade year. "I was really happy that I won, it was a great feeling," commented Nina.

The senior attendant winners were Karinda Elliot, Erin Fuchs, and James Reed. "I was shocked it was like a dream come true," said James. "The experience of having my peers vote for me was amazing," claimed Karinda." I had a lot of fun, I never thought I would win," said Erin. Ties are a rare occurrence at Armijo.

Freshman nominees Derek Sanders and Paticia Zilacita walk down the aisle. The ROTC saber team did a great job, as always, helping introduce the nominees. "It was really cool being nominated again," said Derek. "It was stressful and nervepacking but it was mostly fun," claimed Patrica.

Another one of Armijo's hoop stars scored a point toward victory. "My expierence was a lot of fun and will always be memorable," said Dalon Teat. Dalon always uses aggression as a major part of his basketball games.

What do you do on Friday nights?

"I usually go to the football games."
- Matthew Echevarria

"Most friday nights I attend my church in Vallejo."
- Tiffany Wynn

"Go out with my friends and kick it far from home."
- Amanda Moore

"I sometimes stay at home and watchTV and when friends come we go play pool, bowl, and go to the arcade."
- Viengxay Keovanxat

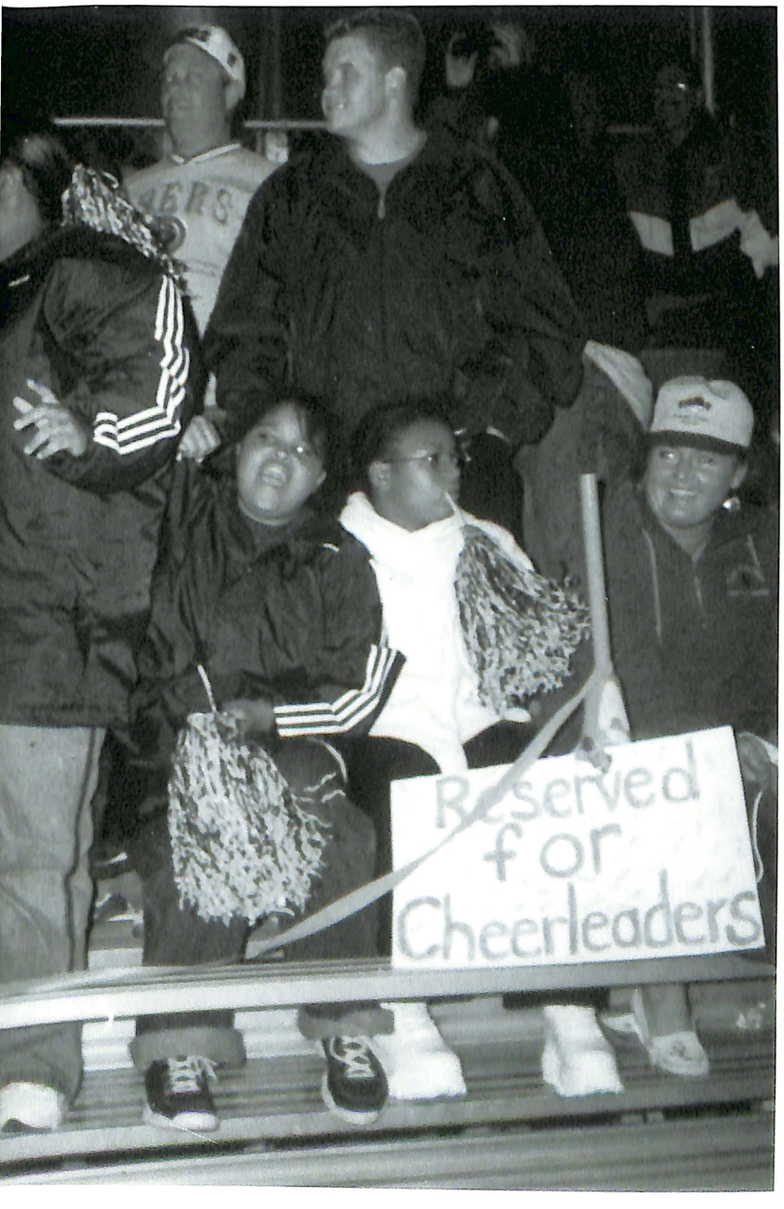

Rebecca Gibbs walked onto the football field before the game. "I have fun showing school spirit. If you were me you would like it too!" said Rebecca Gibbs. Rebecca was the water girl for the varsity football team.

Spirit

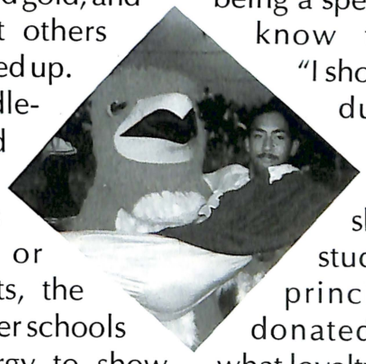

Massive amounts of students got together to display their spirit at the mock funeral. "I like spirit because it gets me involved in school," said Stacey Patterson. Mock funerals happened every year to help pump up the students.

Having spirit could never be to extreme. "I started having spirit because my friends told me it was fun. Now I do it all the time because it is fun," said Noah Bordeaux. This was Noah's first and last year in the Armijo spirit scene.

Armijo pride was in full effect this year. School events were packed with rowdy students ready to show their spirit. "At the rally I show all of my bomb spirit," said Sydel Johnson. The rallies were somewhat a prep period to boost the spirit up for the upcoming event. Spirit came in every way. Screaming, stomping, shaking of pom-poms, wearing purple and gold, and being a spectator were a few ways to let others know the Armijo family was pumped up. "I show my spirit is to get stupid-dodle-dumb and represent," said Antonio Rodriguz.

Spirit was shown not by cheerleaders or students alone, Teachers, parents, the principal, and students from other schools donated their spectacular energy to show what loyalty they had for Armijo. This energy was used to entice others to join the pride scene. "My friends influenced my spirit," said Katie Day. Spirit was so high this year many noticed that one was out of place if they did not have pride. Even if spirit was not being shown in a flamboyant way, one could still notice pride in the spectators.

Having spirit meant much to students in 1998-1999 school year. Spirit was more than just painted faces or being present at a few of our great events. Having true school spirit meant having pride, faith and most of all dedication. "Being devoted to your goals is a big part of having dedication," commented Ronesha Williams Whether people had spirit or not Armijo had it "going on!"

Spirit always looked best in numbers. "Showing my spirit is a great way for me to help support my school," said Tiffany. Tiffany Fox could always be found at most, if not all the football games. Her and her friends painted their faces and cheered for the team.

Dressing up seemed to be a true test that measured one's spirit level. "I was nervous at first but as everyone started participating in it became easy," said Jason Ennis. Jason and his friends dressed up like cheerleaders.

Blood Drive

"What were we thinking!?!" Joey Williams asked friend Amy Lozier while she sat in line for the blood drive. Joey and Amy were preparing to partake in something simple yet life saving at the same time.

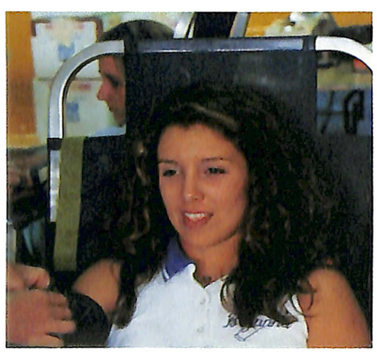

Erwin Memorial Blood Bank came to Armijo twice a year, once in the fall and once in the spring, to collect blood for the sick and injured. Joey and Amy were nervous "I am scared. I do not like needles," said Amy, clutching Joey's hand.

Despite the pain and agony of giving blood, many students gave blood to get out of class and to get free food. After performing the brave act, Amy and Joey had different opinions. "It was as bad as I thought. I feel numb and light-headed," said Joey sipping some orange juice. "It was not as bad as I thought. It hurt more coming out than going in. All I want to do right now is get something to eat," said Amy while walking to the snack table.

Many students sat with shaky hands trying to eat and drink something before going back to class. A lot of participants of the blood drive felt light-headed and somewhat nauseous after giving blood, but some students like Amy said, "I am glad I gave blood. It was worth it."

Melissa Wood laid back while going through the blood giving process. " I decided to give blood because all of my friends were doing it and it seemed like the right thing to do." Said Melissa. Many students did not like the initial pricking of the needle.

Erik Ruxton sat getting ready to be pricked. " I wasn't scared, I just didn't know what to expect." Said Erik. Just Did It T-shirts were given out to all Blood Drive participants.

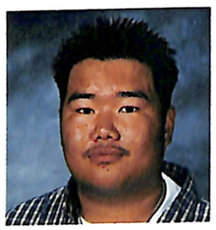

"My embarrasing moment was when I was doing a report in front of the class and I realized my fly was down the whole time."
-Marceto Barral

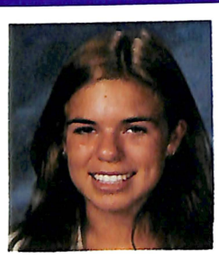

"When I got on stage to play the cello, and then I messed up. Plus once I got sick in front of the whole class."

- Julie Billecci

"When I was a kid my shorts ripped and my butt stuck out. I had no underwear on that day."
-Rithavy Khouetham

Dressed as In-N-Out Man, Will Vucurevich watched over the Armijo parking lot. "I dressed up because it gave In-N-Out free advertising. If everyone went to In-n-Out, the world would be a safer place." In-N-Out was very popular with Armijo students.

Halloween

Miriam Hammad stood proud as the Statue of Liberty, a symbol of opportunity. "When I was a freshman, I promised myself that I would dress up for Halloween when I became a senior, and I finally did." Many seniors went all out since it was their last Halloween in high school.

At the AFS Halloween party, Kazumi Mae dressed as an Armijo cheerleader. "I was very excited because it was my first Halloween. I enjoyed the costumes and pumpkins." Kazumi was an exchange student from Japan.

"I like Halloween because I love candy, and I like to dress up because I'm spirited," said senior Stephanie Williams. Halloween has always been an extremely popular holiday for teens. Who wouldn't enjoy dressing up as a different person for a day and getting tons of candy?

Although Halloween fell on a Saturday this year, and the Friday preceding was a day off, students had to "celebrate" the Thursday before. This did not stop students from wearing their best outfits to school. Junior Sean Sredl said, "I dressed up as Howard Stern because I just wanted to wear the shirt and wig."

Many Seniors felt that this Halloween was the last time for them to act silly. "I was an angel because I just wanted to dress up for my last year at Armijo," said Adrian Hessman. Students got creative this year, and many dressed up with groups of their friends, either with one theme or many different ideas. Some of the costumes seen on Armijo's campus on this year's October 29th was a baby, an angel, doctors, Scream characters like Drew Barrymore and Tatem, lifeguards, Fairfield High School cheerleaders, and many more. The scariest thing about Halloween was the people who didn't dress up.

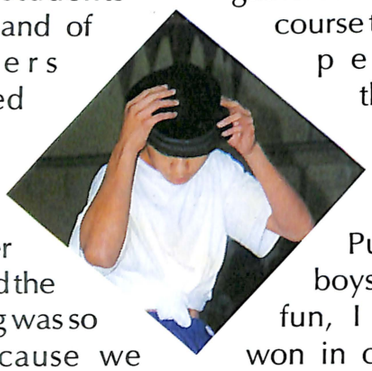

Ashley Bowman, Kevin Patmon, Josh Frye, and Joel Morgan dressed up as pro wrestlers. "It is our senior year and we just wanted to kid around," said Ashley. They obviously enjoyed the wrestling craze that occurred this year.

While in Pre-calculus, Felice Elze chatted on the phone. "Everyone thinks I look like Drew Barrymore, so I decided to dress up as her for Halloween." She was Drew's character from the movie "Scream."

Changing Places

"Girls Rule," shouted Callie Clagg as she ran out of the gym while her team was announced at the powder puff assembly. The gymnasium was filled with cheering students gathered to see who was on the teams and of course to see the guy cheerleaders perform. Laughter filled the boys the crowd as danced in cheerleading outfits.

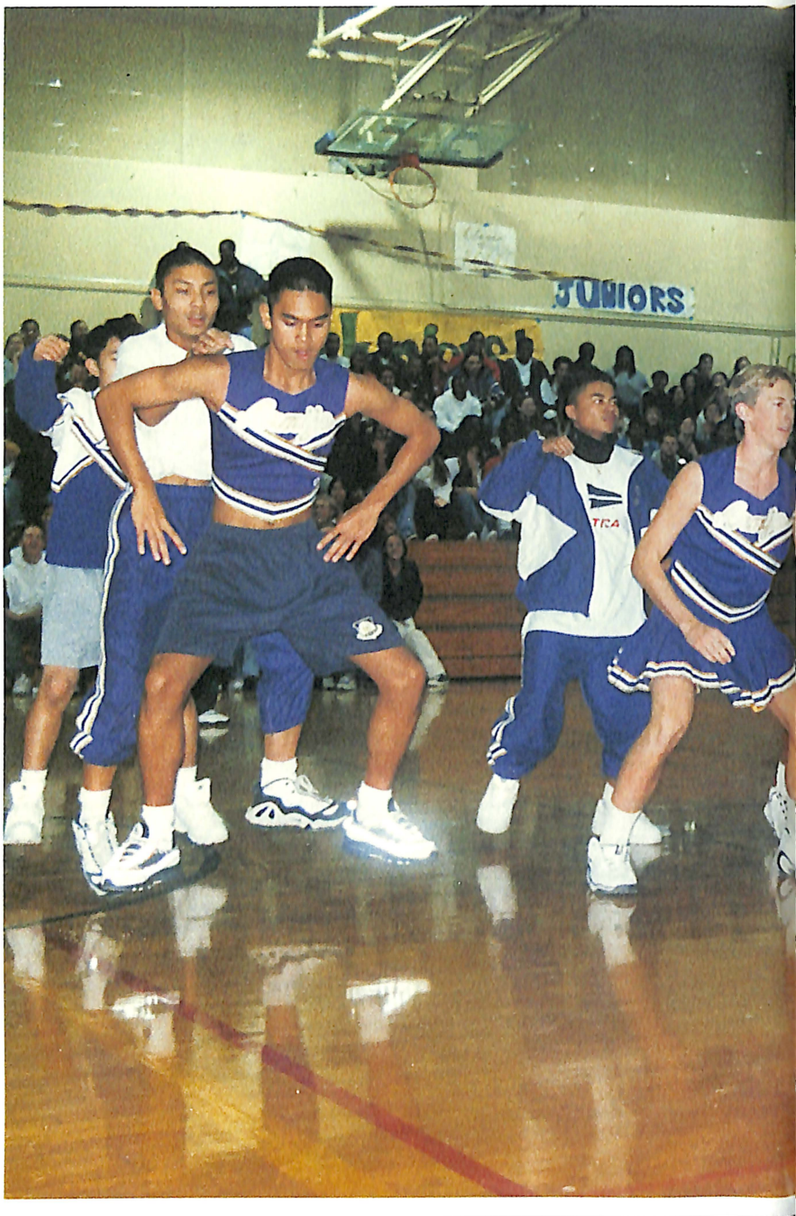

In Powder Puff, the girls play football and the boys cheer them on. "Preforming was so fun, I was juiced; especially because we won in competition," said sophomore Andrew Om. The group had Rommel De Guzman perform as Michael Jackson at the last part of their routine.

The night of December ninth was not a mud-bath for the first time in years. However, one team of women football players from each class braved the freezing wind to compete in the annual Powder Puff games. The girls began practicing as early as November. Original football players dedicated their time to coaching the girls from their class. "It is fun to coach because it lets me walk in the shoes of my coaches and shows me how hard our coaches work to train us," said junior coach Noe Lopez. The coaches taught the girls the positions and plays.

The seniors and juniors tied this year with a score 7-7. Michelle Sullivan commented, "I have done it for four years. It has been fun to be able to play in the mud,".

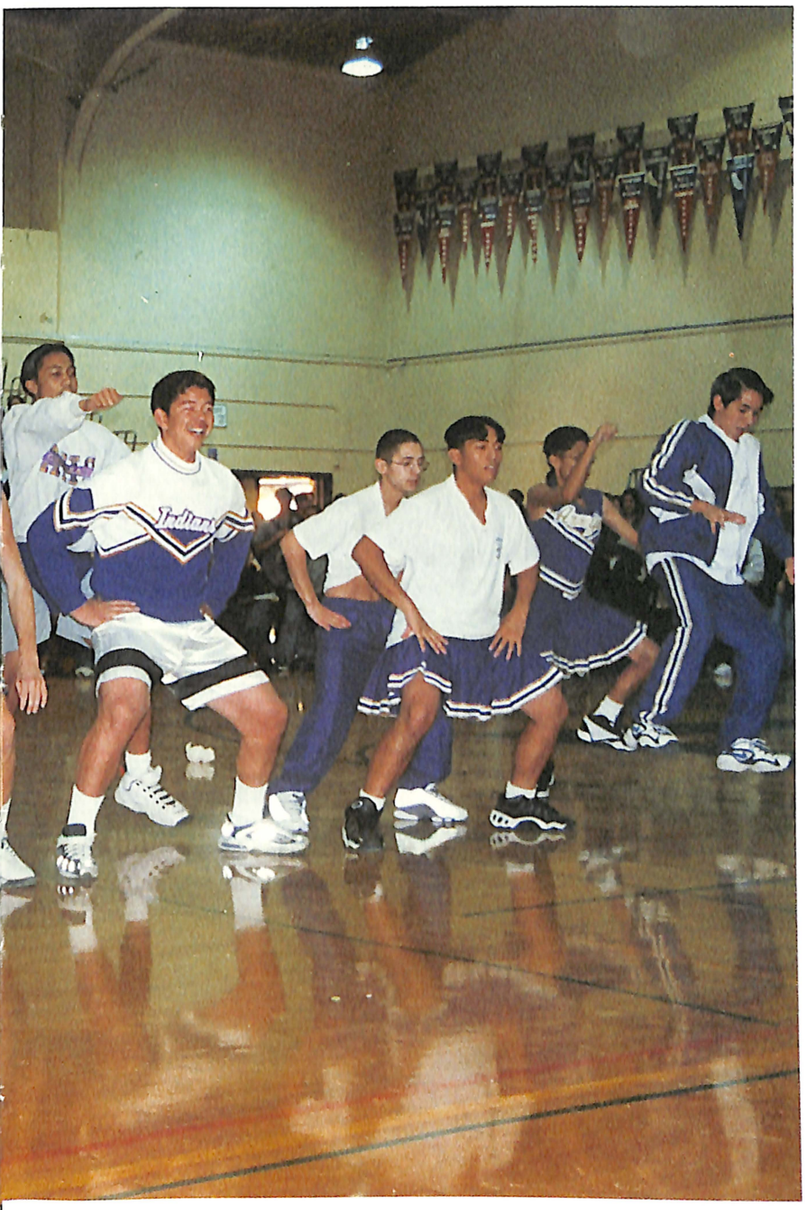

The sophomores took the victory in the J.V. game. The score was 18-6. Friends Rochelle Suba and Sophia Valencia played for the first time. "The game was fun, and we looked good in the mud," they commented. The quarterback, Reanna Elze scored the only touchdown for the freshman.

Overall, the powder puff event of 1998 proved to be an event to be remembered. Many players, cheerleaders and coaches will return next year to show their spirit all over again. Powder puff was one of the most anticipated events of the year and definitely the most interesting.

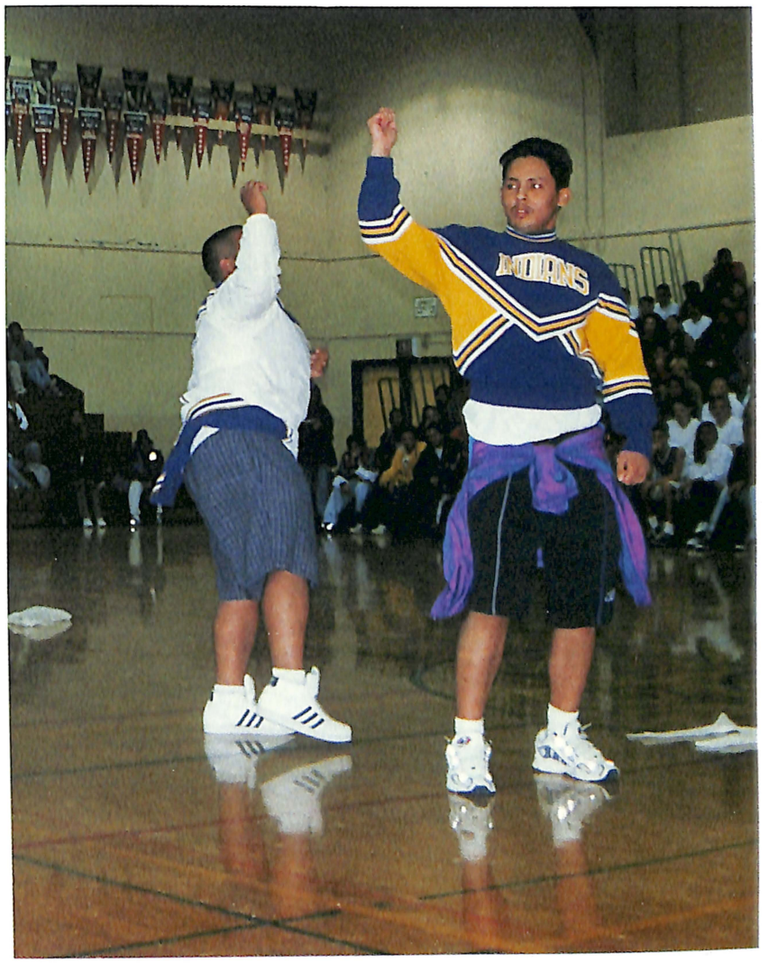

The senior team gathered for a picture at Brownlee field after the game. "Powder Puff was so fun but the best part was definitely getting our coach, Danny Dumas in the mud," mentioned Anne Fink. Many of the senior players were sad to play their final powder puff game.

The sophomore Powder Puff cheerleaders preformed to Michael Jackson's "Beat it." Scott Lamphiear commented, " It was a lot of fun and a lot of practice, but also very embarrassing." The sophomores took first place at the rally and as they left the gym the crowd awarded them with a standing ovation.

The senior cheerleading team captured the attention of audience gathered in the gym. "I had a lot of fun because it was exiting to preform but more people should have done it this year," said Aldrich Agapito. After the performance, the crowd had to decide which team they liked best.

What is your favorite microwave food?

"Serloin steak because it tastes especially good with gravy and mashed potatoes."
-Charles Campbell

"I love popcorn with butter and salt. It is easy to cook and fun to watch with a movie."
-Rachel Bayer

Melissa Barthalemew entered the noisy gymnasium with confidence and a lot of school spirit. "I had so much fun at the rally and especially the game. I hope that I can do powder puff for the next three years," she commented. Melissa was on the freshman team

Sara Parra avoids a defender with the help of Erin Stockey. "It was my first year playing. Erin and I had a lot of fun because we were the running backs," said Sara Parra. The two friends run together and are both members of the Armijo women's soccer team.

The five freshman coaches stand behind the group of girl football players. "I coached because I love the game and I wanted to show my school spirit," said Craig Webb; who was also a cheerleader at the rally. Not many coaches were willing to be a cheerleader too.

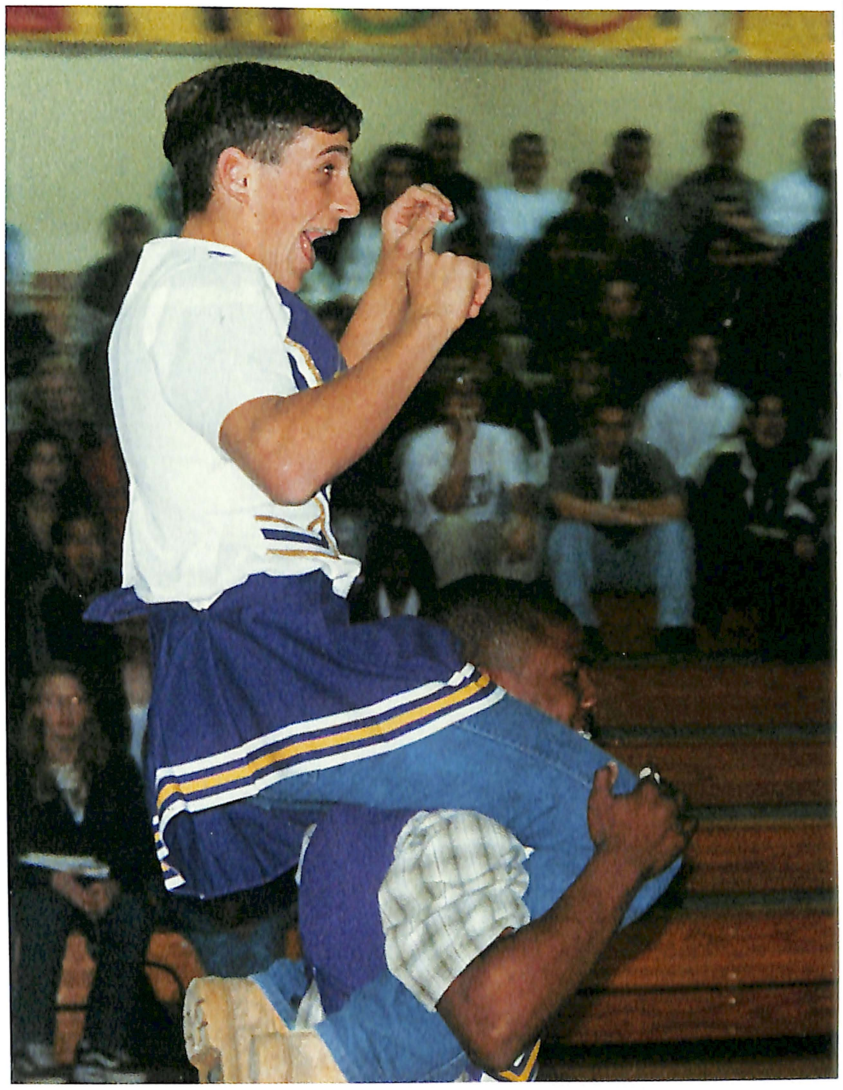

The junior powder puff team posed for the picture with black marks under their eyes. Quarterback Lisa Smith reflected, "It was a lot of fun and everybody played great; but what was best was learning the positions and making the coaches mad." Some of the coaches have vowed never to coach again.

The sophomore squad played the powder puff game in their P. E. uniforms for the second year in a row. Carol Oudynarath remembered, "The powder puff game was really fun and the practices were fun." The girls had ordered shirts for the game but they didn't arrive until after the game.

Freshman cheerleaders Edwin James and Craig Webb entered into the gym with enthusiasm during the powder puff rally. "I think it was a good experience for me, I want to do it again next year," said Edwin. The underclass cheerleaders really got into the spirit of things.

Prediction

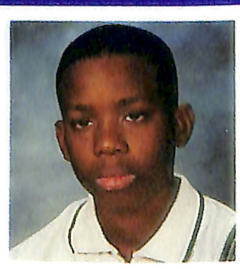

"I always remember the advice that my friend gave to me. He said that if somebody were to jump off a bridge, would you?"
- Micheal Yates

"Nobody gives good advice to me anymore. That is because they do not ever know what they are talking about."
-Julia Sarmiento

"What is the best advice that someone has given to you?"

" My friend told me that if you want to keep a secret between three people, two of them have to be dead."
- Ashely Hurley

"The best advice that I have ever been given is the advice that I regretfully did not take."
- Jessie Hunt

"Yes, because that has always been the mascot for our school."
-Kiana Wood

"Yes I do because we are the Armijo Indians and we always have been, so why change."
-Alan Rooke

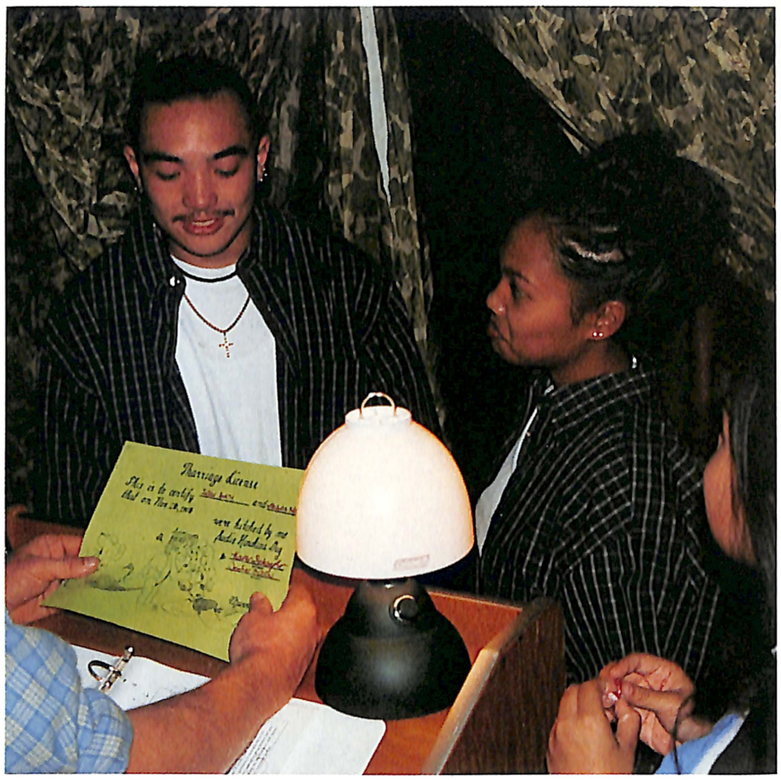

Do you think that our mascot should be an Indian?

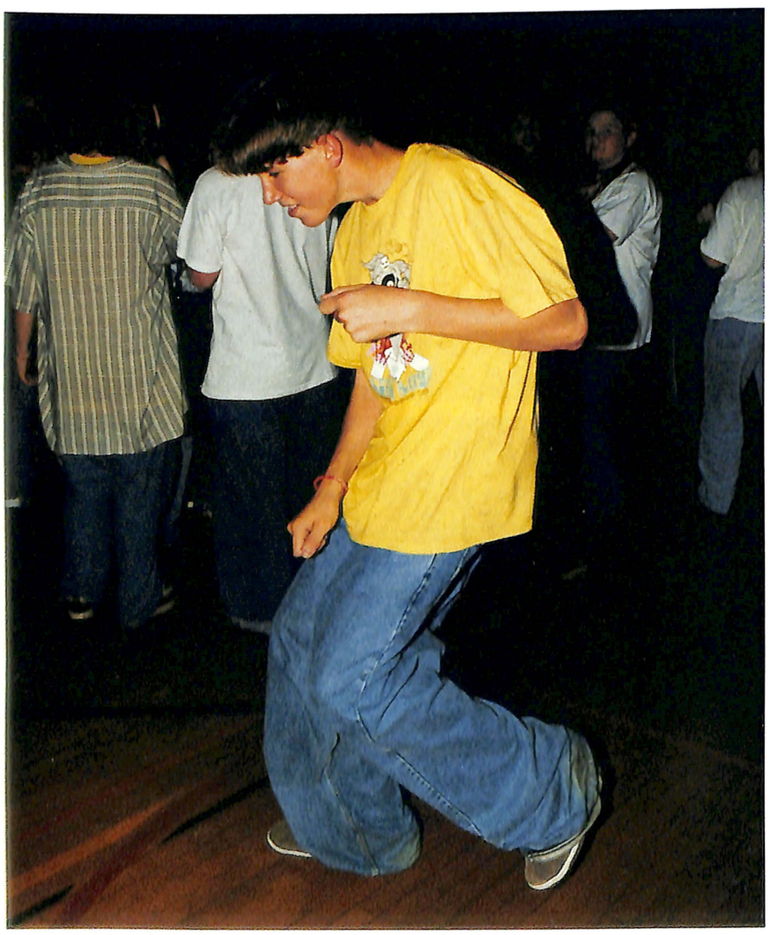

"I don't know because it has always been an Indian, but some people think that it is prejudice toward Native Americans."
-Christian Ambrose

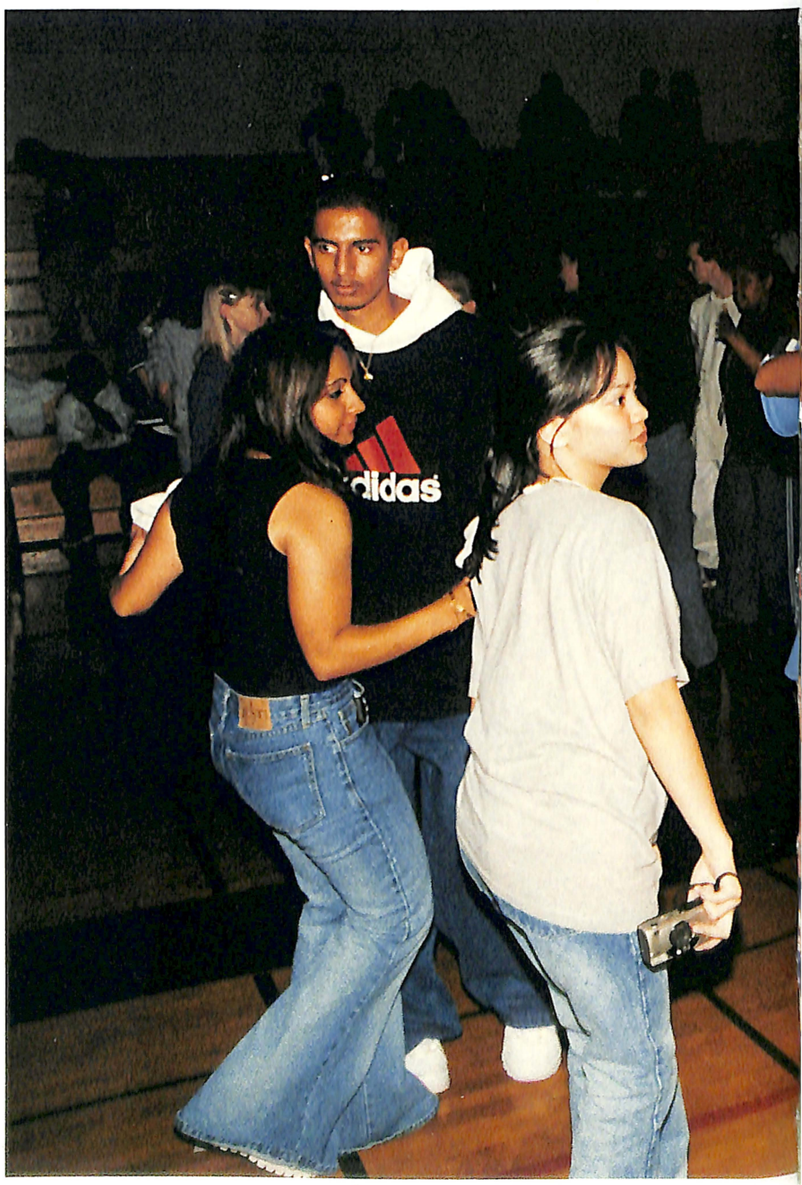

"I think it should stay the same because when I think of Armijo I automatically think Indians."
-Edwina Smith

Evan Schrupp boogied his heart out all evening on the dance floor. "Sadie's was a blast, for one time the girl's ask the guy's." Armijo girls had to go through the stresses of asking their favorite guys to be their dates.

Girls Night

Senior Melanie Ravara received her Marriage License in the Marrying Booth. "I decided to get married with my date because this was my last Sadie Hawkins." Traditionally, Mr. Harrison was "Marryin Sam," but not this year.

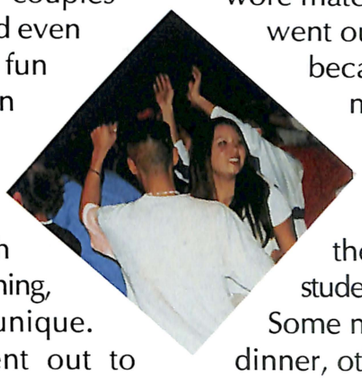

While with his friends, Anthony Seeco fooled around. "The main point of Sadie Hawkins was so the girls could do something that is not normally done." Many guys enjoyed being asked by the ladies, receiving shirts, and in most cases a good meal.

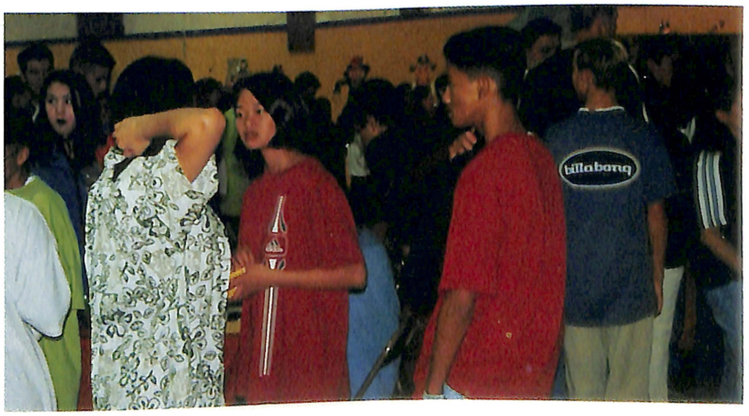

It was a night of dancing, singing, laughing... and weddings?!!! This was definitely not the typical description of a dance, but Sadie Hawkins was far from typical.

Sadie Hawkins was the dance where the girls asked the boys, couples wore matching outfits, took pictures, and even went out to dinner. "I think Sadies is fun because I get to dress up in matching outfits with my date," said freshman. Lynette Smith.

Keeping with the untraditional evening, student's plans were all very unique. Some met in large groups and went out to dinner, others stayed in and ordered pizza, or even made their own meals. "We had a good time at home, eating Chinese food with our friends," said sophomore Ty Mattern. Some couples chose a romantic dinner for two as opposed to hanging out with a big group of friends.

Besides the Junior/Senior Prom in the spring, Sadie Hawkins was the most popular dance of the year. Students enjoyed this dance the most for many different reasons. Senior Ebony Freeman said, "This was one of my last chances to show it all in high school." Everyone just focused on having a good time, and did. It was a memorable night that anyone who went remembered for a long time.

A group of seniors enjoyed their last Sadies dance. "This was my last Sadie Hawkins and I had fun even though my date and I spent a lot of money," said Don Gutierrez. Many couples decided to go all out and buy entire outfits for the one night event.

Roxanne Dizon and friends waited patiently in the extremly long picture line. "We waited for 2 and 1/2 hours, but made it fun by dancing in line." Long picture lines have been a tradition at the Armijo Sadie Hawkins dance.

Determination.-

To ascertain the extent, position, quality, or nature of something.

Strong in the spirit and tenacious in the mind is what the student body was composed of the 1998-1999 school year. A major element in the students success was determination. It ruled over the student's accomplishments and set a standard for the future generations to follow.

The class of 2002 arrived at Armijo unaware of the what changes would happen in their lives. They were submerged into a life that they never had experienced before. As the months proceeded, the freshmen began to mature and adjust to "teenage" life.

Beginning their second year of high school, the class of 2001 finally realized that life wasn't fun and games anymore. But that didn't stop them from achieving all that was in their grasp. "I was more involved and stabilized than last year," said sophomore Rebecca High. A serious tone was cast upon the students. News about colleges and future careers started to fill their ears as the year went by.

As juniors, the class of 2000, college became a major impact on their lives. Balancing out academic classes, jobs, and researching for college and scholarships was getting difficult. School was no longer simple or easy but it didn't stop the class of 2000 from striving for the best.

The years had flown by and the senior class of 1999 prepared to leave Armijo and start new lives as adults. Before they walked across the stage on June 11, 1999 they had to fill out loads of college applications and anticipated the day they would move out of their guardian's home. "The last year to dream, next year I make them reality," said a Kenny Jones.

Even though the students were divided by grade levels, they were united by the fact that Armijo is a family. Each individual had their differences and opinions about issues, but that was the main component of uniqueness among the student body.

At football games students came together to show support. Brandon Kelly commented, " I think that the more spirit we show, the better we do." At football games students let go of all of their worries because it was the official start of their weekend.

At homecoming the competition behind classes was at its highest peak but that did not stop the classes from getting along. Unity among the students was one of the aspects that made us a strong family. The seniors, juniors, sophomores and the freshman built upon the diversity to become better people.

Geometry was Josh Booker's most challenging class. "It was confusing dealing with many angles." Josh replied. His favorite saying was, "I was like wow!" At first he thought that Captain America was his role model, but he changed his mind and decided that his mom is his role model. She is an outstanding woman and his backbone to life. "She takes real good care of me," commented Josh. His words of advice for the upcoming seniors is, "Buy a gas mask for when you walk pass the farm towards the annex and back."

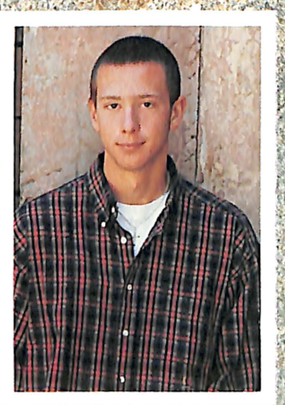

Shana Dias's advice for seniors next year was, "Make it a year to remember." Drop Dead Fred was one of her role models because she thought that he was a cool guy. Shana decided that Art with Ms. Aiu was her most challenging class. Her best excuse for cutting was that her friends kidnapped her, tried to tie her up and threw her in a friend's trunk of their car. Her plans after graduation were to visit and buy stuff from as many garage sales around town to furnish the apartment that she and her friend Penny were going to move into.

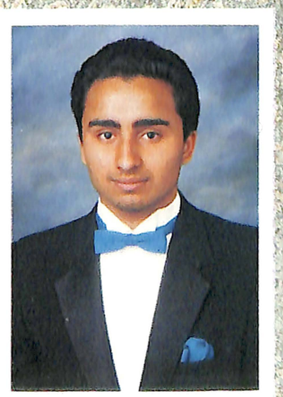

"Be strong your senior. Make it the most fun you've ever had. I guarantee that you will remember it for the rest of your life," commented Jeffery Barton as he gave advice to the soon to be seniors. Jeffery played on the Boy's Basketball team since his freshman year and he said that Michael Jordan was the person that he looked up to. Jeffery said that when he will play for the NBA, he will make slam dunks from the free throw line like Jordan, "I wanna be like Jeff," would be a new motto for Nike commercials in the future.

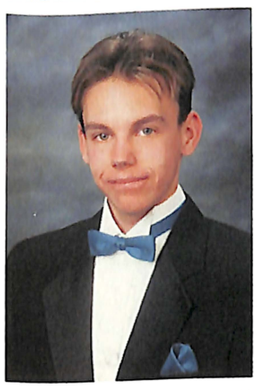

Mirabelle Habana's most challenging class was Anatomy/Physiology during her junior year because each chapter was practically forty pages long! Meeting up with her boyfriend was her best experience here at Armijo. You could find them wearing matching outfits and holding hands almost everyday. Mirabelle's best excuse for cutting school was that her car broke down on the way to class and she had to wait all day for the tow truck. She said that her mom was her role model because she spoiled Mirabelle with clothes.

What will the class of 99 miss most about Armijo?

"The parking lot and my friends."... "Some of my teachers."... "The pretty girls."... "The people."... "The guys."... "Mr. Harrison and his ability to make me laugh."... "I'll miss D Hall with all the teachers standing outside and warning me about the dress code."... "The school bulletin."... "The people I met, the interesting classes and clubs, and our plays."... "Free education."... "The chicks, soccer and lunchtime."... "My friends (Superfreaks) and my study group."... "The people that I was always around with."... "Not able to pick on the freshmen, oh well."... "All the people who I don't usually get to see outside of school."... "The rallies."... "I'll miss swimming everyday in the cold weather of winter."... "All the parties that I went to."... "Laughing with all my friends before and after school."... "Mr. Marsh and Josephine."... "The great times goofing off."... "Nothing, nada, ziltch."... "Talking with my friends."... "I'll miss Mr. Gutowski and DECA."... "I'll miss going to the Indian Outpost."... "Volleyball!!!."... "Track season and the football coach."... "The crowded halls and Leadership, especially Mr. Harrison and Mrs. Franey."... "Mr. Clark."... "Being able to be lazy and still get an A."... "All that art work on the ground."... "Baseball."... "The percussion line."... "I'll miss being a part of the Armijo Superband and Color Guard, plus all the vacations we had."... "The music playing in the Indian Outpost during Lunch."... "All the memories."... "I'll miss the lunches when I kicked it in the quad and running away from the seagulls trying to find cover."... "I'll miss getting up at P.E. in the gym when the shower bell rang."... "I'll miss being in High School (yeah right!)."...

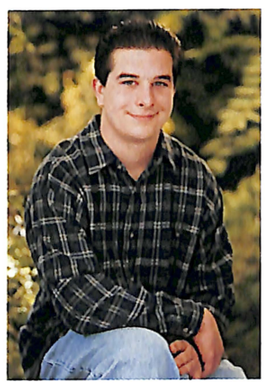

Over 535 students waited in anticipation for graduation day on June 11, 1999. The class of 1999 was the largest class in Armijo's history. The seniors voted between having the ceremony at the parking lot or at Brown Lee Field. The decision was made that graduation should be on the football field. "I think that it should be on the football field because it looks more formal and there are the bleachers to sit on," said Joe Luzadas. But on the other hand, Yang Thor said, "I think that the parking lot would be better because you could invite and fit more people in the space in the parking lot."

Don Guitierrez's saying was "Hu-ri cow! I cannot be-reef!" Otherwise translated as, " Holy cow! I cannot believe!" Eating an ostrich was something crazy that Don did and he said that it tasted like chicken. Besides eating strange foods, one of Don's favorite hobbies was singing and to play the piano. He would leave behind at Armijo a song that he wrote as a memory of himself. His best excuse for cutting was that aliens took him away and wouldn't let him go until he sang karaoke and drank tea with Tupac.

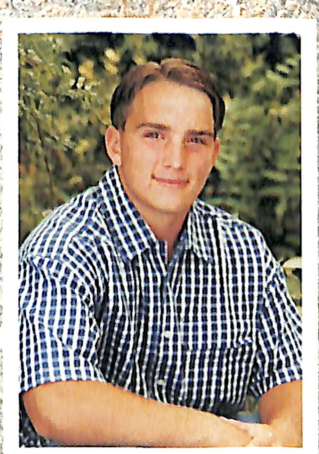

Kristina Jewell's biggest pet peeve about Armijo was not having any air conditioning. "I wanted to help the over crowding in my classes," was her favorite excuse to use for cutting. As a memory of herself, she would leave behind in the parking lot her tire tracks. After graduation, she hoped not to ever leave anymore tire tracks because she would have no reason to come back to Armijo. Kristina's advice for the future seniors was, "Do your best now so that you can leave and do better things when you get out of high school."

The craziest thing that Bryan Parkman did was knocking down a mailbox when he tried to do a U-turn. He would never forget that! He said that it didn't matter to him if the colors of the graduation gowns changed as long as he received his diploma. Being the drum major of the Armijo Super band/ Colorguard was his best experience at high school. He said that his band director, Carmel Pajita, was his role model because she is a great woman! He knew that he was a senior when all he thought was graduating from Armijo.

Nicole Howard knew that she was a senior when she had to empty all the money out from her wallet and spend almost every dollar on senior stuff. She told the upcoming seniors to have fun while it lasted and make it worth your while! Nicole's biggest pet peeve about going through high school was putting up with too many students roaming up and down the halls during passing periods. She hoped that in the future the problem of over crowding will be solved and people could walk down the halls easier without any hassle.

The Officers of the Senior Class

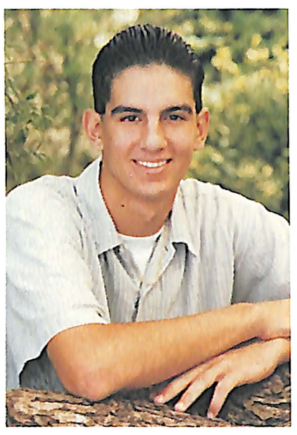

The officers were seven involved students who devoted their time to take the role of Leadership at Armijo. Nicole Carerra took on the responsiblilities as the ASB President and by her side to assist her was Melissa Devivar as the ASB Vice President and Alyssa Austria as ASB Secretary. Incharge of organizing the rallies and pumping up the spirit at Armijo was the ASB Rally Commisioner Bryanna Nethery. The leaders of the senior class were President Sean Almeida, Vice President Nikki DiMichele and Secretary Morgan Lynch. " I am glad that I am involved in Student Leadership because I get a chance to meet new people and I encourage everyone to participate an any school activity."

Mario Saldana could always be found around school sporting his bright yellow Brazil soccer jersey with the green stripes. Mario's best experience at Armijo was when he had sixth period Spanish. "I had a ton of fun in that class, especially since I had the class with Dindo and Karla," replied Mario. Mario wanted to become an architect and follow in the footsteps of his father. After high school, he planned to attend University of the Pacific in Stockton, California.

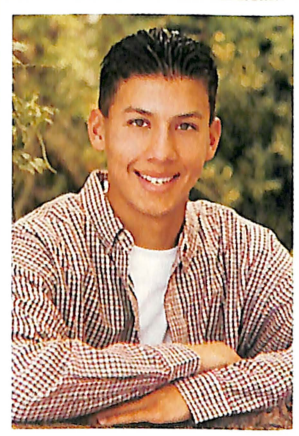

Jennifer Fontenot would never forget all the different and exciting people she had met throughout high school, which she probably wouldn't see them very often after graduation. Jennifer would leave behind a microphone because she loved to sing the National Anthem during the football games. The craziest thing that she had ever done was flash someone. Jennifer realized that she would never do that ever again! Her future plans were to become a kindergarten teacher because she loves to be around children.

Zachary Sullivan thought that the tradition of wearing gowns should change because it's been at Armijo for a long time and there should be something new considering it's the class of 1999 who graduated. Zach would leave behind his pair of neon yellow soccer cleats as a memory of himself. He said that when people see the cleats, they can think that Zach was a cool guy. Stone Cold Steve Austin was his role model because he is big and doesn't take any garbage from anyone. He wanted to be just like Stone Cold Steve Austin.

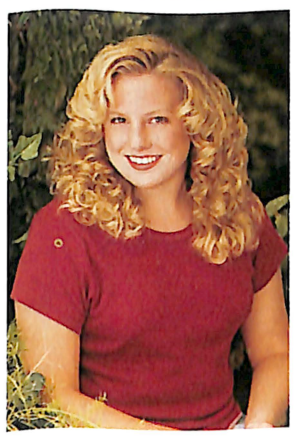

Alicia Holcombe's best excuse for cutting was, "We didn't have anything important to do." The craziest thing that she had ever done was when her and her friends went to watch The Nutty Professor and then went to Denny's and acted out the dinner table scene. Alicia felt that during graduation, people should be able to choose what color gown they wanted to wear even if they decided to wear a polka dotted one. Words of advice to the future seniors from Alicia, "Don't get lazy because senior year is easy."

"Going home after partying and sleep."... "Going to the University of Cordellia."

Senior Tea

Senior tea was an event that all seniors were invited to and it was a time for everyone to reminisce about their last year at Armijo. It was held at the Fairfield Community Center in the month of April. Seniors and their parents attended to celebrate the accomplishment of the senior class. A talent contest was held and the winners preformed in front of the crowd. Also there was a Senior video produced by Isaac Bartcsh and Paul Rathbone. "The video turned out awesome and we're glad that we made it!" Commented Paul and Isaac. Senior tea will be missed by the seniors as a fun and exciting night.

Isaac Bartsch's plans after graduation were two years at Solano Community college and then a transfer to U.C. Davis. Isaac forgot who his role model was but he said that whoever it is, they are very respectable. Isaac's best experience at Armijo was meeting all his friends and he would never forget them. Another of his favorite experiences at Armijo were his trips with the track team. "We got away with alot of stuff on that bus." Isaac said about the wild bus rides. His favorite saying was, "Oy vey!" because it can be used for anything.

Anna Maria Quintana's most challenging class was Pre Calculus during her junior years with Mrs. Cretser. "There were way too many math equations to memorize and know how to use. Especially since I had it 6th period and I was always too tired to keep up with the class!" commented Anna. She would leave behind as a memory of herself all her Anatomy and Physiology notes as wall paper in D-Hall. Her favorite quote was, "My candle burns at both its ends it will not last the night. But ah my foes and oh my friends it gives a lovely light."

"Who cares what they say!" were the favorite words of Kevin Hanson. He thinks of his parents as his role models. He would leave a Jack in the Box taco as a memory of himself because he went there everyday during lunch. Kevin's best excuse for cutting was that he thought that it was a Saturday. His best experience at Armijo was going to Denny's at eleven o' clock at night after every Fairfield/ Armijo football game. He said that his senior year was the favorite year because he had only fives classes through out the day.

Going to the mall with her friends and shopping was Akilah Warren's excuse to cut class. Akilah's aunt Cynthia is her role model because she put education as a top propriety in life because it was very important to have. Akilah's best experience during her senior year was being a TA 5th and 6th period. She remembered never doing anything except to relax. She said that the stench of the farm was something that she never forgot about Armijo. But she was glad that she didn't have to smell it again after graduation.

Senior Activity Day

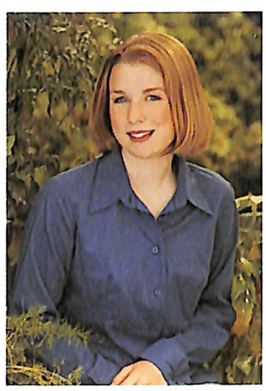

Students called this day, Senior Cut Day because it was the only time during school that they were allowed to cut class legally. The Boardwalk at Sanata Cruz was the destination for the seniors. There were 9 buses scheduled to leave Armijo on May 22, 1999. There were many activities for the seniors to do at Santa Cruz. The brave and daring went boogie boarding in the waters of the coast and while others were at the arcades putting token after token into the slots hoping to win a prize. "After wasting $5, I knew that I didn't have a chance anymore." said Brandon Stinnett. After a fun filled day, the seniors returned to Armijo that Friday night and they wait with anticipation for the next activity which was graduation day.

Matt Moraida knew that he was a senior when he woke up on Mondays and thought about the parties he went to. He decided that Ron Jeremy was his role model because he got all of the girls. Matt thought that the traditional gown colors shouldn't change because he thought that the field during graduation would look funny if all the gowns were on single color. His best and craziest experiences during high school were meeting all of his wacky friends. He agreed that his biggest pet peeve about Armijo is the smell of the farm.

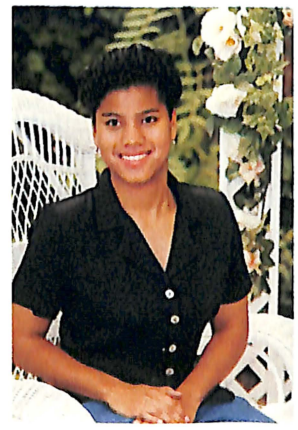

Rose Cahan's best experience at Armijo was actually going to Armijo to be with my friends. "I went to Vanden and since I didn't like it there, I decided to transfer to Armijo." commented Rose. One of her role models were World's Industry Skaters.Rose's plans after graduation are to attend Fresno State and study Criminolofy. One of her dreams was to become a F.B.I. agent just like Scully on the television show The X Files. Her excuse for cutting was that she was hungry and went to get food.

Winning the MEL Championionship in 1997 for baseball was Chris Henry's best experience at Armijo. "I was so excited that we won. We worked hard for it and we deserved to win." Chris's role model was Baltimore Orioles Robert Alomaz because no matter what anyone said about him, Chris thought that he was the greatest baseball player. Chris's best excuse for cutting class was that he was late becuase he couldn't get his stuff from his friend's car because the door got stuck and it took a while to open it.

Bianca Corona would leave behind at Armijo her big puffy hair as a memory of herself. Her best excuse for cutting was that she had to pick up her senior pictures and there was a long waiting line. "You should start saving money or you will regret it. Money gets limited during your senior year," was Bianca's advice for the future seniors. Her best times at Armijo were getting together with all her friends during lunch time her junior year. "I'll never forget our fun experiences and all the memories that we shared." said Bianca.

What is your biggest pet peeve about Armijo?

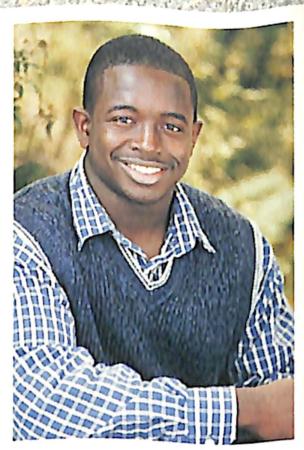

"The hall monitors."... "No air conditioning."... "The really tiny underclassmen."... "Way too many people."... "The horrid stench of the farm."... "All the gates locked."... "The hassle of getting out of the parking lot everyday after school."... "The dress code."... "The paintings on the bathroom walls."... "Having no soap and paper towels in the bathrooms."... "The schedule screw ups."... "The crowded hallways."... "Our reputation for losing the footballs games."... "When people stop right in front of you in the halls, your late for class, and you can't find anyway to get around them."... "No air conditioner."... "Too many people try to put others down for being original, instead of being happy that those people have found their own creativeness."... "Overcrowding."... "The pigs in the spring."... "The short lunches."... "I hate the dress code and the dirty bathrooms."... "The people who are too busy trying to look hard to take school seriously."... "We don't have enough activities."... "The over crowding of the parking lot."... "Involuntary schedule changes."... "The long walk from the gym to I hall."... "I don't like the fact that you can't use the internet in the library."... "The student parking permit, 25 dollars, what a rip off!"... "When I go into the girls bathroom and see the sink clogged full of tissue paper."... "All the drama of people."... "All the bad drivers in the parking lot."... "Being forced to turn right when driving out of the parking lot."... "Having to rush back to school during lunch."... "Too many wanna be actors and actresses."... "All the people that talk bad about you and when you finally confront them, they deny every word that they say."... "Knowing that you have to spend four years at Armijo."...

Time Capsule and Reflection

A time capsule was started by the students of the class of 1999. "It was a new experience and it was cool to have because it was something different." said Jamie Cullum. Seniors were to participate and place things in the time capsule to leave a little memory of themselves. The plan was to bury the time capsule and when the ten year renunion came up, the returning Armijo students would dig it back up and remember the memories at Armijo. Another new tradition was a candle reading.

Keith Bubak dreamed of beginning a mechanical engineer. He plans to get this education at the University of Southern California. After high school Keith plans to go to Solano Community College for two years and then transfer to USC. Keith was a big fan of wrestling and therefore his favorite saying is "---- It!" Keith's most embarrassing moment happened the summer of 98 at Reno. He was driving in the show down the main stretch and his car stalled. He got out of the car and had to push it the rest of the way by himself.

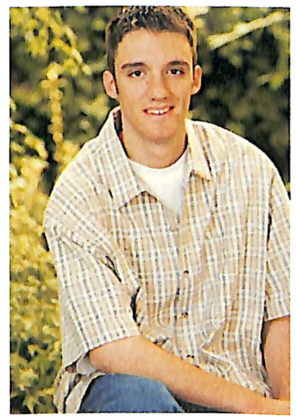

Moving home to Nebraska and going to college at the University in Lincoln is Molly Merrell's plans after she graduated. She anticipated seeing all the "fine" football and hockey players at Nebraska. Her most challenging class ever was AP U.S. History with Mr. Falk during her junior year. "It was so difficult and my hand still hurts from writing 20 pages of notes per chapter." commented Molly. Her best times at Armijo were playing on the Girl's Varsity Tennis team during her junior and senior year.

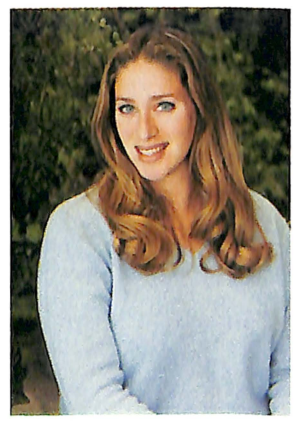

Craig Kilborn of the "Daily Show" and actor Adam Sandler were Jay Anderson's role models because they are funny and Jay wanted to be just like them when he grows up. "Does this make you happy baby, huh?" was one of Jay's favorite sayings. Something that Jay never forgot was the Armijo Boy's soccer Varsity team. He had great times and a lot of memeories being on the team. Jay's advice to the future seniors , "If you get a boring class, sleep. If you get an exciting class, sleep. If a cute girl/ guy sits next to you, stay aware.

Mrs. Fields is Elizabeth Gonzalez's role model. Elizabeth said that Mrs. Fields made the greatest chocolate chip cookies ever. "Spark your beef!" were words frequently said by Elizabeth. "I left my uniform at home. I had to drive back to get it or coach will kill me!" was an excuse for cutting that she told her teachers. Since her freshman year, Elizabeth enjoyed being part of the Armijo Girl's Volleyball team. After graduation ceremony, she planned first to go home and then she plans to party all night with her friends at Grad Night.

Invasion to Mexico

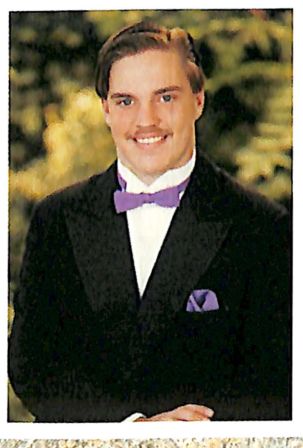

Graduating Armijo High School seniors prepared for a fun and excitement filled trip to Puerta Vallarta, Mexico. They will be joining about 4,000 other seniors from all over the country. So many seniors participate in this trip that the natives call it the invasion. Invasion is definitely right, these students have the time of their life all throughout the city. The program offers students deals for hotels, dance clubs and resturants. Volleyball will be played on the beach, and wave runners will be ridden on the ocean. This senior trip will have an impact in all of the attending seniors for the rest of their lives.

Preparing for the senior football homecoming float Karinda Elliot ties several balloons to the fishing line. "I'm sad because this was my last homecoming and I'm glad that I the float turned out so great." The senior's theme for their float was It's a small world.

Watching on the side, Harvey Jawanda cheers for his senior class teammates during Wednesday Night Jam. "This was the first Wednesday Night Jam that I went to and it was loads of fun, MAN!" said Harvey. Several seniors participated in many school activities.

The seniors of this year have the privilege to hold a special name to represent themselves. "We are the last class of the millennium and we are going to party like it's 1999," commented Hannah Otto. In her senior year, she participated in several sports and showed off her sport patches on her letterman jacket.

In Mrs. Street's Women's Literature class, Rosemary Trocio sits in her seat paying attention to the homework being assigned. "Senior year is much harder than I thought because I have a lot of work in my English class," replied Rosemary. Women's Literature was a very popular class that seniors took.

11th Grade

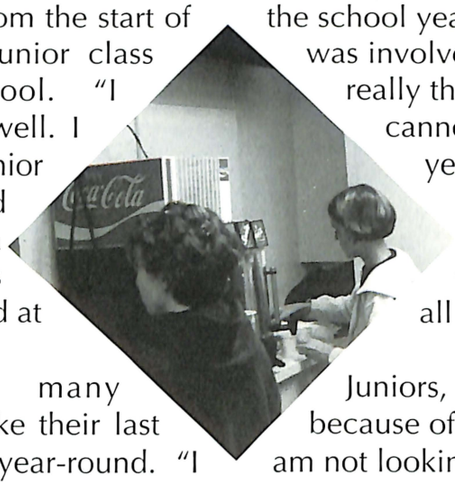

Outgoing Juniors cheered at the first rally. "It's all about the class of 2000!" said Chris Santos. The Junior class was one of the most spirited classes.

Members of the Junior class watched the rally. "I think it'll be fun starting the millennium as we graduate," said Lea Norton. The Beach Bash rally was the first rally of the school year.

The Junior class of 2000 had a fun and exciting year. Many were willing to try new things, like the Link Crew, and participating in old traditions like Homecoming. "I thought we should have won the float contest this year, but second place was just as good," said Sarah Myers. Even though the 10th graders took 1st, the Junior class had a ton of spirit.

From the start of the school year until the end, the Junior class was involved with their school. "I really think this year went well. I cannot wait until our senior year though," said President Aleisha Smith. The class was well-represented at all of the activities.

For many Juniors, this past year felt like their last because of the idea of going into year-round. "I am not looking forward to next year, because I am going to hate year-around," said Jackie Smith. The new year-round scheduling will divide the school into thirds, with two-thirds at school and one-third at home. "I only hope I get on 'A' track, because it will be the best for me," commented Benicia Williams. The scheduling of tracks will be decided by the end of the school year.

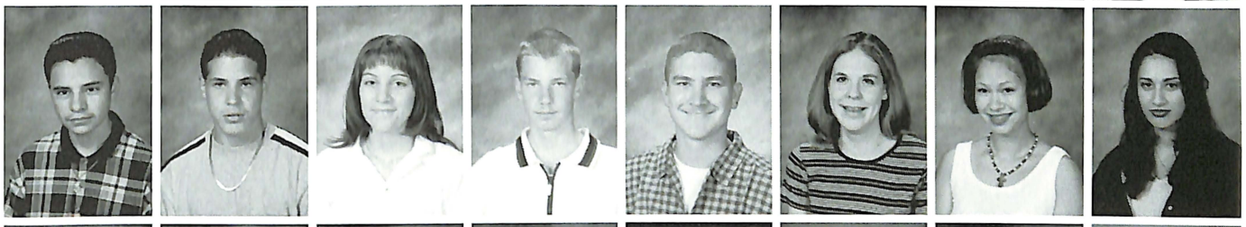

Juniors joined in the Wednesday Night Jam. "I think its cool to graduate in the year 2000," said Mike Cook. The Junior class is experienced in games at WNJ.

Juniors with gold cards posed for a picture. "We'll be the class of the century," said Melissa Morais. The Renaissance Assembly honored all the hard workers.

Cecilia Pinaitis sits in her front yard concentrating on her drawings for school. "One of my favorite hobbies is drawing ," stated Cecilia. All students at Armijo had some sort of hobby.

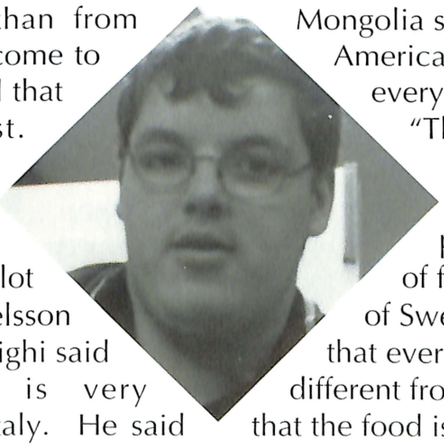

Exchange students proved their spirit by painting their faces. "I had fun with friends, showing spirit for my home country," said Marcus Laine. Painting faces had become a tradition at football games.

Exchange Students

While walking through the halls or sitting at a football game one could find any of the eleven foreign exchange students. For the nine months they were in the U.S. They stayed with a host family. "Staying with people that you know nothing about is weird at first but after a while they become like your second family," said Veronica Schurman from Switzerland. John Tsog-tsaikhan from Mongolia said that he chose to come to America because he's heard that everything here is the best. "The best thing about here is coming new meeting making a lot people and Malin Axelsson of friends," said of Sweden. Andrew Bighi said that everything in America is very different from his home town of Italy. He said that the food is different and so is the drinking age and driving age. "My favorite thing about California is the weather" said Kristine Otterlei.

After completing their year long experience in California, they went home leaving behind new friends. They went home with new ideas and stories to share with their family and friends.

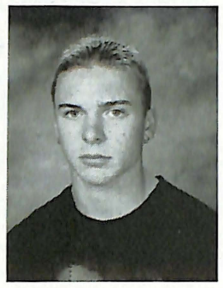

The AFS float was wild with enthusiasm. "It was fun on the float. The best part was we didn't get last," stated Andrew Bighi. Students contacted their families in order to get ethnic costumes.

At the AFS Halloween party, everybody had a great time. "It was really exciting carving my first pumpkin," said Raj Mangaraja. Many of the exchange students were introduced to American customs.

Rivaleries

Fairfield and Armijo High are longtime notorious rivals of each other. For as long as Armijo students can remember, Fairfield high has been the object of competition... if you do your homework, you will see this goes back for more than 15 years! "As long as I can remember!" said Thomas Bosson when asked how long he thought the rivalry had been going on. "I like it when they play each other, because I get to see some friends from Fairfield," said Kristen Latimer. The subject came up most when sports against the two schools arrived. Ticket sales grew obviously higher when playing against Fairfield's sports teams, and the Armijo rallies were most popular when playing against Fairfield.

When you look at it, both schools had an incredible amount of spirit and loyalty to their school and knew exactly how to show it. Who knows how long this tradition of rivalry will go on, but it always brought more excitement to our everyday school lives.

Football home games always had the largest attendance rate. "I'm glad to have been on the Armijo football team." Said Craig Webb. The football games were a popular hangout for friends.

Letterman jackets were used to show off accomplishments in sports. "Armijo pride is important to show!" Explained Jacob Glasshoff. Letterman's were bought during junior and senior year's in high school.

Armijo guys know how to show school spirit. "The rivalry between us made school more fun," said Josh Lovrin. Guys dressed as cheerleaders for the mock funeral.

Students showed their love for Indian pride. "Since I'm an exchange student, it's fun to have school spirit,"said Marcus Laine. Armijo had 11 exchange students.

10th Grade

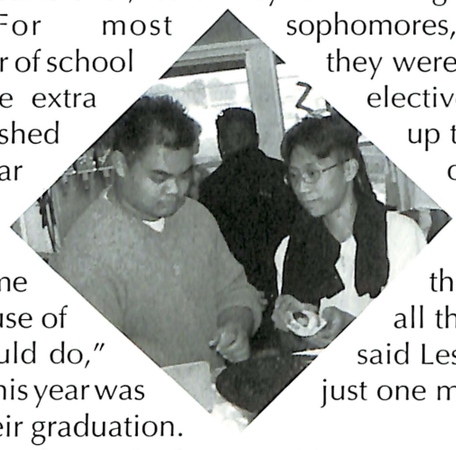

The sophomores cheered when their class was called at a rally. "The best thing about being a sophomore was not being called a little freshman anymore," said Diane Valdramid. There were many other advantages to being a Sophomore.

A class of World Civ. students diligently took notes. "Slacking off would be a bad idea because grades count from now on," said Nikki Anderson. World Civ. was one of the required sophomore classes.

The Sophomore class of 2001 saw great things this passed year. First off, they were no longer Freshmen and most received their licenses to drive. "There is nothing better than starting the year knowing that your freshmen year is over," said Cynthia Chong.

For most sophomores, the second year of school they were able to choose one extra elective and usually finished up their 2nd required year of P.E. "This year was much more exciting to me than last year, because of all the extra things I could do," said Leslie McNeill. This year was just one more step towards their graduation.

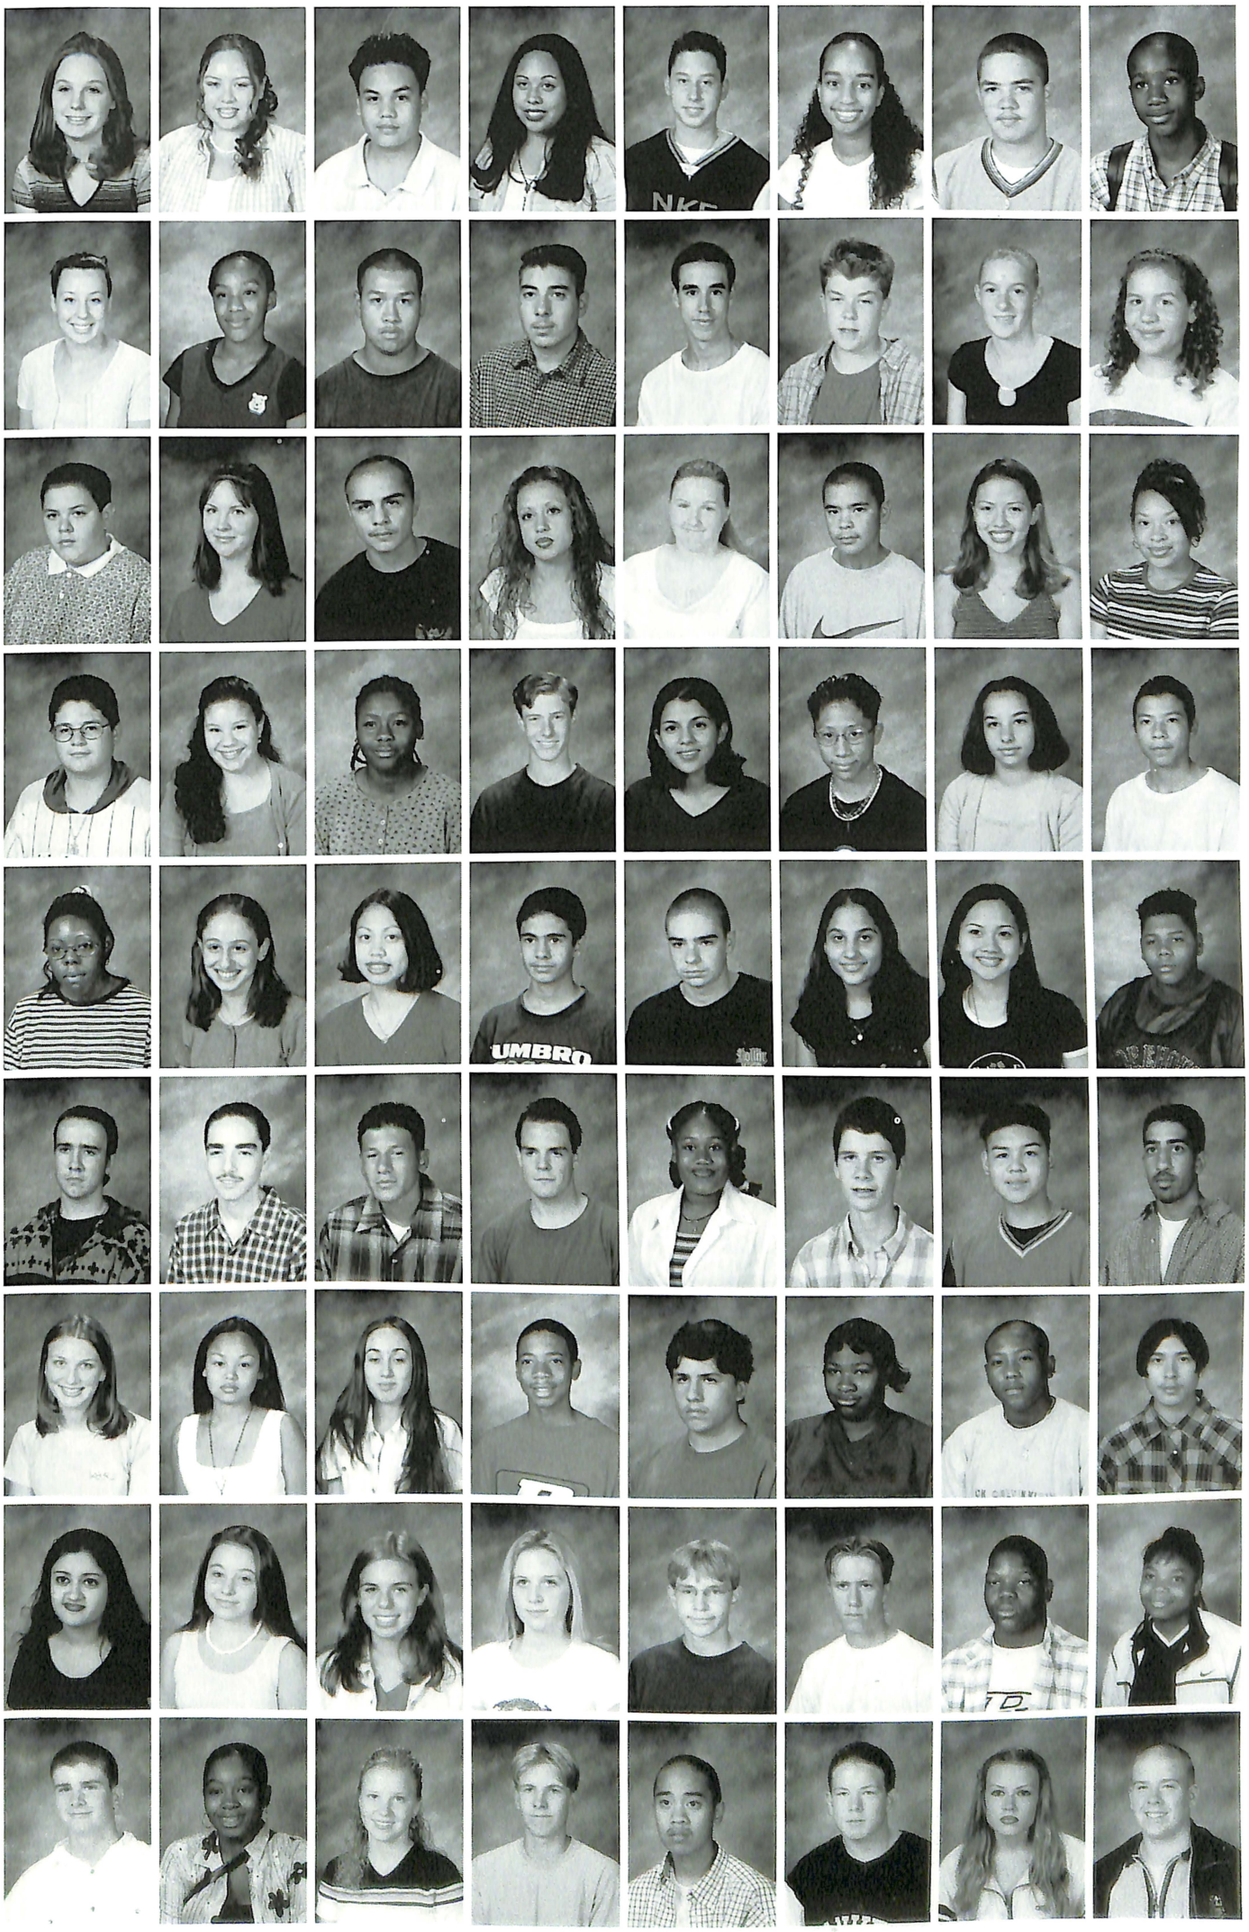

The class of 2001 had an exciting year with many school activities; From almost beating the seniors at the Wednesday Night Jam, to beating the Juniors, and winning the Homecoming float contest. "Beating the rest of the classes felt great. Especially the Seniors...since they burnt a part of our float," said Nicole Villanueva. The Sophomores did very well in both football and basketball homecoming, as well as in all school activities.

A group of sophomores were socializing at a football game. "The games were a lot of fun, you got to talk to your friends." Attending football games was a great way to show school spirit.

Spirited sophomores performed a dance on their homecoming float. "Being on the float was so much fun!" Said Heather Scicluna. The sophomores took first place that night.

Brian Bustamante walks down the halls of and sees tons of different kinds of people. " I think it's important to have many different types of people." Armijo had over 57 different ethnic group's during the 1998-1999 school year.

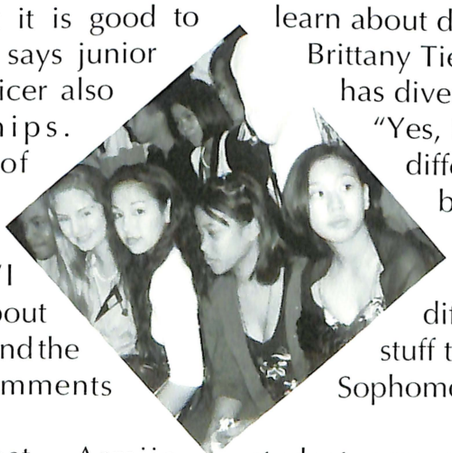

Hard at work in World Civ these students are far from ethnically similar. "I like working with different people," said Bao Yang. Ethnicity never played a part in determining who got the grades.

Diversity

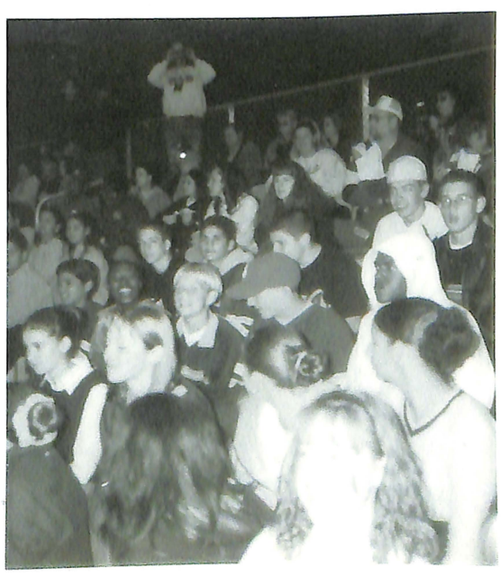

On any average day at Armijo the bell for first period rang at around 8:05 a.m. and students crowded the campus attempting to get to their first period class. But the people crowding around were far from similar. Most students said they had many friends with different racial and cultural backgrounds.

"I have lots of friends of different backgrounds. I think that it is good to learn about different cultures," says junior Brittany Tierney. Brant Spaicer also has diverse friendships. "Yes, I have friends of different backgrounds, but that doesn't bother me." "I have learned about different religions and the stuff they like to do," comments Sophomore Erick Miller.

Most Armijo students agreed that it is quite difficult on such a diverse campus to have no friends of divergent backgrounds. But having these friends, and learning about their differences is a positive experience. So when that bell rings, be sure to make some new friends and learn some new things about people.

Walking down the street with friends RJ Del Campo notes, "I have a lot of friends of diverse nationalities; I think that is important." Most students tend to have friends of more than one nationality.

Fans watch a home football game. "I have lots of friends of different backgrounds, its fun to do things with different people," said Ernesto Estrada. Having different friends opened up new windows for students.

Lunchtime

There was a time at Armijo, a period that all students can look forward to. No, it was not a class, this period was called lunch.

"Lunch is my favorite. I get to hang out with my friends." said Jan Agacinski on the subject. Lunch was a 45 min time period that marked the halfway point between the start and finish of school. During that free time, students would find a shady spot in the grass with friends, hang out in the parking lot, or go off campus to local resturaunts and grab a quick bite to eat.

Lunch was most popular beccause of it's relaxation time. "I usually like to go off campus with a couple of my friends," explained Mark Tomlinson about what he did during his lunch period. At lunch, you were on your own, to do what you wanted, eat, hang out, or maybe finish up the rest of last night's homework for your next period class.

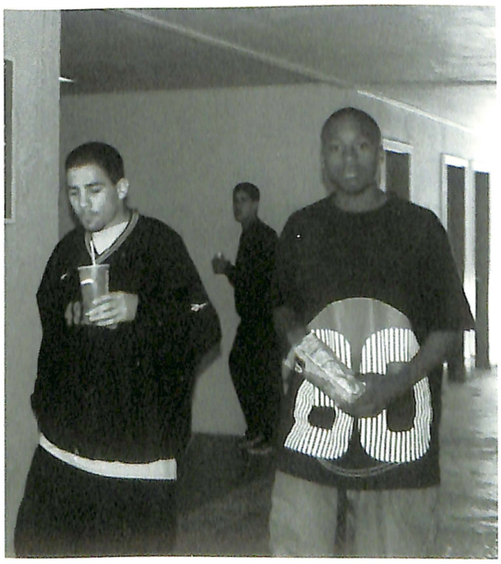

"I wish lunch was longer," said Mehgan Kelly. We were often surprised at how fast the time went by once the bell rang. We would get caught up in a conversation, or just plain have lost track of time. Lunchtime provided the relief of knowing school was almost over.

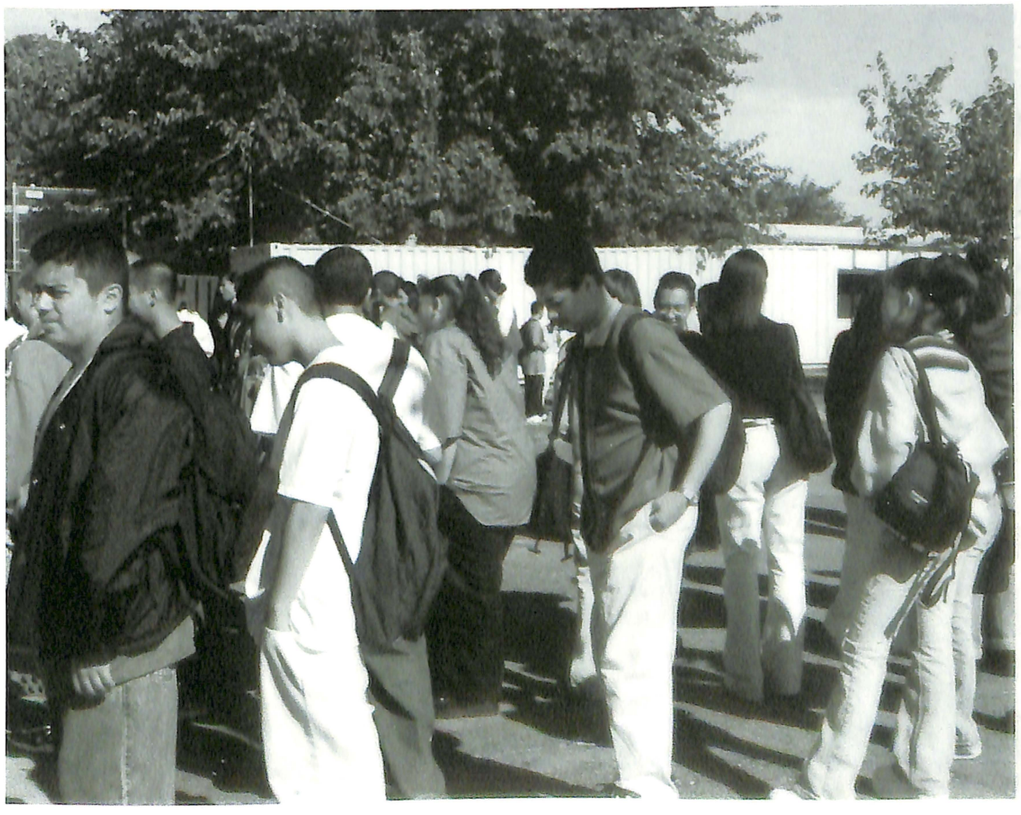

In the quad sat a group of underclassmen. "I usually like to eat on the grass with my friends," explains Alisha Castro. Sudents often ate where they felt most comfortable.

Some students relax on the benches in front of D-hall durring lunch. "I wish that the time they gave us for our lunch was longer," said Matt Howell about the time. Lunch was only a 45 min period.

There are many different places to eat. "Sometimes I like to go off campus for lunch," said Bobby Savage. Students often go downtown or to other restaurants for lunch.

Standing in line, students waited to buy lunch. "Waiting in line is okay as long as you get there fast enough," said Matt Bellerive. All over campus there are snack bars.

Many different things were done between classes. "Passing period is a good time to talk to friends," said Aiesha Payn. Walking to your classes never took up the full 8 min.

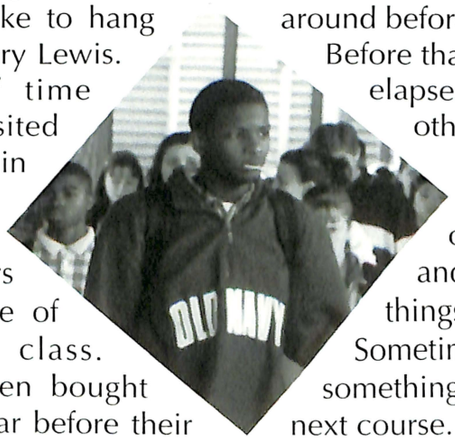

Time for a new class! "I like spending passing period seeing my girlfriend Kristen," said Ben Kevan. If students do not make it to their class in time they often expect a punishment.

Passing Period

Passing period was an eight minute time span between classes. During that time, a student must hurriedly go to the restroom, locker, car, etc. "I usually like to hang around before class." Admited Larry Lewis. Before that short amount of time elapsed, students visited other friends to squeeze in some last minute conversation, and/or went to their lockers and picked up a couple of things for their next class. Sometimes students even bought something to eat at the snack bar before their next course.

Towards the end, most students managed to make it to their classes and get to their seats before the last bell. "I think eight minutes is just enough time," said freshmen Lacie Prince. Some end up tardy of course, but all students agreed that a lengthy passing period was important for all. Whether going from gym to the Annex or D-hall to C-hall, the eight minute passing period was important.

Lockers are the students storage. "I don't like going to my locker, it's a hassle," said Atera Johnson. While some students use lockers, others keep their books with a car.

Students stroll through the annex to get to their next class. "First I go to the parking lot to talk to friends." said Angelica Alcazar. The parking lot was in the middle of campus.

9th Grade

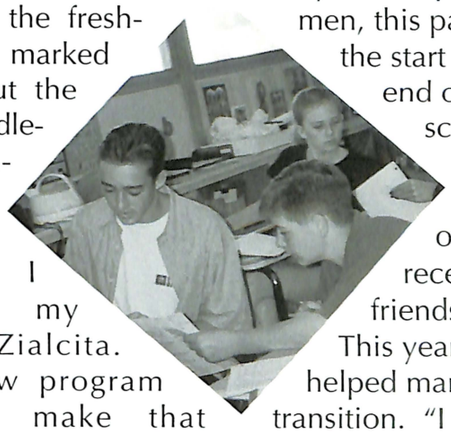

Freshmen crowded the gym and cheered loudly for their class. "My Freshman year was the bomb," said Erin Bell. The class of 2002 had a ton of pride this year.

The water polo team members wait in the small gym before preforming in a rally. "The rally was fun to be in," said Jill Formella. All of the other fall teams were introduced also.

The Freshmen class of 2002 had a fun and interesting year. "I liked my first year here at Armijo, we had a lot of fun," said Roxanne Dizon. For many this new year was full of many new experiences.

For the freshmen, this passed year not only marked the start of high school, but the end of being a young middle-schooler. "The transition was smooth because of all the help I received from my friends," said Patricia Zialcita. This year the new Link Crew program helped many freshmen make that transition. "I thought the Link Crew idea was a great way to help the freshmen," said counselor Chanda Williams.

The Freshmen class participated in many events at school and were always well represented. "I thought Wednesday Night Jam and Homecoming were great because of all the crazy freshmen who came," said Leanne Fernandez.

Some freshmen search the parking lot looking for upperclassmen to give them a ride. "It was fun hanging out in the parking lot with my friends," said Jackie Hopkins. In a year the freshmen will be driving themselves.

Most freshmen thought the transition into high school would be a difficult one. "Junior high is much easier," said Renee Riveria . But most of the freshmen adapted to the change quickly.

Technology

Technology was the base of our school, everything that was done in our school was done by computers and the latest technology. Without technology and all the computers we had, everything would be lost and confused and all sorts of thing would be lost and cluttered. If everything was lost that would cause all sorts of confusion: All of the grades would have been lost... even though some of us really wouldn't have minded at all. Plus, all of the records would get lost, so having all kinds of technology kept everything in order.

"I would hate to think what our school would have been like without computer and data bases, we would have to take time out of our day to research projects at the library instead of using our own computer," said Bob Greene. "School records would have to be hand written and it would have been so hard to keep track of all the records in our heads and human heads can only hold so much information," said Serena Eng. Computer memory can hold much more information than we can remember ourselves.

While working on a new computer, Fai Chan learns more about proccesing. " I like to work on computers," explained Fai. Internet was a good resource for students to explore the world.

Steve Arruta sat and concentrated on the computer. "Computers are really confusing because there's a lot of things to figure out," said Steve. Most students took the computer class inorder to learn more.

Anna Gyzeskowiak sat and pretended that the camara wasn't there. "I think that the library has a lot of different ways to find out information," commented Anna. Armijo's library offered many resources.

Students sat and took notes during computer class. " I like computer class because we got to explore the internet," said Jason Tompson. Computers were a good way to get new ideas.

Students read quietly in English class. "Trying to get homework in on time is very stressful," said Justin Rounanic. Of Mice and Men is one of many required reading materials.

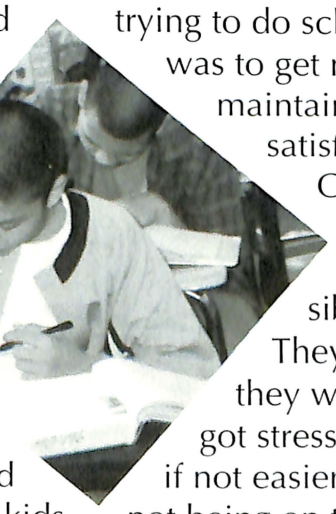

Rachelle sat and concentrated on doing her homework quickly and quietly. "I try to get my work done on time and make it as good as I can," said Rachelle Amposta. The key to a good future starts with grades.

Stress and Responsibility

Responsibility and stress were two things that apply to both students and teachers. Responsibility was something that everyone had to deal with. Along with that came stress. "Most stress was caused by studying for tests, and trying to do school work. "My responsibility was to get my homework in and maintain my grades to my satisfaction," said Freshmen Crystal Chambers. There were a lot of responsibility for teachers too. They had to make sure that they were organized. They also got stressed just as easy as the rest of us did if not easier. Their stress was caused by kids not being on time to class, kids being disruptive, and with having to grade all of those papers. Freshmen Miguel Espina said, "I got most stressed about the homework my teachers gave me because they didn't explain it well and it really made me mad, but my responsibility was to ask the teachers to take more time and explain and talk more about the homework." So whenever you get stressed just remember your not the only one.

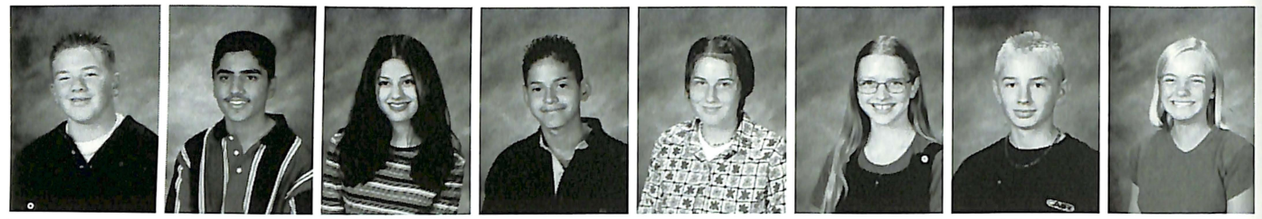

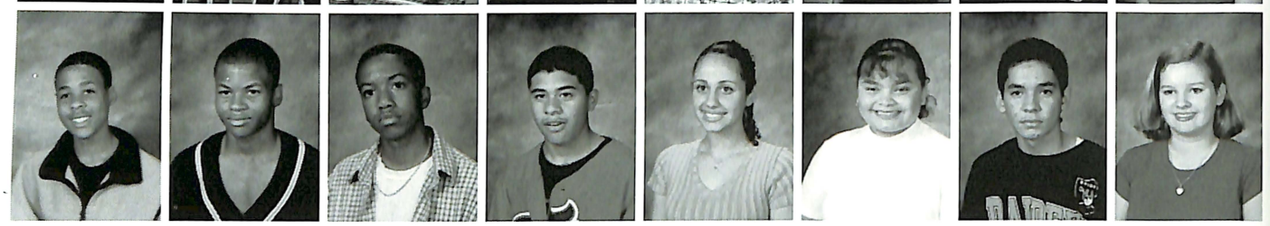

Students were hard at work in the classrooms. "I like all my classes since I don't get easily bored in any of them," said Binesha Williams. Many teachers tried to liven things up a little.

Students share answers with their friends. "I like this class since its not that stressful. They all call me the brain child," said Nick Burton. This method also gets you more friends.

Contemplation. n-
Expection or Intention

The participation of Armijo students wasastonishing the 1998-1999 school year. The students were completely dedicated to their studies, sports and their clubs. There were many different activities to chose from. Everyone at Armijo could find something to do that would suit them. The students uncovered their hidden talents. Doing many activities could be hard to balance but it payed off in the end.

In many of the cases others benefited from the activities that were run by the students. Many different community services were done for others. The Key Club made this a requirement for their club. The students in clubs gave up many lunch periods and after school to help others.

Sports teams proved that Armijo has many dedicated and skilled students. The fans came out to support the teams. Armijo showed everyone that when working together, our teams were unstoppable. There were so many different sports offered to the young men and women of Armijo. The athletes here had perseverance that lead them through the many obstacles that got in their way. They could not have done it without the support of family, teachers and students.

The teachers and faculty at Armijo, taught us many life lessons through the year. The showed us the rights and the wrongs. They worked long hours, at home and at school. to help us learn better and prepare us for our future.

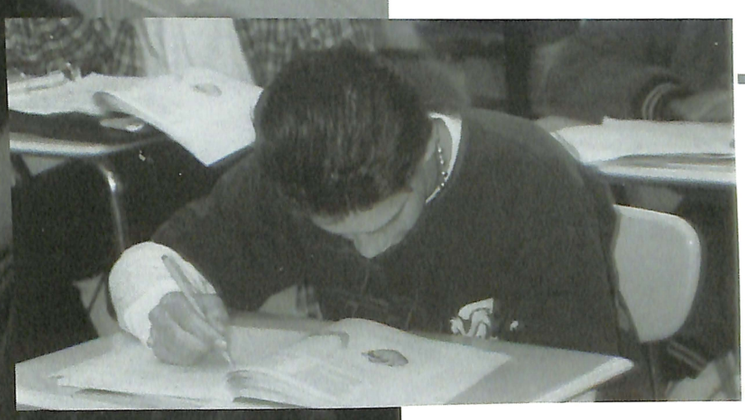

Technology was used in everyday life, from writing papers, to exploring the internet, and most importantly in school. "Taking a computer class helped me to get a better grasp on the happenings in technology," said Carly Damelio. Many students at Armijo had subscriptions to the internet.

Contemplation

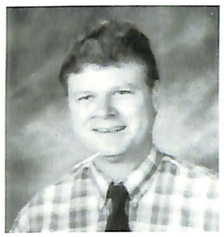

Clubs, sports, and academics had one thing in common, it helped students grasp a better understanding of life. It bonded us together in an ever growing mission of trying to make things better in the world. We no longer sat back and watched things happen. We got up and made differences.

Mr. Burke Social Studies Department Head

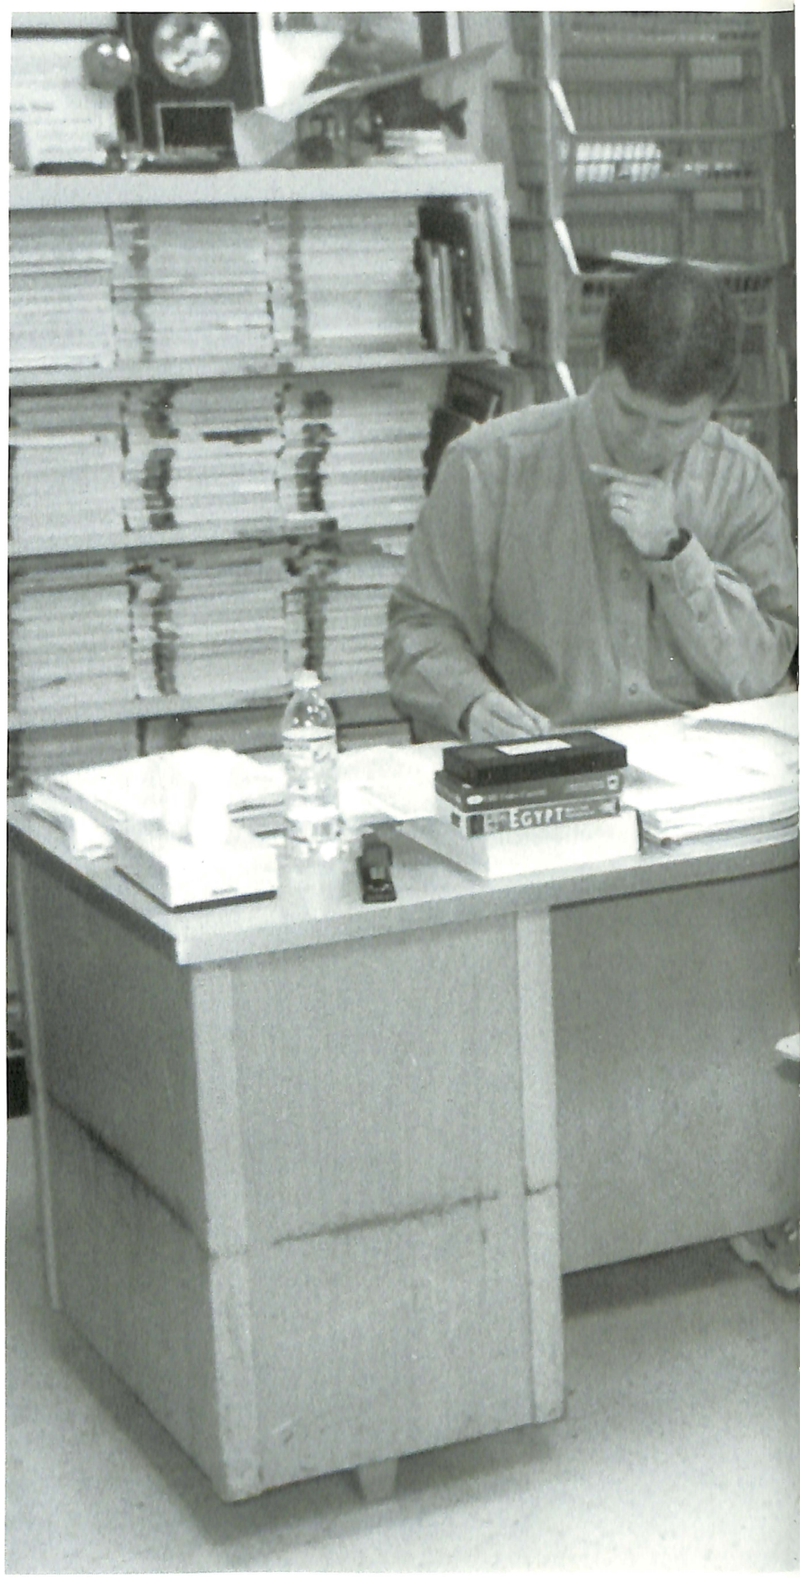

Mr. Burke has been teaching social science classes at Armijo for twenty-one years. He recieved an AA in social science from Sacramento city colledge, his BA and his teaching credential in social science, not to mention an MA in education.

Currantly he is teaching World Civilizations, honors World Civilizations, and Academic Decatholan. He thinks these students have energy, youthfulness, and spirit.

Duties of being the department chair include being at all the meetings, holding all of the meetings, and disturbuting the text books.

Mr. Batson stood behind the chalkbaord of his world civ. class. " If kids like to learn I like to teach," said Mr. Batson. World Civilizations is a sophomore class desinged to teach about world events.

Nicole Anderson sits in her World Civ. class and worked on her notes. Nicole says "I like learning about ancient civilizations." Mr. Burke, head of the social science deparment is her teacher.

PAST

Freshman may have had the luxery of not having to take a history class but the next three years it was requiered. World Civilizations, U.S. History, American Goverment and Economics were the history based classes taught at Armijo. Economics and American Government were senior classes taken by semesters. They talked about supply and demand, unemployment rates and the judicial system. "Mr. Buckingham is a challenging teacher, but I like his humor," commented Regina Stoyahovsky.

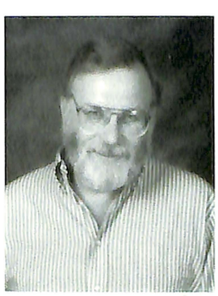

U.S. History was a junior class which taught about the traditons, laws and how America came to be. U.S. History is the basics of America and was helpful for their next year of government class.

After a year long break from history, sophomores returned to world civilization. "It was a class that teaches about other countries, wars, and different time periods in history," sophomore Jacob Glasshoff commented about his third period world civ. Students find that learning about the economy, how laws are passed and ancient civilizations enables them to learn from our country's past mistakes and it also advanced their way of thinking about life.

Numbers

Learning how to find the area of that triangle and what "x" stands for, are the basics of math. The class of 1999, there was only a two year requirement for graduation, however classes of 2000, and on need 3 years. "I like my teacher and it helps learning easier," says Kenny Vannest a sophomore. In algebra one and two; students learn to solve equations, multiply polynomials and get a strong start for the more challenging math classes ahead. Many of Armijo 's students enjoy geometry. Geometry is a subject that uses shapes and angles to solve problems. Next comes trig. Trig. is short for trigonometry; which is a little bit of geometry and algebra. Pre-Calculus was another name for Trigonometry. "Mr. Hicks explains the equations and problems in plain english," exclaimed sophomore Jason Pontillas.

The highest level of math at Armijo is calculus. Calculus proves to be a rigorous and challenging course for the students that take it. Students learn how to solve problems that include all three years of math. Other math classes include statistics and business math.

Mr. Bryan enjoys teaching all of these subjects, he claims that they are exciting. The most creative and exciting thing they do is make art work out of geometric constructions.

He feels that there is a mathmatical explaination for everything in the universe. All of the math he teaches is used in all of his students everyday life. Whether it is buying lunch or multiplying, math is essiential.

Sophomore Elizabeth Roses was listening to Mrs. Evers explain the assignment. "Math is fun to do," said Elizabeth. Mrs. Evers makes all her classes fun. Elizabeth enjoys learning new formulas.

Ali Ries concentrated as she took her math test. " I enjoy the challenge that my teacher presents." Ali felt that math allowed her brain to think at a college level.

Students may select from academic offerings such as resource class, independent study, honors, and advanced placement classes. Her goal as a head of the English Department is to help students to become skilled and articulte writers and speakers. Mrs. Mugg enjoys taking her clases to cultural events. " The pen is mightier than the sword," is Mrs. Mugg's favorite expression. Mrs. Mugg loves being department head.

Alicia Holcombe discussed a book with another student. "English teaches students proper language skills so you don't sound ignorant in the real world," she said. English skills help prepare students for the future.

Senior Brent Webb read a novel in his shakespear class. "English is the most important subjects and its interesting.", Brent says. Shakespeare helped students with memory skills.

Words

The Crucible, Fahrenheit 451, The Great Gatsby, and The Joy Luck Club, these are just a few novels that were read by the English classes at Armijo. " It's a lot of work but my writing is improving for college, commented Debbie Krisman.

English teachers taught styles of writing, plays by William Shakespeare and novels written by Scott Fitzgerald. Mrs. Evans an American literature teacher states, " There is a need for more gammar." The English department was working hard to make sure that proper use of verbs, nouns, and adverbs were being taught correctly.

Short stories, creative writing, Shakespeare, Public speaking, Advanced composition and Women's Lit were semester classes. Mrs. Radesky taught speech and had her students write and present speeches. Ms. Page was a new edition to the English staff, she taught Creative writing and helped students grasp the 21 senses of being a good writer. In Shakespeare, Mrs. Frost taught plays such as A Midnight Summers Dream and Hamlet. Every student in Mrs. Streets Women's Lit. class had to write a comparative essay on three colleges. Senior Hasi Elliot commented, "My research project helped me prepare for college. Women's Lit. is a class that teaches about women who are unknown."

Experiments

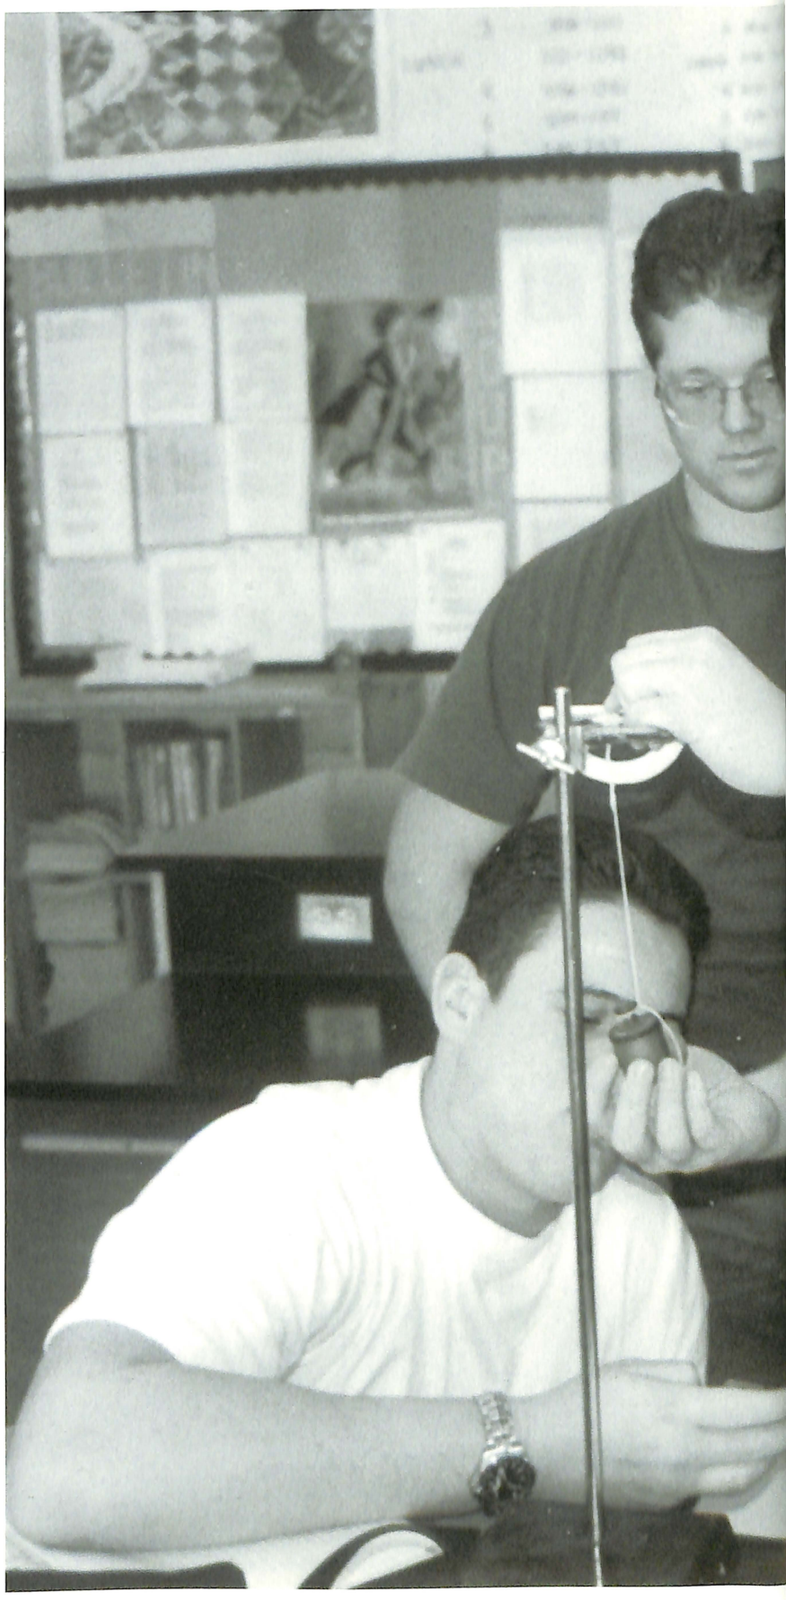

Biology, physical science, chemistry, agricultural science, physics, and anatomy are just a few of the science related classes you can take at Armijo.

"We're learning about cells and how they divide. I thought it would be boring but it's really interesting," said freshmen Micah Baiz.

In Biology you will learn about the enviorment and the different eco-systems. Physical Science taught things about force and motion of objects. Physics and Chemistry are more advanced science courses dealing with more hands on scientific delimas. Learning about the muscles, bones, and how the human body functions is what anatomy is all about. "Chemistry is really challanging and it is fun learning about chemicals," said Kurt Westfield.

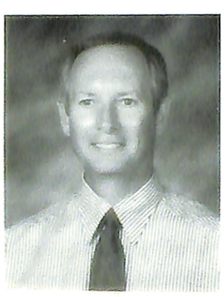

Learning how to test chemicals. apply formulas, and use concepts in everyday life is what the science program at Armijo is all about.Doing labs, and experimenting with chemicals is what most students found challenging and fun this year in science.

This year Mr. Mitchell teaches physical science. Two sections of college prep and three sections of honors. He trys his best to make science interesting and strongly believes that Americans must be scientificly literate to have a bright and prosperous future.

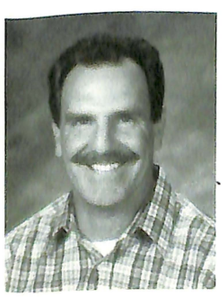

Mr. Mitchell tries to incorperate history and the future into his science labs.He does labs with the students and does them as much as possible. "Doing science is more fun than being told about science," says Mr. Mitchell.

Lee Haynes helped with the work on a lab in his physics class. " On hand expeirience with what we learn in the book is what I like,"Lee said. Many students enjoyed labs and on hand experiments.

Briana Taitano studied her biology book to find the answers. "I like learning about the vastness of biology," Briana comments. Students were somtimes given chances to study in class.

Mr. Sechler
Art Department Head

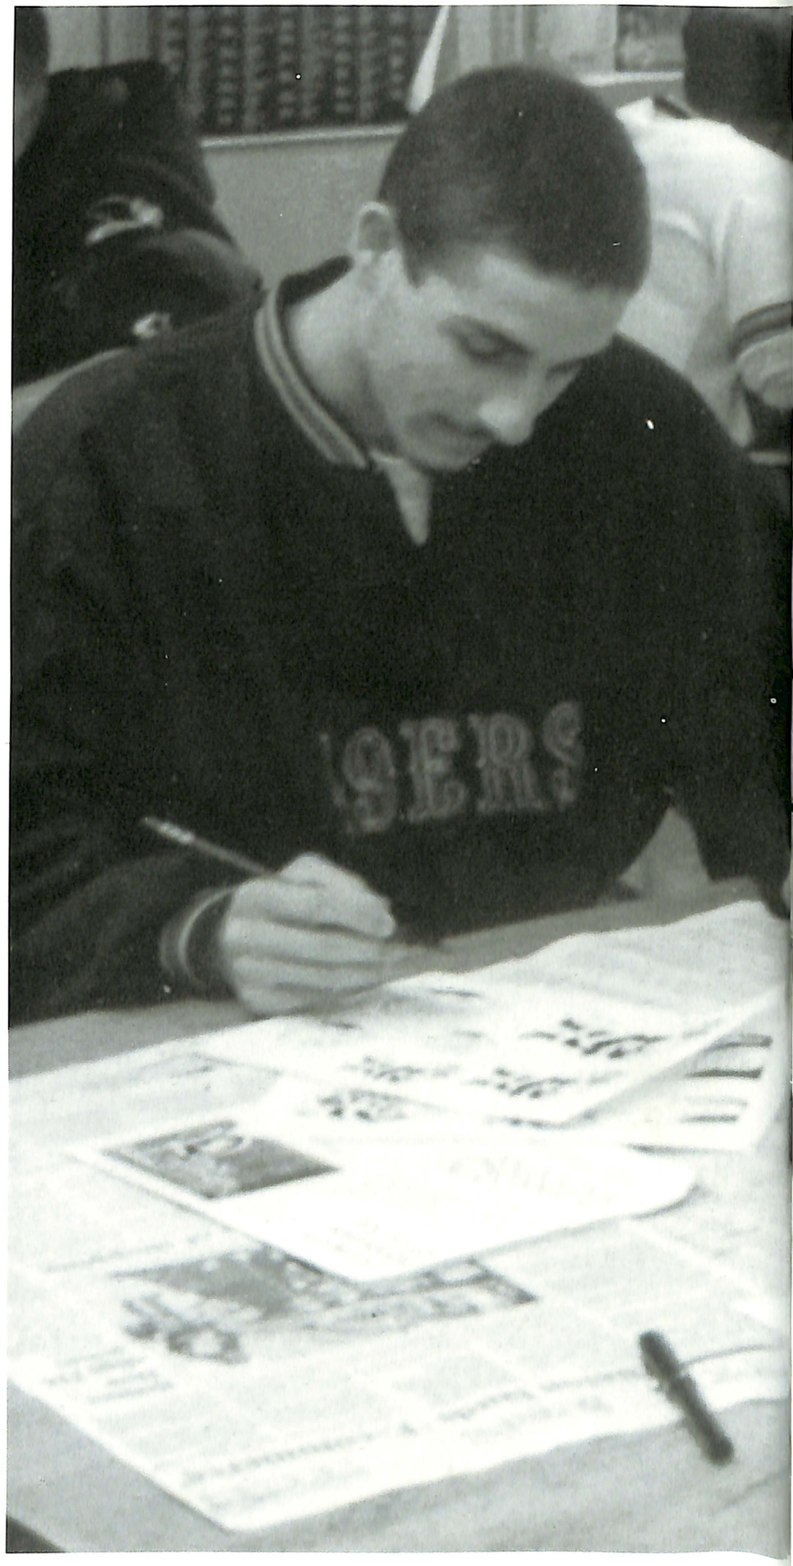

Mr. Sechler teaches art one, figure dwawing, advanced art, advanced placment art, and art history. He teaches high school students that artistic skills are usefull for everyone and they can learn to improve their drawing. In jewelry class he teaches how to be an intellengent consumer and know how to reconize good jewelry when purchasing rings, necklaces, braclets, and pendants.

Mr. Sechler believes skill development is very industrualistic. Some students know little to nothing about drawing, painting, and designing while others know a lot. He tries to accomidate both levels of the students and faces the every day challenge to surpass what they currently know and venture into new levels of skill. " Being a creature in art can manifest itself though the ways you dress and decorate your surrondings." says Mr. Sechler

His motto is, "Fear of futrue cam also lead to fear of success."

Michael Stiefel worked on an art project with a partner. "Art lets me be creative and ots fun," Michael said. Art classes had always been a very popular elective class at Armijo.

Sophomore Rami Kassis used an ink well to illustrate his art. "This class is fun because I really like to make figures and learn perspectives," Rami said. Art was open to all grade levels.

Creative

Art is found about everywhere at Armijo.The art club and other art organizations make their presence at Armijo very well known.Armijo offers a varity of art oriented classes.Ceramics industrial art and jewelry just to name a few. Jeff Labo is a well known artist at Armijo. "My friend is a really good artist and he got started." Not only is the great art program but it offers a benificial learning program. Vangough, Picasso, and Leonardo DiVinci are just some of the many artists brought to your knowledge. Several people do art outside of Armijo. Haley Wilson does water colors independent from Armijo. "My teacher really influenced my work." The two art teachers at Armijo are Mr. Sechler and Mr. Bartz. Every one seems to have wonderful things to say about them. "Mr. Sechler is the bomb,"claimed Joe Pivarnich. Students seemed to enjoy the art classes. "I learned drawing skills and I got to relax all in the same period," said Melinda Phillips. The average art class covers all sorts of art to include: stripling, water colors, and simple skectching.

Art and Armijo are a very good combination. The next Divinci may be an Armijo graduate!

Working

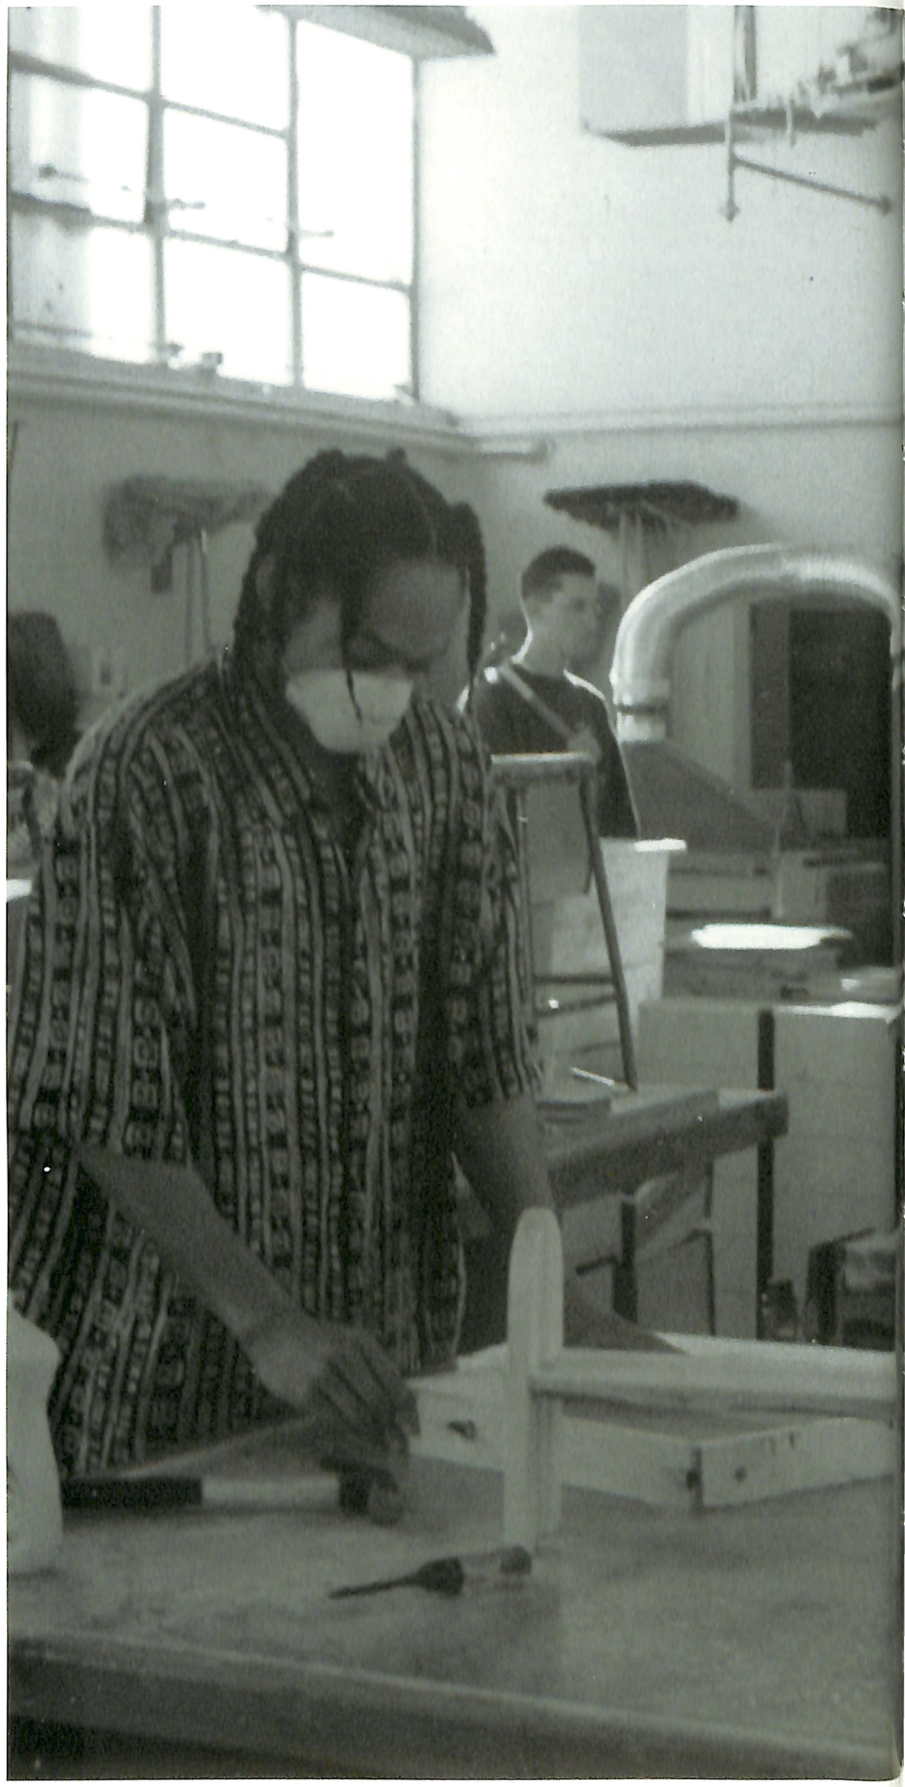

All of the Industrial Education classes taught at Armijo are located in S hall. There is auto 1, 2, and 3. In the first semester of auto no shop there is book work in classes 2 and 3. The students change oil, work on change tires, and explore the parts of the engines. The freshmen usually work on small gas engines.

"I like to work on my car, it beats having to take it to the automechanics shop," says senior Eli Walise.

Other classes inclue woodworking and constuction. As well as automotive, electronics, computer repairs, CAD drating, photography, metal working, welding, small gas engine repair, woodworking construction, itroduction to technology, plant maintenance, technical math, and bulding technolojy floor covering.

Mr. Maddalena who is head of the department of the Industrial Educations says, "Student participation in our department can prepare students in a career path that will make them succsesful in the world of work."

Mr. Maddalina, head of industrial education department, teaches wood-working and construction. This department offers students courses in automotive, electronics/ computer repair, computer drafting, photography, metal working, welding, small gas engine repair, and woodworking.

He also offers a club called the VICA Club which is Vocatioal Industrial Education club of America. It is a construction and a photography club.

Students that take any industrial class are being prepared for the future in construction.

Junior Eric Rivera busily worked on a raindeer made of wood. "This class is cool because I get to work with tools," Eric said. Students made many projects in woodshop this year.

Tony Epps worked on the jigsaw carefully. "I like this class because I get to make cool woodwork," Tony commented. Students took days and sometimes weeks to finish their projects.

Karen Meek
Physical Education
Depattment Head

As head of the Physical Education department Mrs. Meek was a physical education teacher who still had many other tasks as department head. She was in charge of ordering, counting, and arranging the P.E. equipment and other supplies for the classes.

Mrs. Meek was obligated to attend monthly meetings for head department chairs. She also was in charge of making the P.E. schedules and assigning teachers to particular activities. Mrs. Meek along with the other teachers took on a different P.E. class every six weeks.

Also planning and organizing department meetings was a part of her job. As head of this department she must plan the budget for the department, order P.E. uniforms for the girls and keep records of the uniform sells throughout the year. Her job was not an easy task to be fulfilled, but she made it look like a breeze.

Laura Deely ran with a friend in during her P.E. class to help her train for the cross country season. "I enjoyed cross country this year it was a good work out." Cross Country was a popular sport this year as in years past.

Underclassmen Amani Takher said "My favorite sport in P.E. would have to be volleyball, because I enjoyed winning with my cool team." Students liked volleyball because of the team effort it provides.

Exercise

Physical Education was probably by far one of the most fun classes offered at Armijo. This year P.E. consisted of many sports and creative physical activities. Some of the activities taught were ; volleyball, yoga, basketball, weight training, baseball, swimming and badminton. " I like being able to pick the same thing every time; weight training. It keeps me in shape," said senior Amin Saleh. Scantron tests are needed to receive a twelve or eleven which was equal to an 'A'. P.E. classes are done in three week intervals P.E. uniforms were $17.00 and purchased in the beginning of the week. The clothes were dark grey shorts and a royal purple shirts. Lockers were also required to keep valuables safe in the locker rooms. P.E. was a student favorite because it served as a break from the academic classes. Physical Activities helped students relieve stress from classes and homework. "P.E. is fun and easy," said Jordan Baird. P.E. was an excellent way for students to interact in a educational, physical and fun environment. " I love P.E. because I like taking Yoga and it's fun to have a class with my friends, "said freshmen Alex Renley.

Different

Foreign Language is a class for all grades. Incoming freshman took Spanish and continued till their junior year . Two years of foreign language class is required to get your diploma. Other foreign language classes that were offered were German and French. The main reason why the classes were offered is for the cultural barrier that students needed to cross.

Leanne Fernandez says " I enjoy learning Spanish because I can use my skills in restaurants or when I talk with my friends. "

The foreign language department had Spanish one through Spanish 4. Same with French and German. Most of the classes took place in A hall. Having a Foreign language class made Armijo a more cultural.

Why do people chose the language that they do? Well for many reasons. Some because they had relatives or ancestors that spoke that language. Others took it because they wanted to be with friends or they liked the teacher. "I took this class because I like to do the homework with my friends and because it's fun to learn about different countries," said Sean Ryan.

Taking foreign language classes helped students to increase their vocabulary and gave them a greater understanding of another country and its culture. Oral presentations, homework assignments, with tests included, were mainly based on memorization of the foreign language. Although at times work may seem long and hard, most students agree that it is well worth the creative effort that they have put forward to earning an A in the foreign language class.

Depattment Head

The head of the foreighn language department is Mrs. Harvey. She tought Spanish and French this year. Mrs. Harvey's job as head of this department is to help corridinate curriculum, budget, activities, and see that the department continues to offer to students ways of expanding their horizons and adding a very important job skill of a second or third language to their expierence.

This year the Spanish III students did an interesting project. They made a "tombstone" to honor some one who passed away, such as a relitive, friend, or a celebrity. Mrs. Harvey put all of these on her walls. Mrs. Harvey's future plan include short exchange programs with homestays, a class of spanish speakers or perhaps adding an Asian language to our current offerings of French, Spanish, and German.

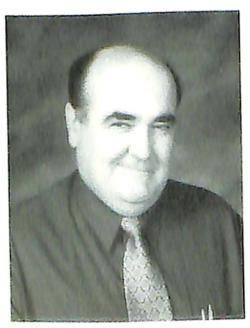

Junior Krysten Andrews asked a question in her second period spanish class. "I liked the way Mrs. Smith taught spanish, she made it interesting." Many spanish classes involved interactive projects to help students learn the language.

Sophomore Joey Williams was studing her spanish assingment. "We did a lot of book work in the class but I felt the challenge was fun." Foreign language classes had many assingments that encouraged students to memorize.

The Business Department Chair had responsibility of training students for occupations found in the world of business. Their concentration is in three areas; accounting, marketing and Computer Information System. Our goal is to get students ready for entry level employment and entry into Business Administration major at the college/university level.

Mr. Cymanski's job as head of department is to provide leadership for business teachers.

The introduction of computer technology and training has been and continue to be his most important projects.

Sophomore Alexis Raney types in her computor class. "I am really suprised of the outcome of this class," she said. She felt it had taught her more than she expected.

Rachel Curtis worked on a design in her interior design class. "I enjoy this class because I want to be an interior decorator," said Rachel. Many students took classes that they needed for their career path.

Working

Business classes were helpful to students who wanted to pursue careers in the computer science, accounting, business, and law fields. Students that enrolled in business electives wanted to increase their business knowledge for their futures. Daesiry Desamito commented, "I took this class to experience what it would be like to be a part of business. This class has opened me up to a whole new environment. It has also helped me to be, more social and knowledgeable in business." Business classes included computers, typing, home economics, and the popular student club DECA. Business classes help students enrich their knowledge in the business world. "I think DECA is a great opportunity for students to expand their horizons and learn more about business and the free enterprise economy," said Billy Yeh.

The business department is one of Armijo's traditional classes, and will continue to inspire and enhance the students of Armijo High.

Leaders

The people that kept Armijo running was the administration. The administrator had always been an awesome support system of leadership and responsibilities. The administration includes Terry Johnston, Lilli Rollins, Carol Orr, Mary Jo Fox, and Rae Lanpheir. Each administrator had his or her own job.

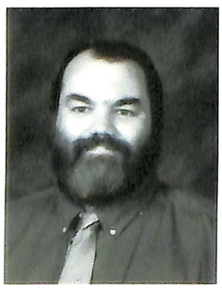

Troy Johnston was in charge of freshmen discipline and he helped with the Renaissance program and curriculum. New to Armijo was the sophomore class administrator Mary Jo Fox. "I'm glad to be working at Armijo, I look forward to great years here." The junior class administrator was Lilli Rollins. She was in charge of things like grad night, the drug free graduation party, and parents on campus. Carol Orr is the senior class administrator in change of red ribbon week and graduation. Rae Lanpheir was Armijo's principle. He works on the budget for Armijo and works on over all disciplinary actions for all the students. All the administrators also patrolled the campus to keep things in order. The school would not have been ran properly if it were not for these people.

Treasurer

Mrs.Franey had been Armijo's treasurer for 24 years. When she first started working at Armijo there was very little record keeping. The deposits were small. It became much more complicated by the 1998-1999 school year. They had to change everything to computerized systems over the years and started working with more difficult accounting softwear. She has been here so long that over the years Armijo became a second home to her.

Over the years she has gained and improved her great orginization skills, was very detailed orientated and worked very well indepedently. Mrs. Franey enjoyeds working with other students, staff, and parents. She was a people person with high energy and always had a positive attitude and personality.

Assistant PrincipleTroy Johnston talks on the phone. " I conduct a lot of school business on the phone, and also get to spend a lot of time around the campus." Administrators spent quality time working in their offices.

Principle Rae Lanphier worked at his lap top computer." The office is my least favorite place to be," said Mr. Lanphier. Mr. Lanphier said his real happiness was with the students.

Leadership

Planning the unexpected

Four mornings a week they had to get up early and go to school; four mornings a week they went to leadership. It was a time for organizing school activities, events, and rallies. "Getting up early was no big deal, I have been doing it for four years," said Rami Fernandez.

This past year was different than years past. Leadership advisor, Dan Harrison, was gone for three weeks twice during the school year. "This year was hard because Mr. Harrison was gone. But we seemed to accomplish all we set out to do," said ASB President Nikki Carrera. Cheerleading advisor Mrs. Engell and the sophomore advisor Chanda Williams took over for Mr. Harrison.

On Tuesday Mornings each class met separately. Float preparation, and class events topped the agendas. "Our class could get a lot done on Tuesday's," said Dana Carion. "We used the time to work on just the events that effected us," she concluded. Besides floats, Wednesday Night Jams, and concessions, other class events were implemented.

Monday morning meetings were for officers only, which allowed time to plan the upcoming week. "I always found out what we had to do next on Monday mornings," said Freshmen President Roxanne Dizon. Leadership was a time for the active students on campus to plan great activities for the whole school.

Band

Playing unexpected tunes

Marching, playing, and jazzing their way to success, the Armijo music program truly shined this past year "with pride." This spirited motto applied to every aspect of the music program, from jazz to colorguard and Advanced Placement music theory to concert band. Through the guidance and instruction of a skilled music instructor, Ms. Carmel Pajita, and the support of the band council and additional instructors, the music program at Armijo enjoyed a great year.

Seasonal music competitions kept the Armijo music program in constant activity. Marching and field show practice began in the twilight of summer vacation, ending victoriously at the annual trip to Antelope Valley in Southern California. The spring marching season ended this year triumphantly with stunning success as well. Certainly, in competition, the Armijo Superband and Colorguard were unparalleled.

What was expected....

When asked what they enjoyed most about playing in Armijo's band, students responded with enthusiasm. "I made lots of new friends playing in the Percussion section," said freshman Jeremy Smith. Sophomore Alma Hernandez replied, "I enjoyed gaining knowledge of music. To me, it is a whole new world." Similar to Smith, junior Kamil Manuel exclaimed, "I met a lot of people. It was a good experience!" An involved senior band member, Tina Olsen, responded, "I would recommend joining the band. I thoroughly enjoyed gaining the experience it gave me."

Armijo's Marching band moved down the street on a sunny October day. "Our many hours of practice have paid off at the reviews," said Taniia Edwards. Armijo's band proved to be very competitive this year, often taking first and second place awards.

Members of the SuperBand marched down the hallways during football homecoming week. "I love the drum corps!" said Austin Jansen. In addition to their first period school tour, Armijo's Pep Band played music during the football game.

Following the expected command

ROTC is the Reserve Officer Training Corps. This program teaches cadets basic military formulas, aerospace science as well as morality, leadership and positive values.

This year in particular, the ROTC program worked closely with NHS to provide relief to storm ravaged victims in Honduras. By setting up a "stuff drive" drop off station, the corps amazingly collected 300 articles of clothing! Later in the year, according tradition, ROTC also hosted their annual ball at the Officer's Club. It was there that the cadets came together, as a unit, in order to celebrate and give recognition to those who had made advancements.

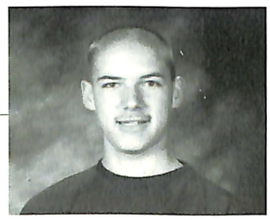

What was expected....

When asked what they gained from the ROTC experience, students of different classes seemed to respond similarly. Freshman Heather Barry commented that ROTC helped her build leadership skills to shape her life. Sophmore Chris Fabian commented that ROTC taught him discipline and skills for the working world. Erin Patterson, a junior, said, "It helped me develop my skills in leadership and work better with other people." Senior, Phillip Johnson replied that he "gained the knowledge of how to be a proper leader and be an efficient manager of tasks."

ROTC members sat at group tables after their dinner. "It was really fun, mostly because we had a cool DJ," said Janella Rillo. Most members agreed that the music and dancing were the highlight of their evening.

ROTC cadets and their dates danced at the ROTC ball last January. "This year's ball is one night I will always remember," said Darelee Doraton. In addition to awards and dancing, the ball was catered with an extravagant selection of food.

Exchanges reveal the unexpected

This year the American Field Service, AFS, organized many fun tasks and activities for the club members and exchange students. Whether it was working hard at a car wash or having fun at a party, AFS members continually demonstrated that they were not ashamed to do anything out of the ordinary. "AFS is a fun club to be a member of and I have a lot of great memories from the year," commented club president Kelly Dorrough.

One of the best programs AFS organized this year was the "short term exchange." As a part of this program, 25 students from New York came to Armijo in February. In April, Armijo's AFS exchange students went to New York. "It was an awesome experience!" Exclaimed Veronice Schurmann, a devoted member of AFS.

Overall, AFS promoted peace and understanding throughout our school and more importantly, our world.

What was expected....

When asked why they joined AFS, a variety of different responces were received. Freshman Alvin Tiu responded, "I joined AFS becuase it has a lot of activities." Sophmore Laura Valcarcel said she joined AFS this year because she was in it last year and she had experienced great advantages in meeting new people. Caryn Meagher, a junior, replied, " I wanted to be more multicultural and help assist the foreign exchange students." Senior Yang Thor said that it gave her a chance to meet students of other countries and cultures.

Flags from around the world were displayed by AFS members to symbolize the multiculturalism of this club. "I met students from all over the world, right here at Armijo."said Carrie Walbolt. Armijo's full time students and exchange students alike participated in AFS's football homecoming float.

DECA
Who to expect in buisness

An Association of Marketing Students, better known as DECA, provided members with educational and leadership opportunities in order to better themselves. In DECA, students gained knowledge of marketing and the business world through different activities.

This year was a record breaker, as DECA had it's largest enrollment ever and won 43 awards at the Northern California Career Development Conference. Members competed in different categories such as a written test and role-plays. Among the finalists for Armijo were Chris Claus, Roger Jao, Lisa Nguyen, Alicia Rowinski and Stephanie Armanino. Additionally, Ebony Freeman became a state officer as Nor-Cal District President. This appointment was a first for Armijo's chapter. DECA members also participated in fun activities such as car washes, a mini-mini conference held at Armijo, a Thanksgiving potluck, and Bon-Bon candy sales. DECA members shined through with spirit and unity making this year the most successful and enjoyable year DECA has ever had.

What was expected....

When asked what they gained most from participating in the DECA program, the verdict was a positive experience. Freshman Kim Noble responded, "I liked the field trips that we earned. I met a lot of new people." Likewise, sophomore Sisavath Bandouvong responded that the conferences were productive and that the dances were exciting. Junior Rowena Banda also found the DECA program had a positive impact on her life. "DECA is a lot of fun!" Senior Roger Jao said that DECA "helped him learn about economics and money skills for the real world."

Deca students gathered in one room at the Nor-Cal conference. "We explored the business and marketing world," said Bianca Aranda. Most Deca students were members of the program to explore future careers as entrepreneurs.

F.F.A

Who to expect in farming

This year Armijo FFA hit the groud running by developing and establishing leadership since the first days of school. Armijo's chapter of FFA had elected six new officers this year, all which possessed the talent and dedication necessary to lead this organization to success.

FFA organized and completed a number of productive and fun activities this year. "Work days" were organized to improve the farm on Armijo's campus. During these days, much time and effort was dedicated to planning and completing new areas on the farm. One of these such projects was the reconstruction of buildings to accomodate the growing number of members interested in agriculture. Over all, it seems that this year's Armijo chapter of FFA personified the National FFA motto, "...Learning to live, and living to serve."

What was expected....

When asked what they liked best about FFA, Freshman Ashante Boykin responded, "We get to raise livestock, and work on the farm." Sophmore Callie Clagg responded differently when she said, "I like going to leadership events and meeting new people in FFA." Junior Lisa Tenbrink said, "I enjoy learning about agriculture because I am looking into it as a profession." Moreover, senior Brian Weber said he liked to prepare for the fairs and to help the younger FFA members in their preparations as well.

FFA members and parents got the school ready for the annual livestock projects. "We accomplished so much this year," commented James Garcia referring to repairs completed around the farm. As a result of FFA's dedication, Armijo's farm experienced a complete makeover.

FFA members helped each other on a workday. "It is hard work but we are making progress," commented Chris Abbas. Without the teamwork that was everpresent within this organization, this year's chapter of FFA would not have prospered.

Key Club

Giving unexpectedly

"Cali-Nev-Ha! Cali-Nev-Ha!" were the sounds of spirit cheered by the Key Club members. Starting off this school year, Key Club had made a large impact at Armijo. Consisting of over 180 members, this community service organization demonstrated the impact that selfless dedication can make on any community. "I am very proud of what these young adults accomplished this year. Project after project these students not only had fun, but learned a great deal of responsibility," replied faculty Key Club advisor Mr. Batson. Ranging from canned food drives in cooperation with the Salvation Army to assisting a North Bay YMCA Haloween Haunted House, Key Club has been recognized by the community as containing true leaders. Jessica Yett encompassed the motivated Key club spirit when she stated, "I think cooperation is an important quality that every club should have. "

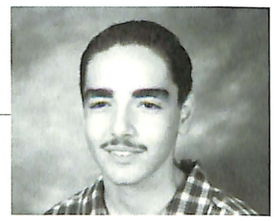

What was expected....

When asked why they joined Key club, members responded with a variety of different answers. Freshman Meagan Brooks responded "I wanted to do community service and it seemed like a fun thing to do." Similarly, Shawn Bananzadeh commented, "Key club is a good way to give back to the community, and it is a good use of time." Junior Tameka Haymon enthusiastically said "Serving others is fun!" On the other hand, senior Kyle Lessler saw Key Club as an opportunity to add to his college resume, "It will look good on college applications."

Key Club members signed up for service projects at weekly meetings. "Key Club was a rewarding club," said Sarah Myers. Of the many projects that Key Club organized this year, thier canned food drive was the most successful.

Key Club's football homecoming float featured the theme "Help heal the World." " Working on the float was fun but difficult" replied Catherine Koehler. Two of Key Club's major goals this year were to donate food to the hungry and help those suffering from Iodine Deficiency Disorder.

At Armijo, Swimming and Diving were two very popular sports. The Armijo girls team had won the MEL championships three years in a row and had high expectations for 1999. The boys team opened up the new year with many new faces on the team and new hopes for victory. Dean Duray and Beau Roper were two new coaches introduced to the teams. Mr. Duray coached the Varsity and JV swim teams and Mr. Roper coached the dive team. When asked how the season went Toni Harris replied, "I was really juiced to have Beau as our new coach, his energy raised the spirit of our team." Both coaches started off with high hopes for the year. After losing their number one relay team because of graduated seniors, Aja Roper a senior, along with three juniors Carolyn Kwok, Shannon Hillard and Shannon Harris built the new relay team for 1999 and took many victories. 1999 produced a strong diving team, and the Vaca High meet was highly anticipated. The boys swimming team was lead by Chase Roper, who remains rated high in the nation, Nick Burton, Eric Hannley, and Jackson Harris. Because of the wide range of new talent, the boys gained wins throughout the season. A well rounded year lead to many victories for the Armijo Indians swimming and diving team.

Jeremy Leslie swam a set of butterfly at an afternoon practice. "I don't like the butterfly that much, but when Dean tells you to do it, you better do it," commented Jeremy. Butterfly was one of the most difficult strokes.

Toni Harris, a four year diver for Armijo High School, executed a reverse, in a layout postion off the 1-meter board. "Diving really gave me a rush and it was my favorite pass time," said Toni. This year Toni broke the schools record with 231.6 during a dual meet.

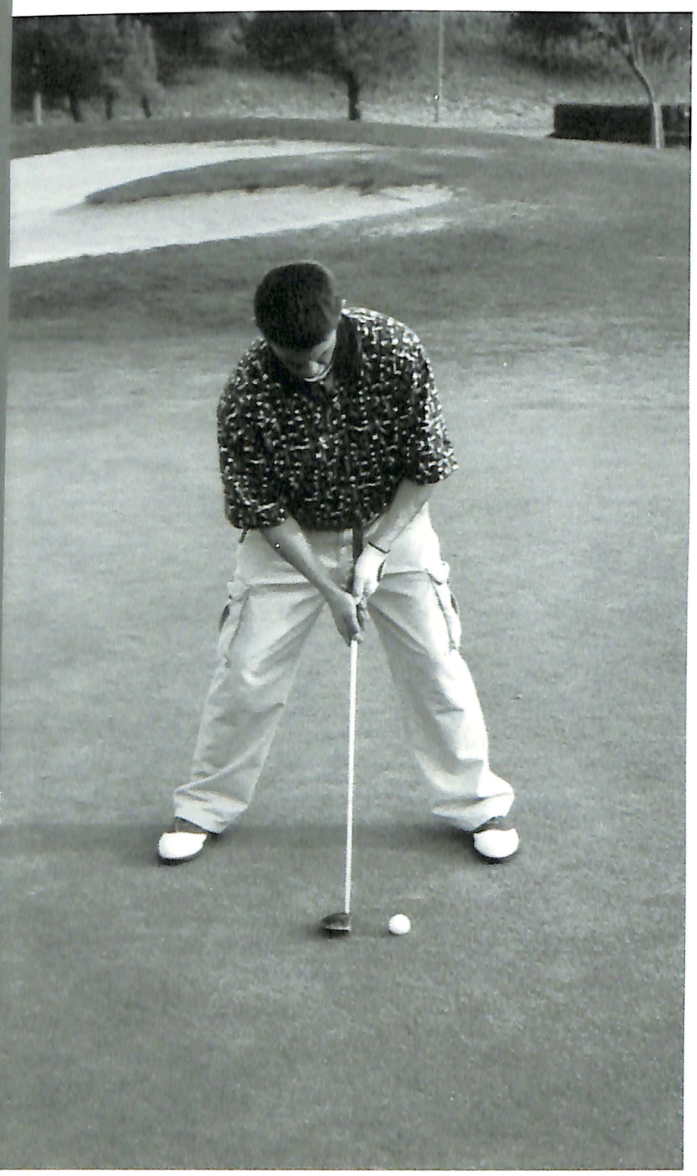

Bryanna Nethery preformed a forward sommersault with a full twist. "Twisters are fun because you fly through the air spinning all over the place," replied Bryanna. Bryanna has dove for three years and hopes to dive in college.

At the meet against Hogan this year the Armijo Varsity girls started off the 200 medly relay with backstroke. Aja Roper said, "The 200 medly was one of my favorite races, backstroke was my best stroke." The girls went on to recieve a high place in the MEL championship.

Brandon Turner set up and positioned himself for a flawless putt. "Even though golf is a country club sport we had fun on and off of the course," said Brandon Turner. Friendships were important to develop on and off of the course.

Teeing up, Mike Cook came down on the ball with a swift and accurate hit. "I hadn't made up my mind on a spring sport this year but golf was really fun even though I wasn't the top player," Mike Cook. Precision was a key skill every golfer should possess.

Freshman Chris Deschamps extended back to follow through with a strong and precise stroke. "It was cool to have a home course at Rancho, practicing on it helped us to improve for competitions," said Chris.

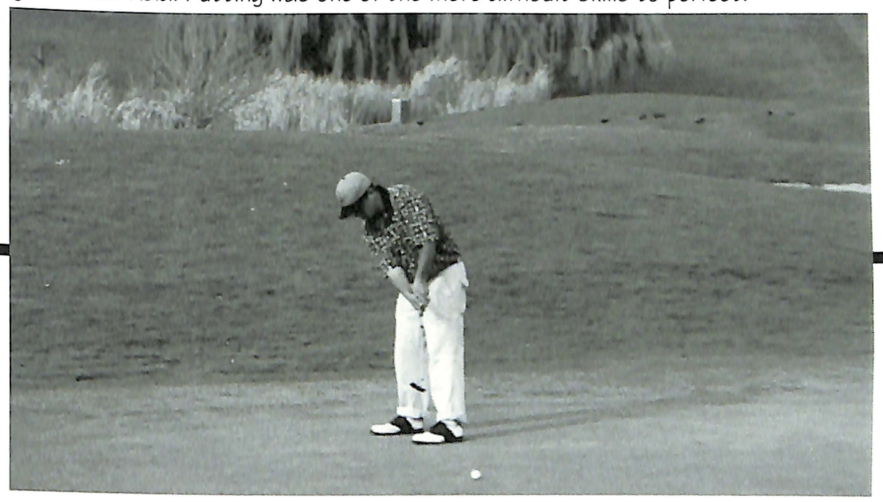

Adam Deadrich and fellow teammates walked through the lush green to the next hole. "It's a long walk through the course but we kept it from being so boring, it was fun being the top seed," replied Adam.

quote Ian Reid attempted a long birdie during an intense match. "Putting requires practice and precision we practice a lot at Rancho on the putting green." Ian Reid. Putting was one of the more difficult skills to perfect.

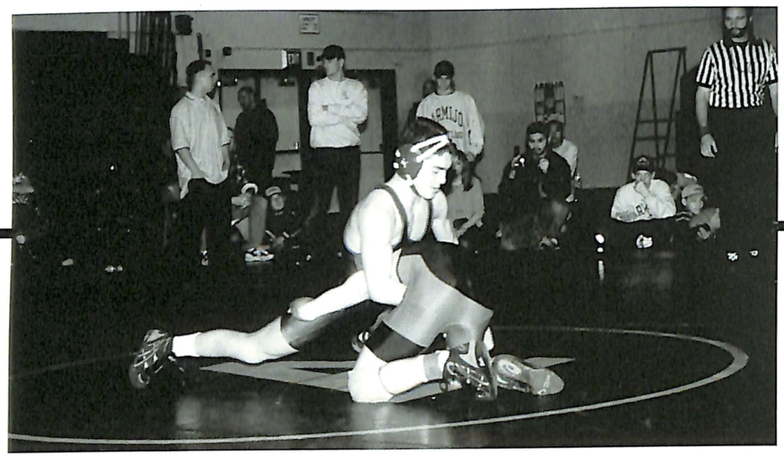

BoagiE

Eighteen daunting holes and hundreds of yards of green and fairway. Form and approach were both very important on the course and concentration was key. Practices were held at Rancho Solano from after school until five o'clock. Adam Didrich said, "The Rancho Solano golf course really is a good place for our team to get a good practice in." Driving, chipping and putting was perfected on the course. The men on the Armijo golf team definitely have put their hours of practice into their game. Their practice started in the summer of 98 which followed through the winter with all the rain. And then on to the spring and the competitive season during the spring. "I have looked forward to the start of the golf season for awhile now," said coach Jay Dahl. Mr. Dahl has been the golf coach for the last four years. Practiced happened everyday when their wasn't a game, and sometimes faculty members would join in to help the team practice. "I liked having other staff members practice with us. It was great beating them," said Jason Covey. This year the golf team got off to a fast start, and never slowed down for the rest of the season.

Jonathan Stemmer sprawled out as his opponent shot in at the MEL duals held at the end of the season. "Who ever wants it more will win," commented Stemmer, "It takes determination to be succesful at this sport." Along with determination, the wrestlers possessed commitment.

The Mat

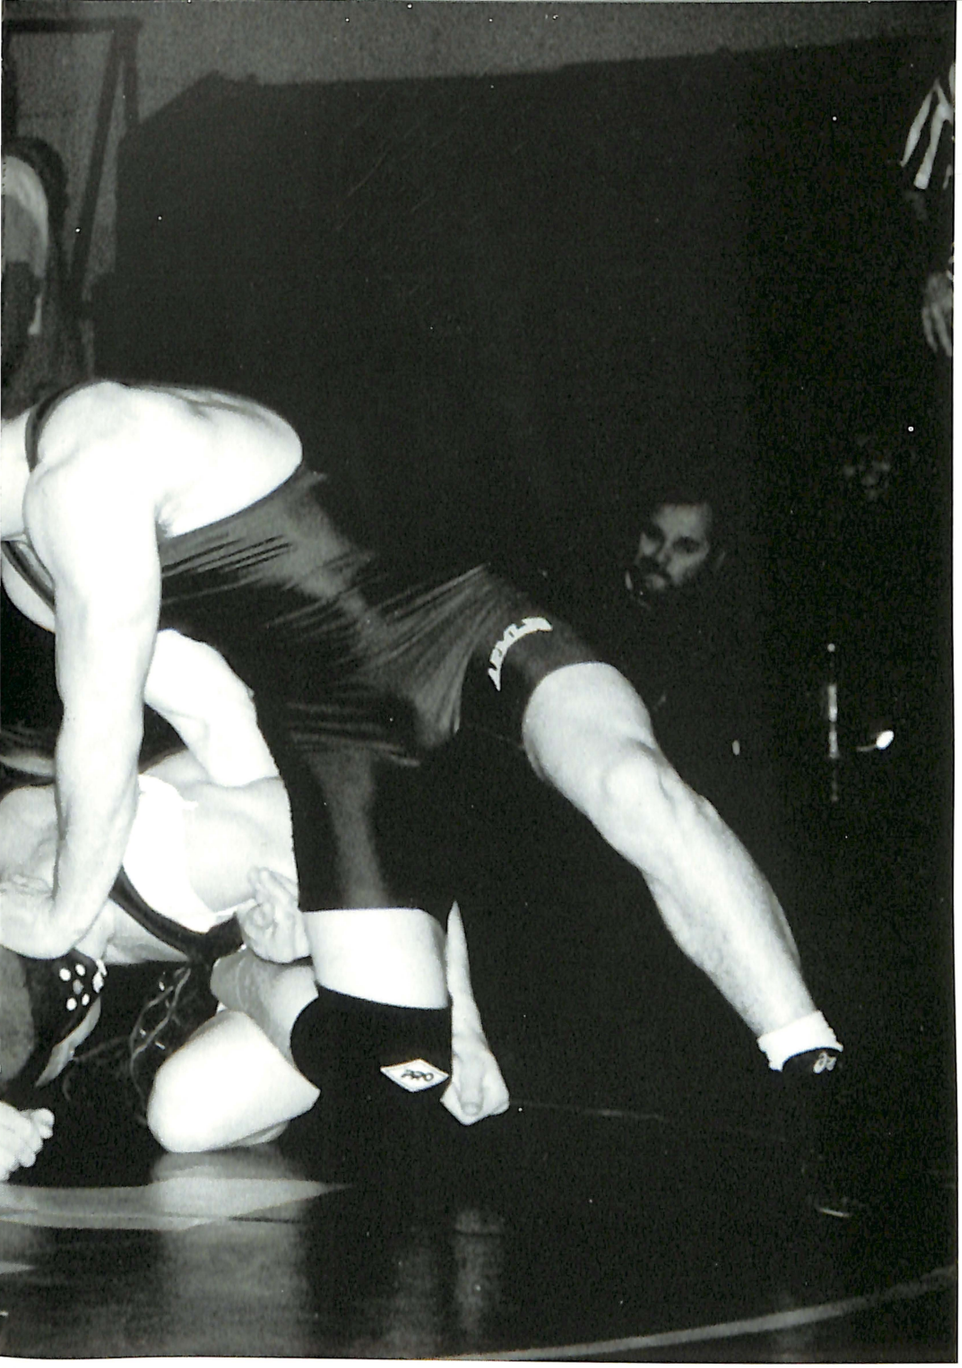

"This is a sport that takes mental stamina as well as physical stamina, but as for the bulldog, I bring the sport style," exclaimed Martin Alverez, also known as "the bulldog." To be a wrestler takes dedication and determination. Every wrestler spends hours practicing and pushing themselves and they also worked to make weight. "I like wrestling aggressive opponents because they give me more competition," commented Korey Shmelling. When there is no pin in a match, the winner is decided by points given for near falls, penalties, and escapes. The varsity team gave a lot of hard work and ended the season placing 4th in the MEL. "I like the intensity of it," stated Russel Cooper, "I love wrestling because of the challenge." The nature of the sport helped the team to develop a close esprit de corps. By trying hard 100% of the time, teamates pushed each other to be better. "This was my first year wrestling and I moved up to varsity. I think that I had great teamates and a great coach for varsity," declared Aaron Bjork. The wrestling team enjoyed the league matches and especially the tournaments. They not only took with them feelings of accomplishments, but memories of fun and good times. "Wrestling was great," said Miguel Saldana. Many of the members agreed, and will return next year.

Kevin Patmon smelled defeat when he muscled his way into a wizard. "It is mine and Justin's year. Hopefully our hard work will pay off," he stated. The team had an especially strong senior line this year.

Jeff Matthews concentrated as he set up in the down position. "When I wrestle I focus on anticipation and intensity. I think that being focused is half the battle," he remarked. Being focused included keeping ones cool and staying relaxed.

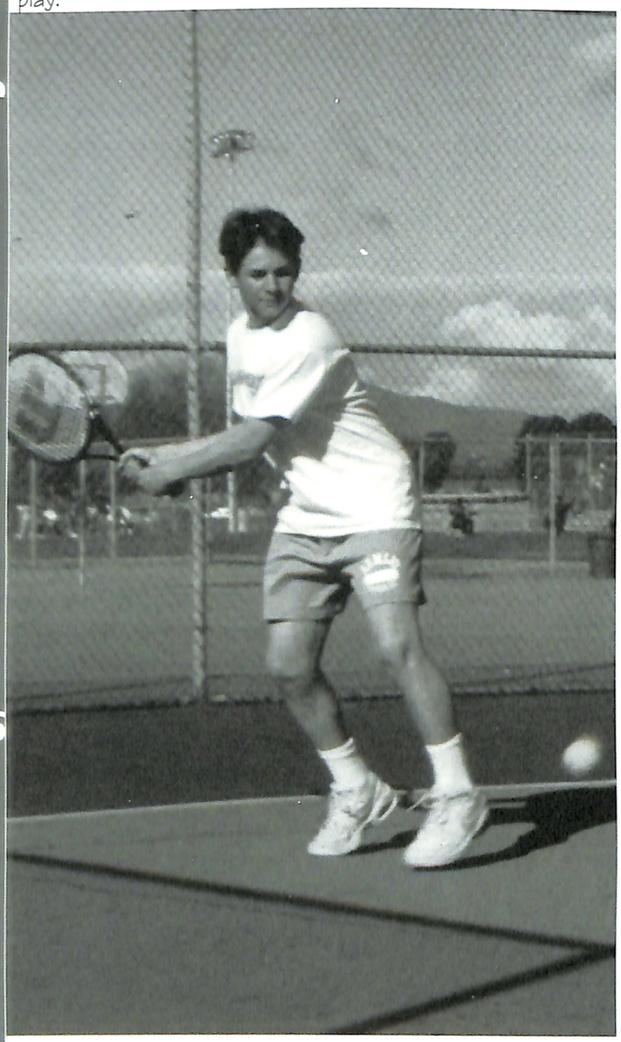

As his opponent sat out, Cesar Correa stayed on top to keep control. He remarked, "It's one of the toughest sports around." Wrestling required both mental and physical strength.

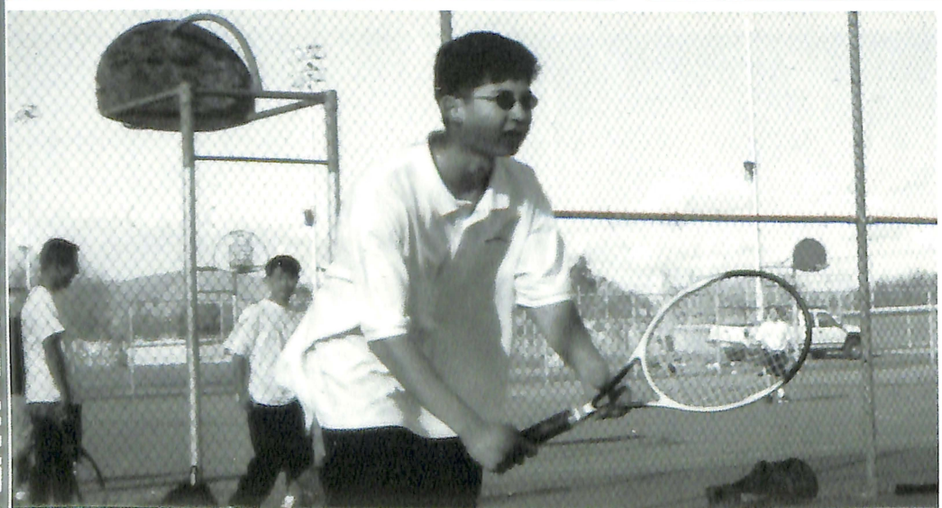

Justin Pichardo battled for a victory and rode his opponent. "Wresting is a sport where conditioning is very important, most can't take it. Kevin and I enjoy beating the crap out of people," said Justin. Justin was one of the most committed wrestlers on the team.

Erik Fuchs anticipated a hard cross-court shot. "I really didn't do anything, I just hit the ball. Tennis was a demanding sport, even though people wouldn't think so," commented Erik. Erik was ranked Number three in doubles play.

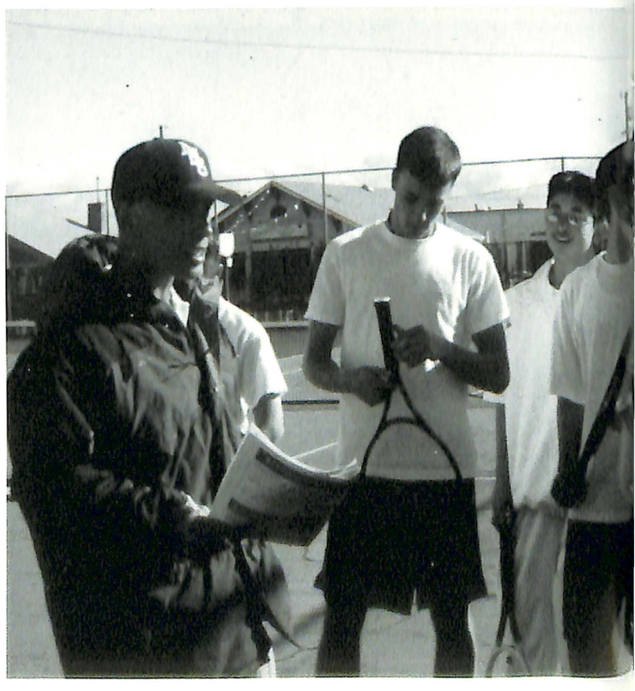

Carl Miller and Marcus Burton waited for a serve from their opponent. Carl said, "Playing with a partner is a lot more fun. The singles because you get to interact more with people." This was the first year Carl and Marcus had paired up.

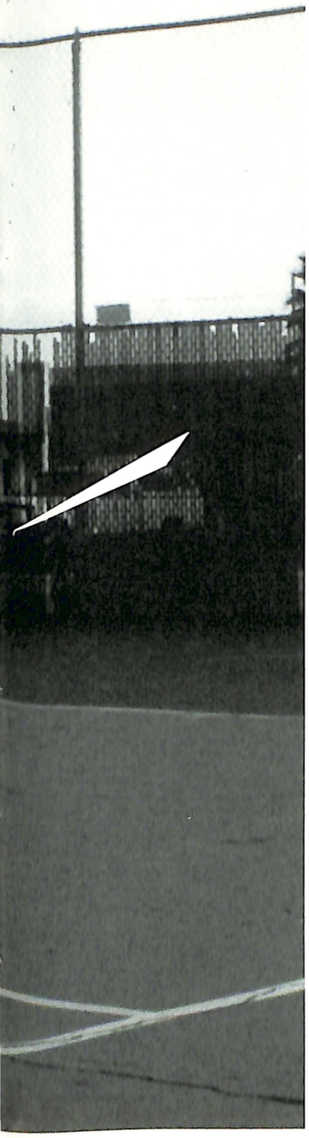

Number two singles player Kyle Lessler waited for an incoming ball during a pre-season match. "I like to play singles because I can rely on myself. I win or lose based on my own merit," Kyle replied. This was the third year Kyle played for the tennis team.

Coach Greg Davis gave his team a pep talk before an important match. Player Shawn Bananzadeh comments, "Coach always lectures before big matches to get us pumped up and ready to play." The team had a lot of spirit before, during and after matches.

quote Justin Stevens shook the hand of his opponent after the match was over. "We tryed to work as one unit, because the team was only as strong as it's weakest link," commented Justin. Justin enjoyed this tennis season because he felt the team really came together.

Swingin

The Armijo boy's tennis team gathered in front of the tennis courts to discuss team strategy. The loss of valuable seniors and a coach the previous year, did not seems to have slowed the teams drive to succeed. New coach Greg Davis brought years of coaching experience from Pepperdine University. "The coach conditioned us really well this year and I feel that we will be able to perform strongly throughout the year," said returning junior Justin Stevens. Finishing second in the Monticello Empire League least year, the team planned to come back better, stronger and more determined. "I played tennis to keep me in shape for the next soccer season," commented Ryan Sweeney. Weather conditions impaired their valuable practice time during which they played scrimmages against one another. Practices were used to perfect skills like the forehand or overhead shot. The team is broken up into Varsity and exhibition, also known as Junior Varsity. The top sixteen boys were sent to compete in matches against other schools. Challenges were held during practices to determine the ladder. Thus allowing players of a lower rank to challenge their superiors.

Pushing hard toward the goal, quarterback Andre Bell runs furiously. "This years JV team has the skill and dedication it takes to win, but the motivation just isn't there," said Andre Bell. The JV team practiced everyday after school for an hour.

Armijo's defense blocks their quarterback after a fumble is made by Valley. "Playing on such a unified team allows you to meet a lot of people you share a love with," said Dustin Maul. Unification and skill are two factors which make Armijo's JV team unique.

While Coach Tannahill observes, Mikey Clagg is treated for an injury. "I hit everyone as hard as I could so they couldn't get up and wouldn't forget #99," replies Mikey. Mikey is a four-year veteran of Armijo football.

Brad Koelling braces himself as kicker Jean-Pierre Jodois plants his foot into the ball. "I've played for Armijo for three years, I believe that I have really improved my game," states Jean Pierre. Brown Lee field has been the site of many impressive victories.

During half time Armijo's varsity team listens intentively as the coaches go over strategy and give them a pep talk. "We've had a successful year so far with a lot of close games with highly ranked teams," said Noe Lopez. Noe and many others were optomistic about this season.

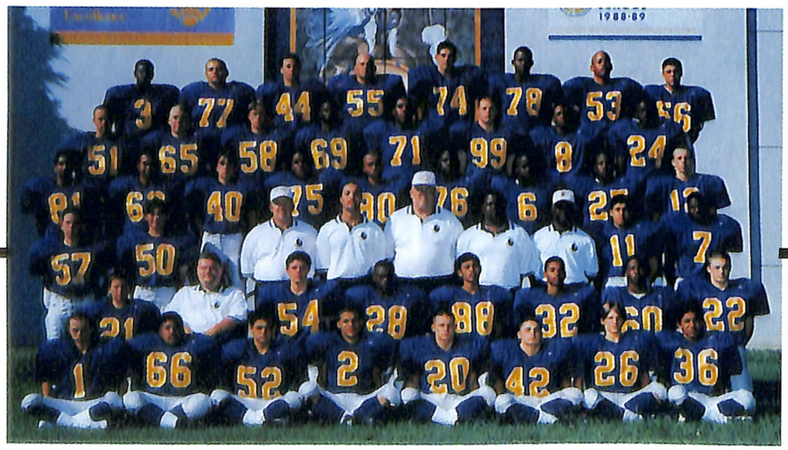

Runningback Danny Wells abbrasively sprints toward the goal, dodging his opponents. "Football is really fun. I really enjoy hitting and running from the other team," exclaims Danny. Danny, a Sophomore has been on the team since his Freshman year.

Pig Skin

"No pain, no gain." A phrase Armijo's football teams live, breathe and practice by. With new uniforms for the Varsity team and new coaches, the Varsity and Junior Varsity teams are surely reforming. "I've met a lot of cool people the past season and we've really improved," said Ralph Thomas. After spending practices after school, summer training and camp together; the players formed friendships on and off of the field. "You make a lot of friends being with these guys all of the time. I'm going to miss playing for the team, and all of the people," stated Richie Luna. Throughout the season, both teams put forth a valiant effort that Armijo is proud of. "Although our records aren't flawless, we have still improved over the years," explained Ben Hoover. We all know that practice makes perfect, and both teams exemplify that fact.

After retrieving a fumbled ball, Varsity player Chuck Baglin strikes at his prey. "Football is a medium which allows me to release my aggression. The new coach has been a positive force," replied Chuck. This season, the varsity team acquired new uniforms as well as a new coach.

Varsity's quarterback Daniel Cruz searches around him to find an open reciever. "Being the QB has been a challenging and new experience for me; a lot depends on my decisions," replied Daniel. Daniel, a Junior, hopes to keep the position of quarterback his Senior year.

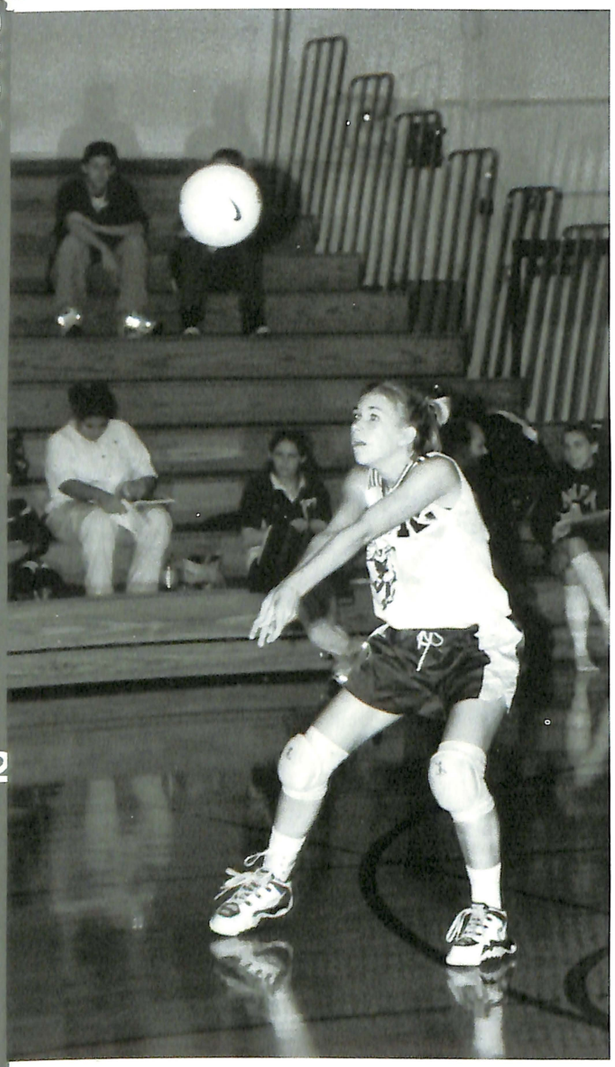

Before their game against Valley, Armijo's Varsity football players stretched with the aid of Coach Singer. "This season was a step up from our whole program. There is a very positive difference between this season and the last," said Ali Karaoni. This is Ali's second year on the varsity team.

As the Varsity squad practiced one of their many running plays with anticipation, hoping that it will work against their opponents. Nic Tigner commented, "It has been a lot of hard work and fun these past four seasons. I'll miss playing for Armijo." Nic played on the offensive and defensive line.

Junior Brianna Bane crouches in preperation to bump the ball. "Out of all the seasons that I've played this has been the best one," replied Brianna. Brianna was one of the many Juniors to join the Varsity team.

Kaala Antogue watches as Michelle Sullivan squats to return the ball. "We work together really well because we had friendships on and off the court," said Kaala. Kaala was the varsity team captain.

The varsity players sit and keep score of the J.V. game. "The scores and stats were vital; we had to make sure all of our information was correct," said Cari Suhr. The scores and other statistics were used as references. The Varsity team took down the stats for all of the JV games, and vice versa.

J.V. player Brittany Watson reaches to bump the ball during warm-ups. "I get pumped up to do my best during warm-ups," exclaimed Brittany. Warm-ups began 45 minutes before games.

The junior varsity team prepares for game-time by stretching. "We had a great team, especially because we only had three returning players," said Andrea Calvert. Andrea was the junior varsity team captain.

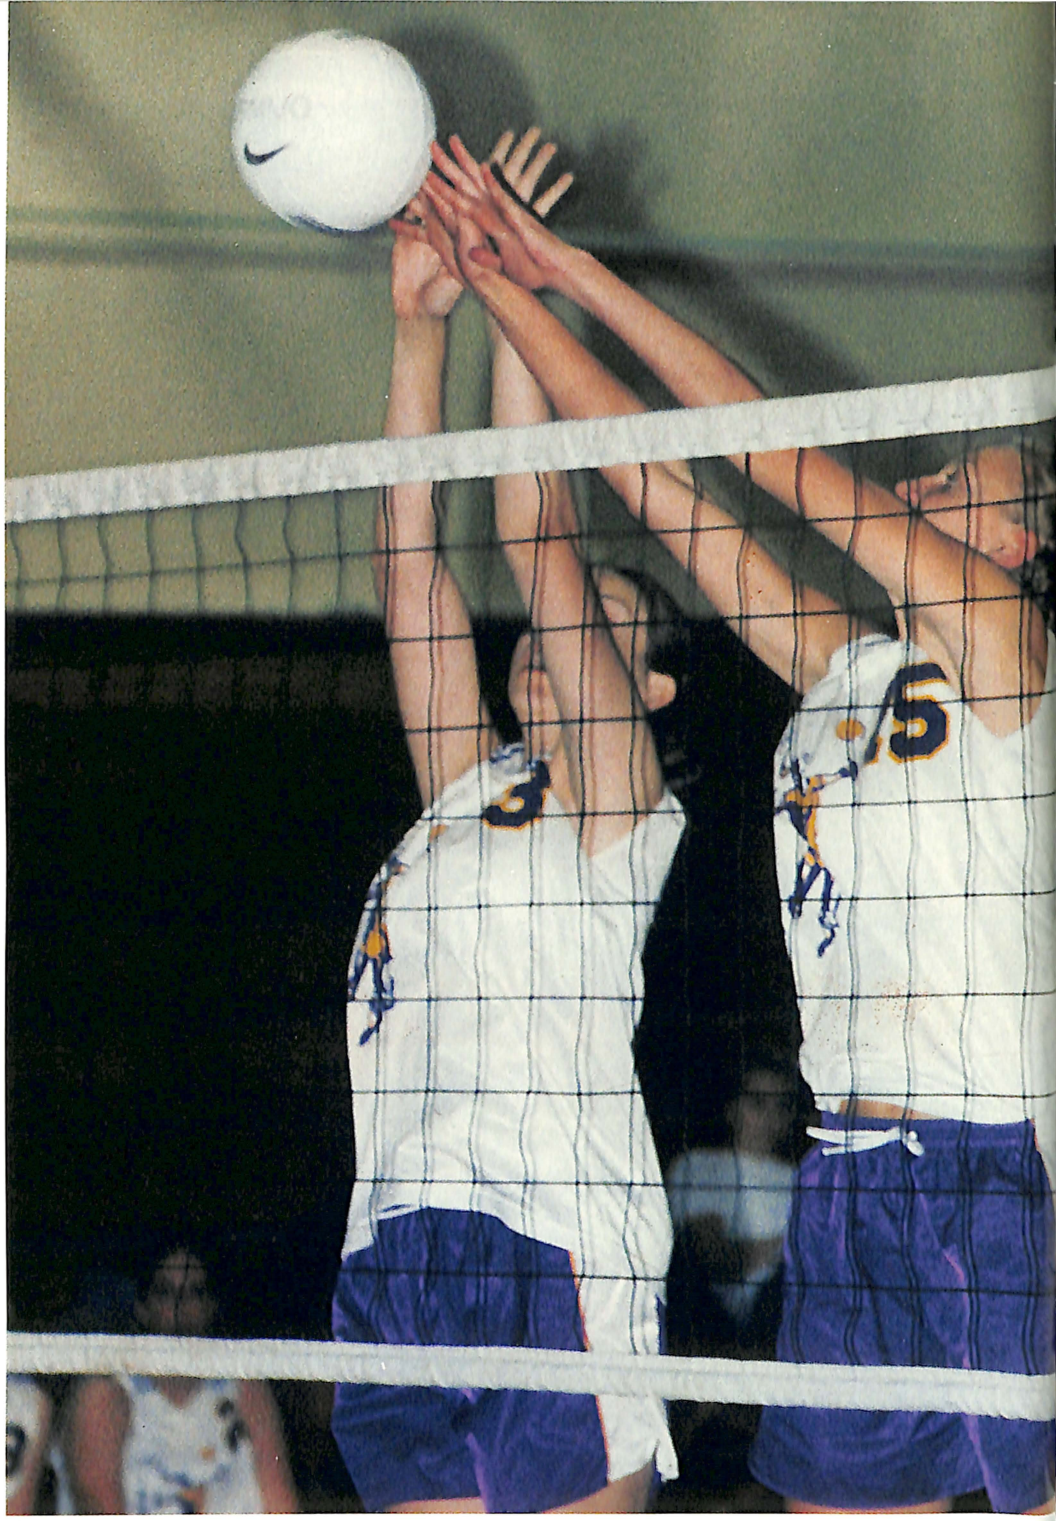

The J. V. team sat and watched the game from the bench. "It was unfortunate that I hurt my ankle at one of our games, because I couldn't play for the rest of the season," said Raquel Rhoads. Raquel remained loyal to the team by showing up at the games and cheering them on.

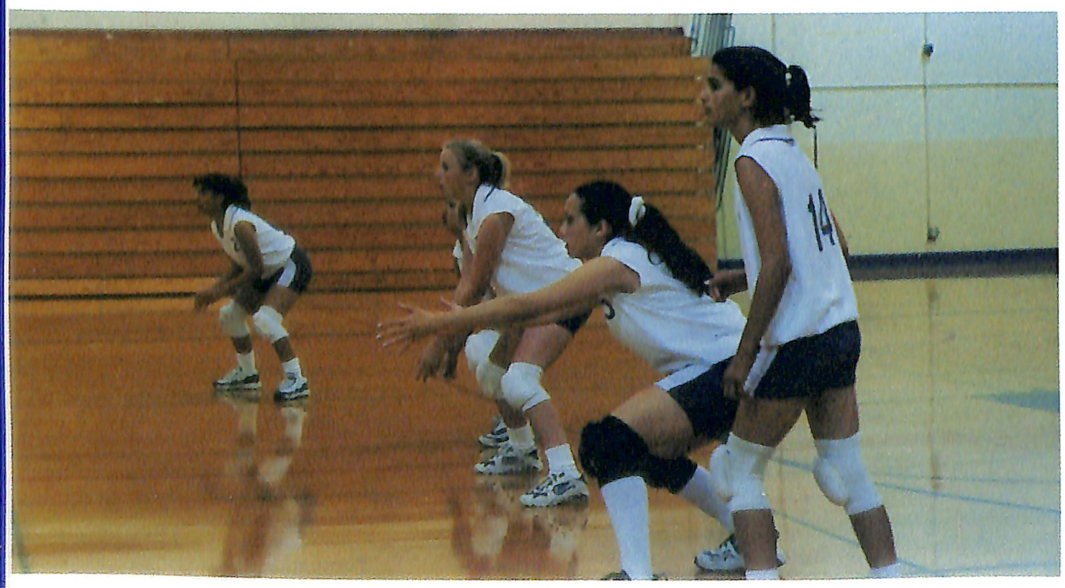

Stomping to the beat of the Indian song, the varsity team circles around the gym. "We were really pumped up for the Fairfield game because we really wanted to kill them," commented Rachel Smith. Their spirit made the games exciting for the spectators and the team.

Varsity player Elizabeth Gonzales jumped up to spike and return the ball. "I always jumped up for a really big hit," commented Elizabeth. This was the fourth year she has been a member of the volleyball team.

Varsity players Michelle Arendes and Kaz Imrie jumped to the net to block their opponents. "I had a great time playing because the team was always unified," said Michelle. The wall was a good strategy to block incoming hits.

The J.V. players stood in formation waiting for their opponents to pass the ball. "Sometimes I got nervous before the play began, but it ended up that I had nothing to worry about," replied Amy Donnoe. This was a mutual feeling players had before a game.

The Varsity team raised their hands high to congratulate each other on the point. "We had a great time this year. We always told each other what a good job we did," said Kaz Imrie. The fans supported the teams by cheering to express their spirit.

Bumpin' It

"Everyday after school 11 varsity girls volleyball players and 12 junior varsity players met in the gym to practice bumping, setting and spiking. All but Tuesday's and Thursday's, which were game days, they practiced in the brightly lit gym. The girls not only endured daily practices and games but also had school work, extra curricular activities, other sports and jobs to fulfill. With these various responsibilities that the girls had on their side, it was also their responsibility to keep up with their competitive teammates. "Sometimes it very stressful, because we want to do everything but there isn't enough time to do them all," said J.V. player Stephanie Armanino. Although they have had their share of losses this season, their wins prevailed over all of them. Thus, ending with a successful season. The struggle of being on top of their game in the volleyball court and also in leading their own lives, was where the real success was found.

Armijo JV player Mark Bersola competes with the opponent for the dead ball. "Soccer is really fun and we try really hard to win." As with every sport, competition reigned supreme with these boys.

Goalkeeper Josh Ennis jumps up to retrieve the ball as the Wood opponent challenges his stance. Josh said, "As captain, I told the whole team that I didn't want them to mess up my Senior year."

JV striker Alex Chavez dribbles the ball towards the opposition's net. Alex said, "I think the main ingredient to success in soccer is working hard in what you know you can do and believing in yourself enough to know that you can win." The Armijo boys' spirits soared this year, through victories and disappointments.

Vallejo opponents watch on as Brad Burzynski and Ruben Vera perform a takeover in the opposition's goalbox. Brad commented, "It's a lot of the little technical things in soccer that make us successful." Though they did not take first place, it was an exciting and productive year for the Armijo boys.

Jay Anderson gets down and dirty to poke the ball away from his opponent. "Armijo soccer was a lot of fun this year. Even though we didn't win, we really improved and had a good season." The majority of the soccer guys felt the same way.

Tavin Lanphier watches on as his teammate heads the ball. Tavin commented, "We rely a lot on our passing game in order to score." Passing lead to the majority of Armijo's goals this season.

The Varsity boys' soccer team celebrates after Zach Sullivan scores a goal against Vallejo. Teammate Bryan Weber commented, "We work really hard in practices to improve, and it all pays off in our games when we play well and win."

Strikers

"Shot, shot," yelled Ruben Vara as striker Ernesto Villanueva planted his left foot next to the ball to shoot towards Wood's wary goalkeeper. The Armijo boys' soccer team had a memorable season, rising from last year's finish at near last to the top portion of the MEL ladder. However, it was not without hours of hard work and a great dedication to the game of soccer and Coach Evans that these guys arrived at victory. "The team has really improved. At the beginning of the year, we were expected to be worse than we really ended up. For a while, we were at the top of the MEL ladder." With practices at least three days a week, and games the other two, the beginning of the school year stress was greatened with fall sports like soccer. An eight mile run was just one of the factors of making the team, along with summer practices and tournaments in the first few weeks of school. Yet the stress and endless running and drills payed off when it came down the the real games. Techniques were perfected, shots were right on target, and the Armijo boys' soccer team proved that they were number one.

Striker Zach Sullivan takes a free kick just outside of the 18-yard line as Vallejo's defenders flinch. Zach said, "I take most of our Varsity team's free kicks. We practice them ahead of time so we know what we are doing." Zach was a big scorer for the Varsity squad this year.

Freshman player Jason Santiago cuts the ball back as he approaches defenders. "The dribbling skills that we practiced all season long finally paid off in the games." The offensive portion of both JV and Varsity were a crucial part of their victories and improvements.

Scott Lanpheir dribbles the ball downfield to Patrick McGowan. Scott commented, " Teamwork is a big part of soccer, and we work a lot with our teammates in order to improve and score." The JV's record surpassed that of the Varsity boys.

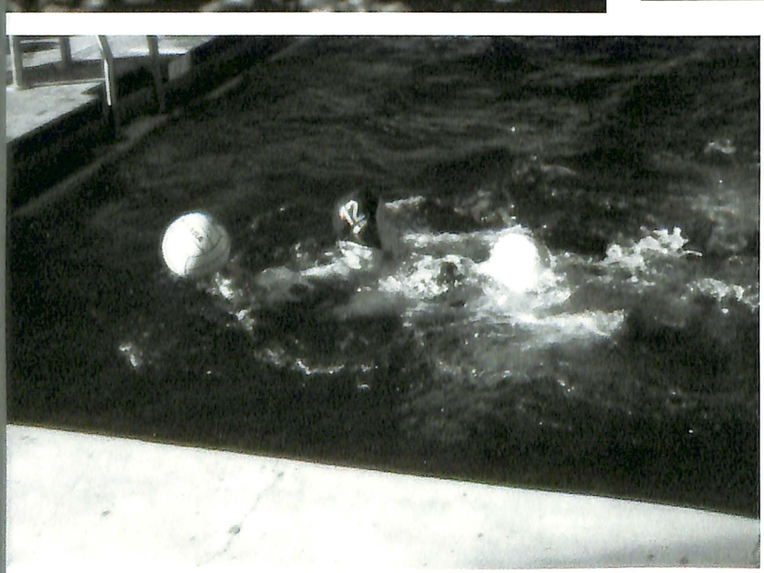

Ruben Vera looks up to see fellow player Ernesto Villanueva making a run to the center field. Ruben added, "Because we all know each other so well, it's easier to know where our teammates are going to be." This year's Varsity team even hung out outside of their practices and games.

Natalie Scoles pumps the ball, getting ready to shoot. Natalie commented, "The hardest thing about shooting for me is trying not to hit the cross bar." Evidently, they hit the target enough times to be MEL Champs.

Heather Stewart swims towards the ball to block off her Fairfield High opponent. Heather said, "I love playing water polo, and it makes it even more fun when we win." The girls' water polo team won the MEL title this year.

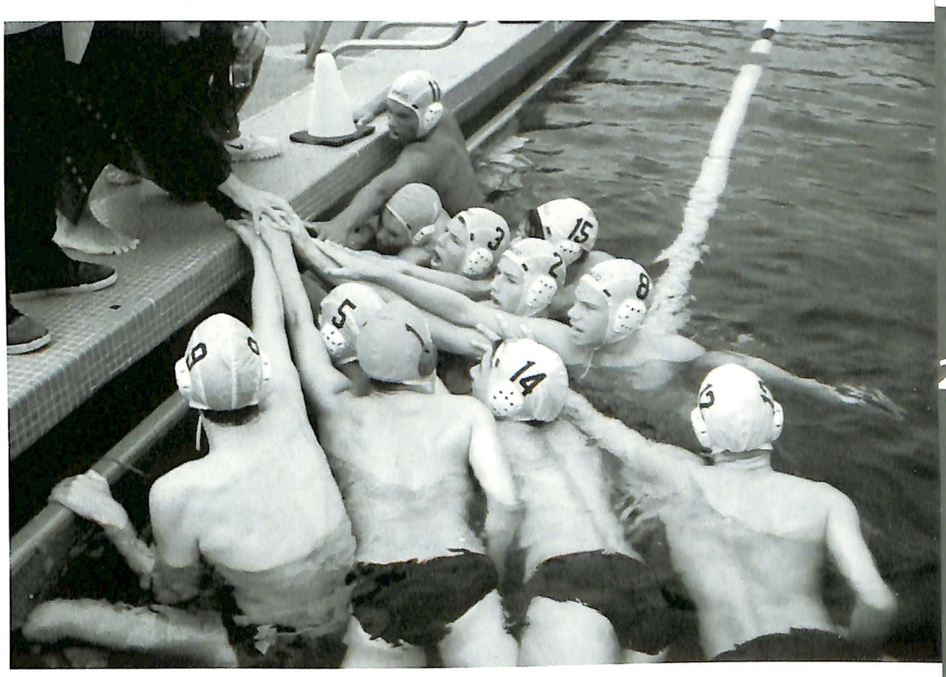

Jacob Glasshof passes the ball to teammate John Stemmer just before his opponent attacks. Jacob commented, "The tough practices helped out and improved our team a lot this year." Although the boys did not take the MEL title like the girls, they cruised to amazing victories and solid improvements.

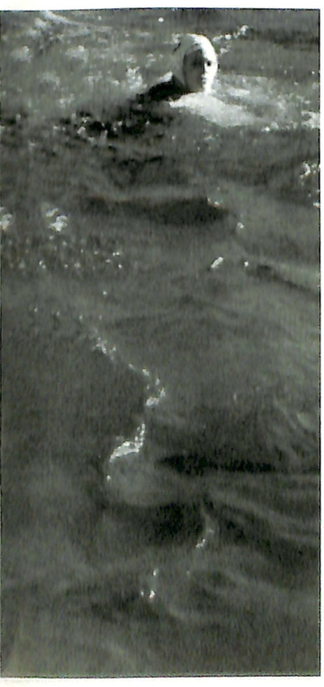

After victory over the Fairfield girls, the varsity polo players threw Coach Dean in the pool. Dean said, "I had no idea they were going to throw me in. It was worth it, though, because we were able to beat our biggest rivals."

The boys' water polo team gathers on the poolside to cheer. Marcus Burton said, "Water polo is fun, but it's the hardest sport I've ever played. It takes hard work, discipline, stamina, and hours at the bottom of the pool."

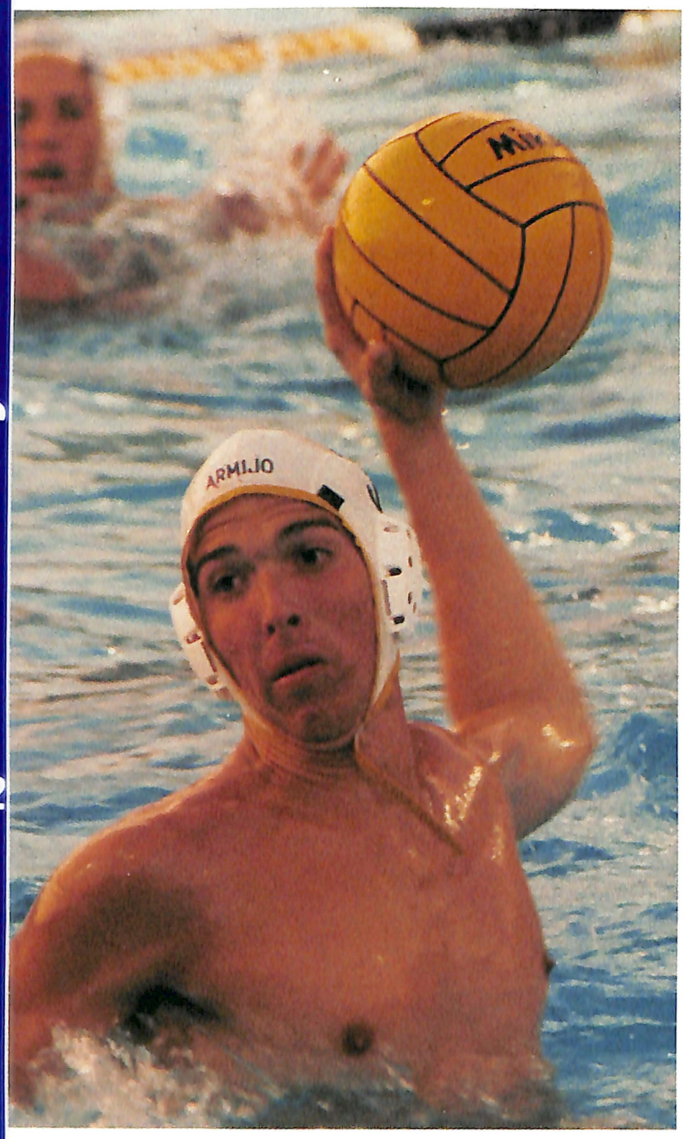

Kandace Waldthaler rips the ball through the net. Kandace said, "The hard work and conditioning helps us play better. You need to be in good shape to play water polo." Kandace was the standout hole-set for girls' water polo.

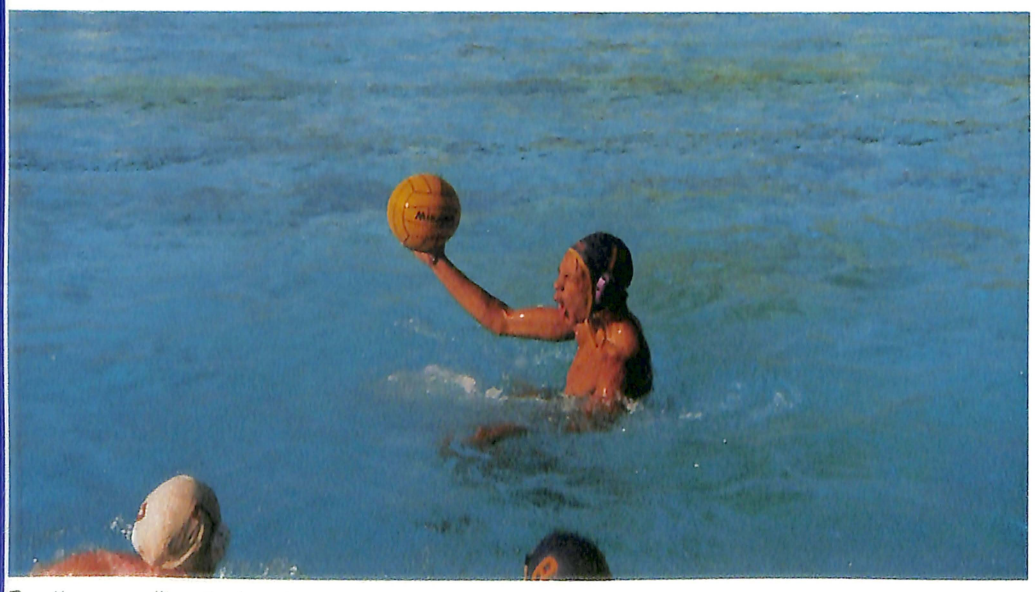

Freshman Stephan Dean palms the polo ball as he looks for a pass to his teammate. Stephan said, "This was my first year playing water polo. I'm glad that I decided to play polo instead of playing Armijo football." Stephan was one of the six freshmen on the guys polo team.

Jeremy Leslie looks with determination to launch the polo ball to his teammates. Jeremy said, "We did some dry land training to condition." Water polo takes a lot of upper body and lower body strength, combined with concentration and stamina.

The girls' water polo team lines up on the side of the pool to listen to Coach Drury. Player Nicole Baran commented, "Sometimes games were very intense, but the girls that I played with made it all worth it." The team this year was very close, and it finally paid off.

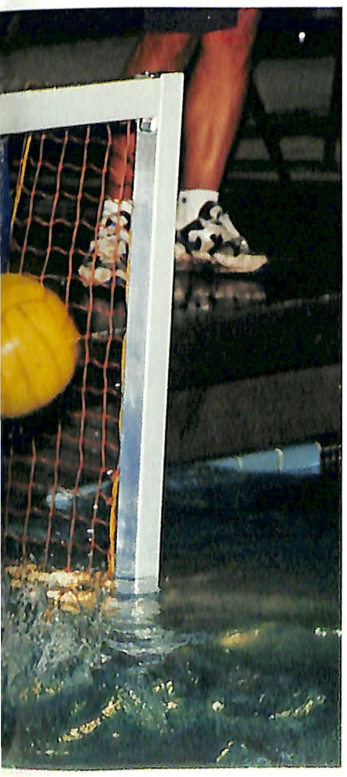

Ben Keevan rallies the boys' water polo team with his routine shout of "Armijo!!!" He added, "our guys team was really spirited this year and I think it helped to get us ready for our games." Ben lead the boys in keeping spirits high all throughout the season.

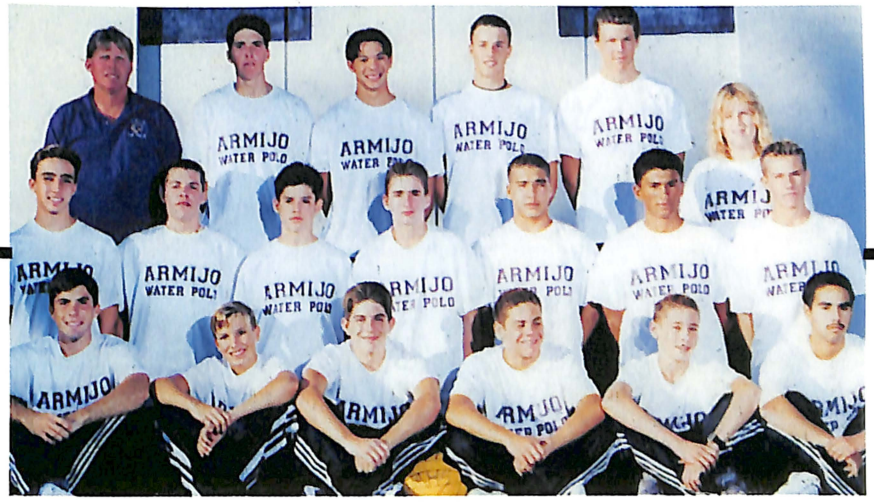

Jessica Cawdright leaps up from the water just in time to deflect the polo ball. She commented, "We had some really tough games this year. Polo girls are really competitive." Jessica was one of the few freshman on the girls water polo team.

Water Jockeys

"Hole set, Hole set!" exclaimed Ben Keevan as the Armijo boys' water polo team swam to victory over Will C. Wood. Every day from 3:10 to 5:10 pm, polo players hit the water for a long, strenuous practice, covering egg-beatering, swimming, passing, and shooting. With forty players,the pool tended to overcrowd. This was the largest polo group the Armijo water had ever seen. With continuous victories throughout the season, the Armijo girls took MEL's. Captain Aja Roper commented, "Our season was really great this year. We took the MEL title and we even came close to winning Sections." Beating Fairfield High for the first time was among the list of highlights for this year. The things players dreaded the most was getting up at 5:30 in the morning to go to early practices. As the weather took it's course, and winter was on its way, these athletes even began to dread afternoon practice, but the feeling of victory and sense of accomplishment was enough of a reward when it came down to the nitty gritty. Coach Tim added, "Both teams worked really hard this year, and it finally paid off"

"Varsity Cheerleaders, Varsity Pom Poms, JV Cheer, JV Poms and Mascots are the many elements that makes Armijo's Pep Squad. With practice 5 days a week for an hour a day, the cheerleaders practiced routines, dance moves and many difficult stunts. "I love to dance and preform, I would like to pursue a career in preforming arts," Teresa Urbano, JV pom captain responded. In addition to the many returning cheerleaders and other girls, were Daniel Garcia and Mikey Clagg. Daniel and Mikey are the first men cheerleaders to ever represent Armijo's Pep Squad. "By the end of basketball season I'd like to be able to lift two girls on a single chair," stated Daniel. Armijo's cheerleaders showed their emense school spirit at many games, rallys, special activities and around school. Regardless of the activity, the cheerleaders raised much of Armijo's spirit. They always got the crowds of fellow Indians enthused.

Varsity Pom preformed at the Back To The Beach rally put on in September. "This is my first year on the Varsity Pom Squad. I really enjoy preforming," said Johanna, This is Johanna's third year cheering for Armijo.

Varsity Cheerleaders worked together to execute a difficult stunt. "The stunts were difficult to do but I trust the girls and it's really exciting," replied Jamie Andrews. The girls practiced every day after school a week for an hour a day.

During a Varsity Football game, Varsity Cheerleaders preformed their ever-so popular "bang-bang" cheer. "I really like preforming because it's a form of self expression," comments Tiffany. This is Tiffany's first year on the cheerleading squad.

During a student rally the Pom squad preformed a dance which got the whole crowd pumped. "A lot of people don't think that cheerleading is a sport, but it is!" excalaimed Carly Dimellio. The dances are choreographed and practiced for perfection.

Preforming a stunt, during halftime of a JV football game Mallory Slurpe pumps up the crowd. The girls practiced long and hard to perfect the difficult stunts.

During a Homecoming game Joey Williams succesfully and safely performing a stunt. "Cheerleading means a lot to me because it keeps me fit when I'm not playing softball. I get to spend time with friends," Joey explians. Trust within the squad was important when preforming stunts.

During the boys JV Homecoming game, Katie Giovanetti yells to get the crowed pumped. She admits, "I like doing stunts because they are impressive; the crowd likes to get involved with the cheers." It was the cheerleaders spirit that pumped the JV up to victory.

On the sidelines the cheerleaders get ready to do a cheer. Brittany Armstrong explains, "I like cheerleading because it's fun. But I also like to check out the guys on the opposing teams."

After she finished the race, J.V. runner Jennifer Cotey stood and told her time to the recorder. "My reward for running came after the race because I did better each time," Jennifer responded. The J.V. course was approximately two miles long and took a minimum of twelve minutes to complete.

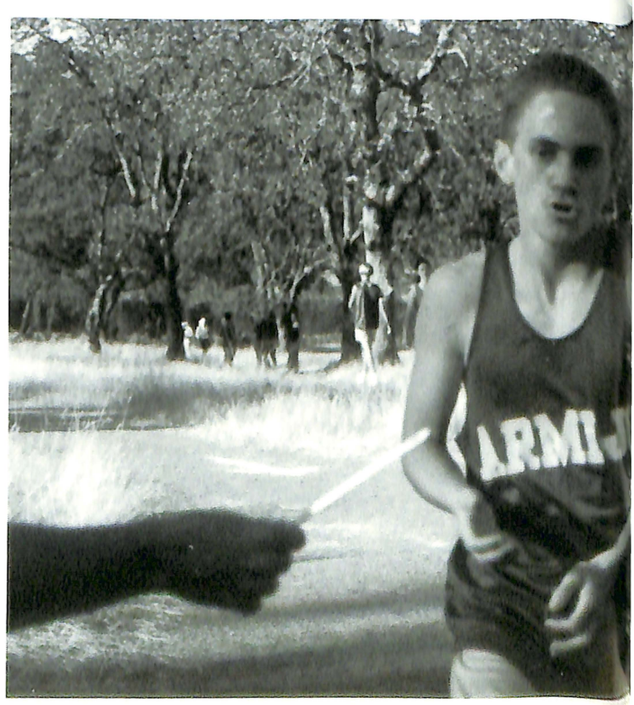

As she rounded the corner, Junior Mariange Russel was cheered on by her team mates and coach. "It's the hardest part of the race but it is great at the same time because the team is there to cheer you on," said Mariange. This year's cross country team was very spirted and united.

The J.V. boys pushed their way to get a lead. " I am always anxious to start the race because I wanted to know how I would do in the end," said Craig Giovannetti. J.V. won this meet.

As Justin Pichardo reached the finish line, he leaned out to recieve the stick. "I,love running it helps me train for wrestling," said Justin. This was one of three seniors on the team.

Running at Rockville Park, Rami Kassis concentrated on his performance. "I always run my hardest so that I can beat my best time," said Rami. This was Rami's second year as an athlete on the cross country team.

"Sprinting

"Look, here they come," yelled the spectators as the runner sprinted towards the finish line, cheered on by fellow teammates at Rockville park where Armijo's home meets were held. This years team consisted of returning runners and many new members. "There was a great turnout for tryouts this year. We have a lot of Freshmen and will have a strong winning team for the next four years," said Coach Sal Vasquez. "It's a workout" said freshman Chelsie Spath, "but the support from the team keeps you going," added Nelson Armaral. The difficulty comes when the October rains moisten the Rockville Hills. "Rain, sleet, snow, in any condition we run, it's part of the sport," exclaimed Rami Kassis. Of the seven meets, the most anticipated was against rival Fairfield High. Teamwork, determination, and endurance were definitely qualities of Armijo's team. "It was a lot of hard work, but it pays off," replied Jennifer Wolmack. This was a shared feeling between all of the teammates, most of which who are planning to return next year.

Sophomore Ian Massey, paced himself during the run. "I liked it because it was a different sport," replied Ian. This was Ian's second year on the team.

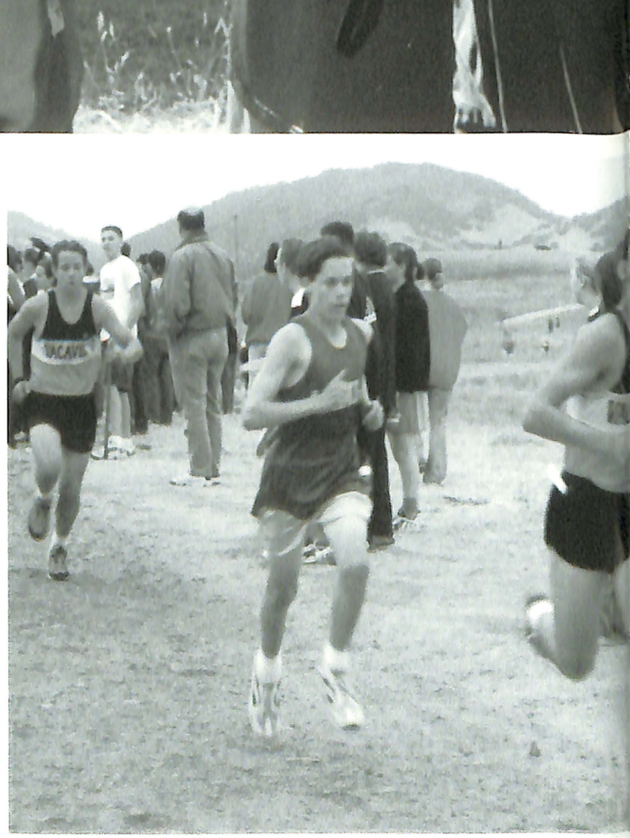

The J.V. boys huddled around Coach Sal after a tiresome run. "Sal was the best coach because he always motivated us," remarked John Kelly. John hoped to make the team again.

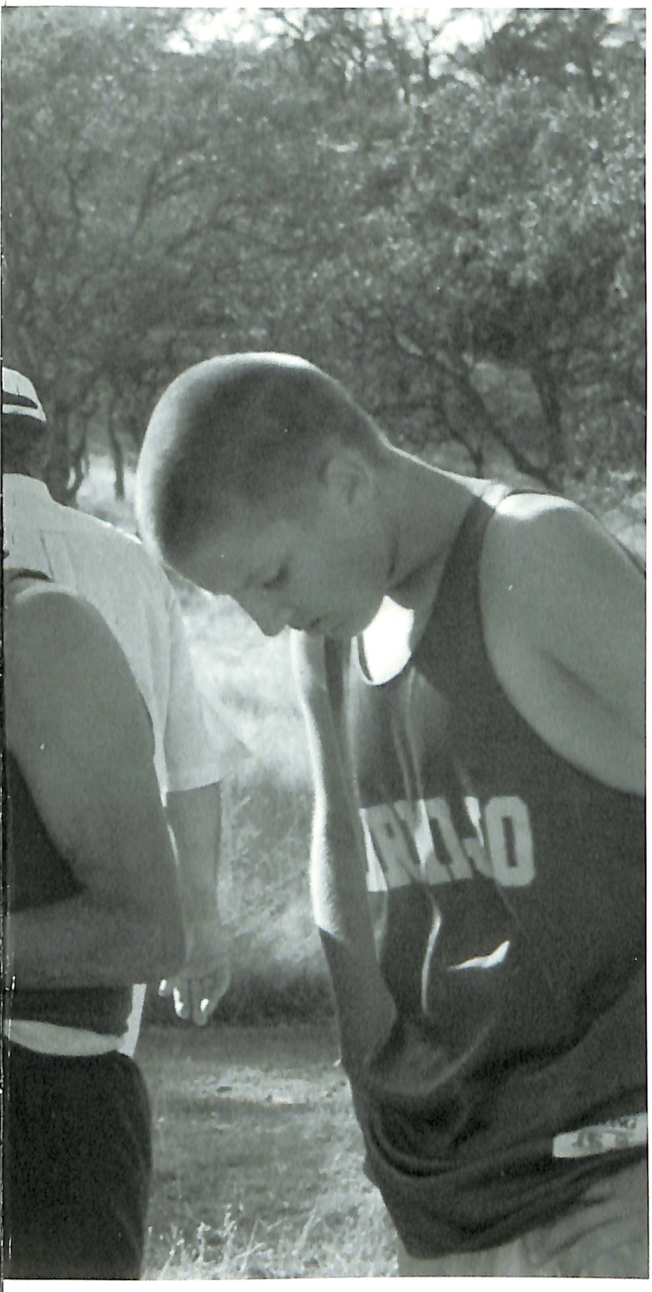

Sophia Andulz and the rest of the team stood and cheered on the side line. "I love running and cheering my teammates on because it was a part of the team spirit," commented Sophia. At the end of of every race someone was cheering the runners on.

The team walked back to the rest area from the finish line. "Running could be really tiring at times," commented Justin Banfield. Most of the meets were held at Rockville park.

Senior Chris Claus sprinited on the finishing strech. "I ran because I wanted to stay in shape and meet girls," said Chris. That was a common reason why guys joined.

Running at the MEL's, David Daum sprinted behind a Vacaville competetor. "I really enjoyed competing against other schools." David was one of the six freshman on the cross country team.

The team grouped together to strech before the meet. "Cross country was the hardest sport I have ever done," commented Erin Stockey. Rockville was a beautiful place to observe natural scenery.

quote Junior Jackie Smith strode to return the serve of a Vintage opponent. "I really enjoyed playing tennis this year because the team was so cooperative." This was Jackie's third year playing on the girls tennis team.

At 3:15, twenty girls headed from the locker room towards the Armijo tennis courts. Sporting their purple skirts and new tennis shirts, they gathered together to cheer before the meet. "Tennis is an especially fun sport when you have a team like ours, that likes to joke around," said Maya Pandurangi. Although seperated by the ladder, competition between teammates were strong. "We are a family of all girls, and coach is our dad," commeted Serena Eng. Although having to balance a sport along with the stress brought on with the school year, the girls felt it was worth the trouble. It was the dedication and perserverance, that carried them through the season. Each individual put forth their best efforts towards each game, making this the technique that gained them many wins. Breezing by Fairfield through intense matches, Armijo's girls tennis team faced yet another threat from Vintage. The girls strove for success and a win against their rival, and as always they prevailed against this major obstacle. A win definitely earned, the team went on to hold onto third place title and end the year on a high note.

Felice Elze exchanged tennis balls before starting the game with her opposing teammate. "We have a lot of fun during games, especially against our rivals," said Felice. Felice was Varsity's number one singles player.

Patricia Canaday ran up to swing at the ball, concentrating on her technique. "I've played tennis all my life and it was a good sport to keep in shape," Patricia replied . Patricia has played tennis on the team since her freshman year at Armijo.

Doubles partners Lydia Serota and Michelle Martin stood and spoke with their coach. "Coach G was such a nice guy and a great teacher. I've learned a lot from him and my teammates," commemted Lydia. Respect is detrimental between the coach and players.

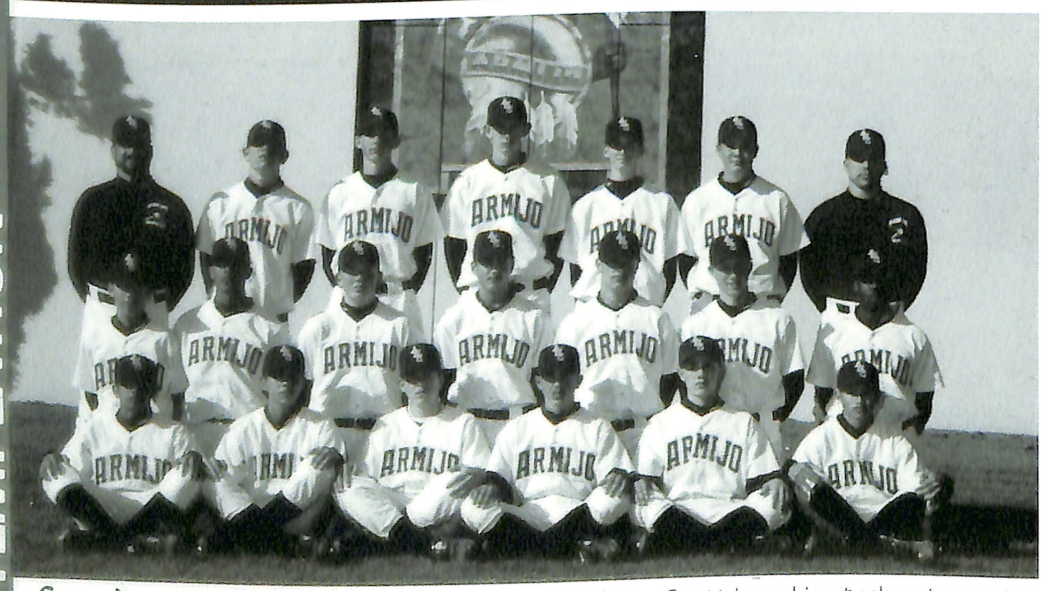

Shveta Basho steps up to return the ball. "I like playing on the tennis team because it's another way to hang with my friends," said Shveta. Shveta, a junior, anticipates her senior year on the girls tennis team.

The JV team rallied together in a huddle to say a team cheer. "Huddling got us ready for the game and it got us really pumped up to play well," commented Tommy Nichols. Baseball required a certain amount of dedication to participate.

The Varsity team gathered around the coach as he discussed the previous inning. "The coach talked to us and pointed out our strengths and weaknesses. He got us ready to play a new inning," said Jeff Freschl. Jeff was a four year veteran of Armijo baseball.

Batters Up

Armijo's baseball teams had always strived for the best. Not unlike years past, this year the baseball players were broken into three teams: Varsity, Junior Varsity, and Freshmen. The teams dedicated themselves to endless hours of practice in order to prove their dedication; their perseverance paid off. Each player had to concentrate on their own individual skills but also had to be aware of their teammates abilities. The Varsity team practiced during sixth period and after school. Their road to success was in setting goals and achieving them. "Baseball is the best sport in the world. I plan on playing for the rest of my life. I think our team will do good this season," commented Doug Talley. During the course of the season, the boys grew mentally and physically, paralleling their growth as a team. Although the boys were required to leave school early to arrive on time to away games, each of them had to make up the work they missed, and keep their grades up. As for comradeship, these guys had played with or against one another for years. "I've been playing since I was little and I'd like to play throughout high school," stated Nick Davis. For this reason, learning the plays and strengths of their teammates was not a difficult task. This years J.V. team was an all around invincible team. "I like playing in field because I feel more involved in the game," Robby Engell. In the end, all of Armijo's baseball players felt like winners.

"Swing batter, batter, SWING!" Yelled the Armijo girls softball team during a scrimmage. Seventeen girls were chosen to represent Armijo's softball team, all of whom had weaknesses and strengths. They worked hard and perfected their game throughout the course of the season. Weeks of intense conditioning highlighted the most dedicated, talented and strongest girls to make the softball team. The game of softball required concentration, strong athletic capabilities and focus. "In order to play a good game of ball, you need to be focused. Once you're in the zone, everything else falls together," stated Shannon Adalin. While on the defense, the players must be alert and must also communicate with their fellow teammates. However, while at the plate one must focus on connecting the bat and ball and to follow through with their swing. "I get so anxious when I'm up at the plate because I want to hit the ball," commented Rachel Bauer. Hours of practices a week insured a tight knit group of girls who not only worked together as a team, but also developed friendships that lasted long after they had left the field. "Both Varsity and J.V. were friends both on and off of the field. From the beginning we connected and remained that way through the season," said Britney Watson.

Freshman Brianne Rios came around to hit the outside pitch of the tee. "Batting is the best part of the game for me, but you have to wait your turn for your perfect pitch," Brianne commented. Brianne was the only freshman on the varsity team and she played second base.

Varsity player Marcella Frazer striked the whiffle ball with an perfect cut. "Softball was fun this year and playing a sport with your friends always makes it even better," said Marcella Frazer. Hitting whiffle balls, receiving grounders, and base running was small fraction of practice.

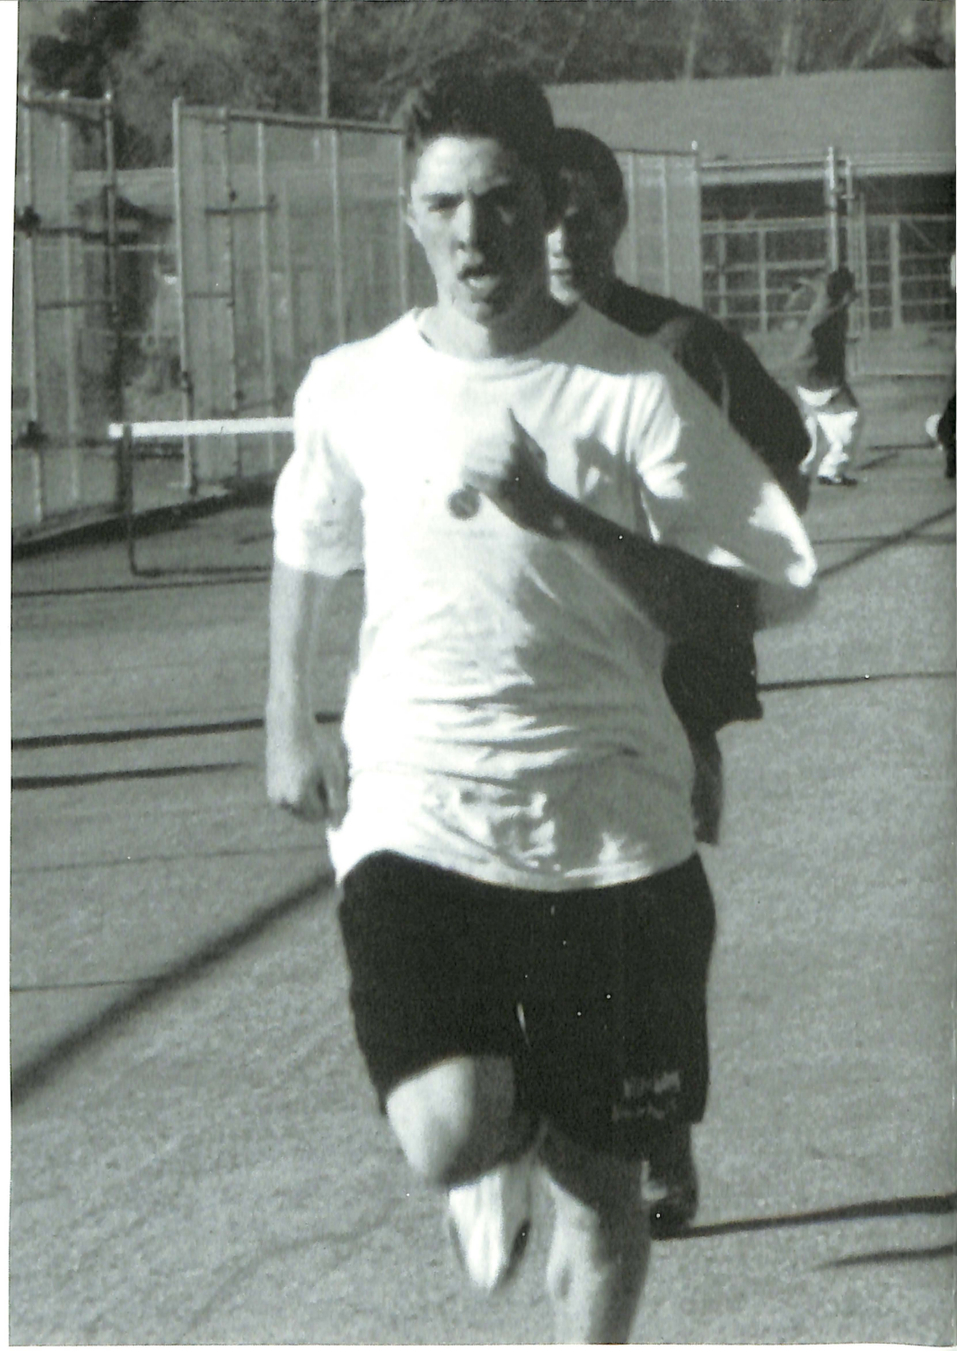

Junior Rene Torres worked on her ground fielding using soft hands. "I played left field this season and out there you have to be prepared for anything wether it be a fly ball or a grounder," said Rene. This was her second year playing for Armijo Softball as an outfielder.

Lisa Smith squatted down and scooped up a ground ball. "Practicing grounders helped us. They are the hardest to control because they can be hit anywhere," commented Smith. Lisa was one of the many juniors on the varsity team.

During a practice the runners were required to run their hardest to increase their stamina. "Practicing relays made exchanges smoother," commented Amber Clayton. The runners lapped eachother on Armijo's track during practice.

"At the beginning of the year, practices were the worst but as the year progressed they became easier," said Harry Meyer. The coach pulled many of the teammates aside to talk to themand inspired them to do a good job.

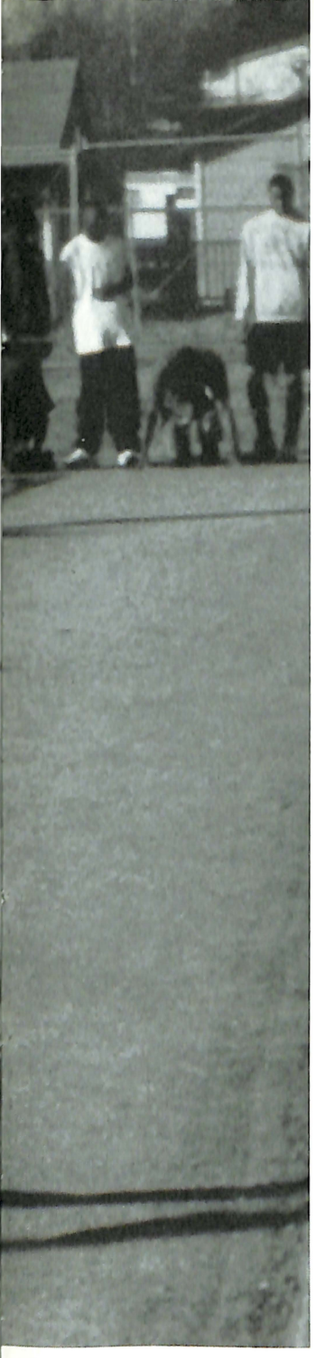

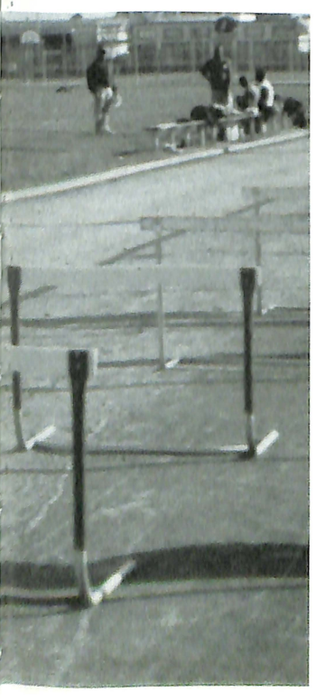

Wesley Williams stretched to warm up and prepared his muscles for a strenuous practice. "We always stretched before we ran to prevent muscle pulls," replied Wesley. Preparing oneself physically was just as important as preparing oneself mentally before a meet.

Finishing the last leg of the hurdles, Samantha Hall-Glenn extended over the bar. "Hurdles are the most difficult, you have to be in excellent condition to run track," commented Samantha. Hurdles were one of the more difficult events for track runners to participate in.

quote An Armijo runner crossed the finish line ahead of the Vacaville Bulldogs. "Dual meets versus other MEL opponents were the most exciting meets to participate in," explained Track coach Mike Gildon.

Sprint

An intense drive was what made the track team successful. There were many obstacles to overcome but that did not create a problem for these athletes. Without their extreme amount of energy, the team would not have made it through the season. Track was an appealing sport because there were different events in which to participate: the long jump, hurdles, long distance and short distance runs, shot put, pole vault, and discus. The diversity of these events made track competitions exciting. It also enabled many people to participate in track and field using their individual talents. This years team was full of experience. "I feel that the J.V. team should have won the most important meets against our rivals because we got to compete at home. I also think we improved by winning three matches, " commented Tavin Lampheir. With all that was going on, there was always a competition. The team was able to support each individual because they were not all competing at once. "It was encouraging to have people from your team cheering you on," stated Sara Para. The members practiced long and hard to reach their peak during competition.

"Line, line!" yells Kaz Imrie as she sprints down the sideline to receive a pass from center mid fielder Bryanna Burke, As she crosses the ball, the referee blows his whistle to signal the game's end. The Armijo girl's soccer team erupts in cheers... another victory. This was pretty much the weekly report, as these girls cruised to another MEL Championship, planning to meet old rivals Wood and St. Mary's at the San Joaquin Sections. In a game against Hogan High School, Armijo set a record score of 18-0. With a new coaching staff of Pete Zopfi and Doug Saladino, and the loss of a relatively large group of seniors from last year, many changes were made into the format of the season. The team practiced Monday afternoons, Wednesday mornings, and occasional Fridays. Along with these adaptations, availability of the Armijo field gave the girl's a home field really at home, unlike last year. Luckily, rain was not as big a factor as in previous years. The presence of La Nina left the girls with a comparatively dry schedule. Placing second in a renown tournament hosted by St. Mary's High School, began the season, and the victories kept coming as the talented group of girls set out to prove that they were #1!

Coaches Pete and Doug gathered the team during half-time to discuss the next half. Coach Pete said," I could tell at tryouts that we had a talented group, and they proved to Coach Doug and myself that we could go all the way." The girls went out with a record of 14-1.

Kelly Carrier watched as the ball fell to her feet in a game vs. Napa. Kelley commented," I love playing soccer, and it was awesome being on Varsity this year." Kelley was one of the four sophomores on this year's team. The team was relatively young, and should come back with a vengeance next year.

Striker Bryanna Burke blocked the ball as her opponent tried to kick it past her. "This year was the best. We all worked hard to achieve the MEL Championship, and we did." Bryanna was this season's top scorer.

The ball bounced free as the Armijo defense pushed up the field, catching three players off-sides. Jennifer Zopfi commented, "We had a lot of defensive players to choose from, and it worked out great."

Goalkeeper Caryn Meagher kicked the ball down to midfield after an attempt by the opposition. Caryn added, "Being goalie requires a lot of skill, and I feel privileged to be goalie for this awesome team." They were MEL Champs two years in a row.

After the MEL-winning victory over Wood, the Armijo girls gathered to take a victory picture. Erin Stockey exclaimed, "We were so ready for that game and for the celebration we had to Smear the Queer!" The final score clinched the MEL Championship for the team.

Patricia Zialcita cleared the ball as the Armijo team pushed the line up. Patricia commented, "Varsity soccer is very intense and competitive. I felt very privileged that I was able to experience this competition in my freshman year." This year was a big transition, with a new coaching staff, field, and many new members. It was all made worthwhile when the title was obtained for the second year in a row.

Sweeper Carrie Walbolt cleared the ball downfield for a free kick. Carrie said, "This year was off the hinges. We had a party that brought our team really close together. We even rode in a Dookie Van together and got up to practice at the crack of dawn. It was the best!"

Heather Allen battled for the ball with a Wood opponent. Heather, center mid-fielder, commented, "It felt really good to make this talented Varsity team as a freshman. I also enjoyed getting to know a great group of upperclassmen."

Christine Otterlei played it wide while the Armijo defense battled for the ball. Christine said, "Soccer in America is a lot different than it is in Norway. In Norway, we played on sand. But it was a lot of fun , and made my year in America complete."

Forward Sara Parra dribbled the ball past the Wood defense. Sara said, "It felt really good to beat Wood. Stockey and I play with them in our 'Comp' season, and now we can rub it in their faces." Sara was one of the dominant starting forwards on the Armijo girls' soccer team.

Sophomore Nathina Lozada cleared the birdie over the net with a classic backhand hit. "Badminton allows me to practice for tennis during the off season," said Nathina. This was her first year on the squad.

Leslie Lubag and Amy Donnoe were partners when they played against Edison. " High clears are my strongest return because I love smashing the birdie towards the other team," commented Leslie. Getting hit by the birdie was a common occurrence.

Nikki DiMichele served the birdie to the opposing team. " I try to anticipate where a player will go when I serve so I can try to serve it in the opposite direction they are going in," said Nikki. Nikki is a third year player.

Laktoyen Chindavong watched her drive land near her opponents feet. "When I hit the birdie, I try to alternate the hits I use to confuse the person I'm playing," commented Laktoyen. In the game of badminton there are 5 different types of hits.

quote Candice Francisco and Nikki DiMichele stretch before a match. "Badminton is a sport that looks easy but it is really fairly difficult. The team was expected once again to do very well in the MELs the 1998-1999 school year.

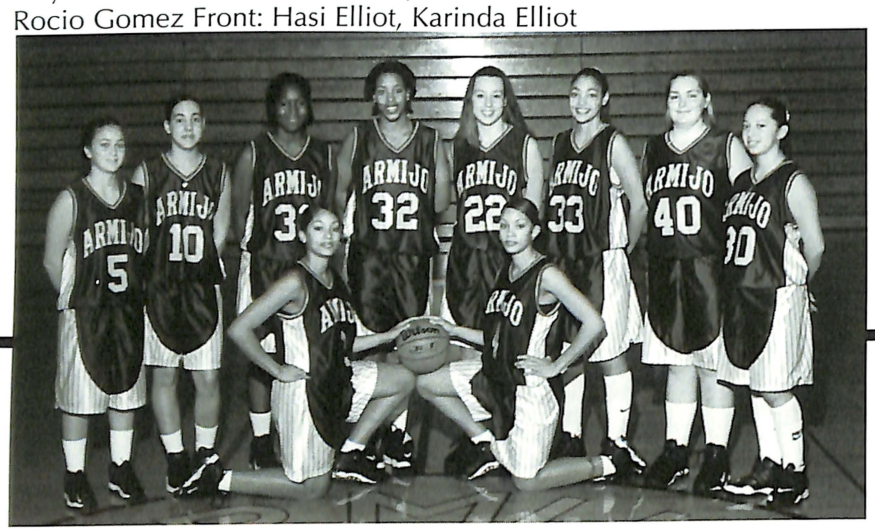

SwinG

Birdies shot through the air everyday after school in the gym. The Armijo Badminton team began their season with high hopes and positive attitides. The team consisted of 22 players, of which 13 were returning players, and 8 of them were experienced seniors. "We placed third last year, but the majority of the team was new players. Since this year, over half of the team were returning players from last year, we felt very comfortable in competing with other schools." replied Senior Jasmine Dhillion. The varsity ladder was composed of 8 singles players and 7 double teams. The rest of the team players played exhibition games. Sophomore Maya Pandurangi was a first year player and said, "Playing exhibition was a great experience because I learned to improve my performance and also I prepared myself for next year." As every year, the Badminton team proved to be a tough and challenging sport. The game takes great concentration from each of the opponents. The skill of playing comes from the techinique and practicing to master the shots. The rule applied this year that guys were not able to try out for the team, but Junior Ervin Ramos objected to that. "I've always wanted to try out for the team. But this year, I wanted to change that so I talked to the coach, tried out, and got on the team." Throguh out their season, these young athletes were determined to be victorious and capture MEL title once again.

Sharp Shooters

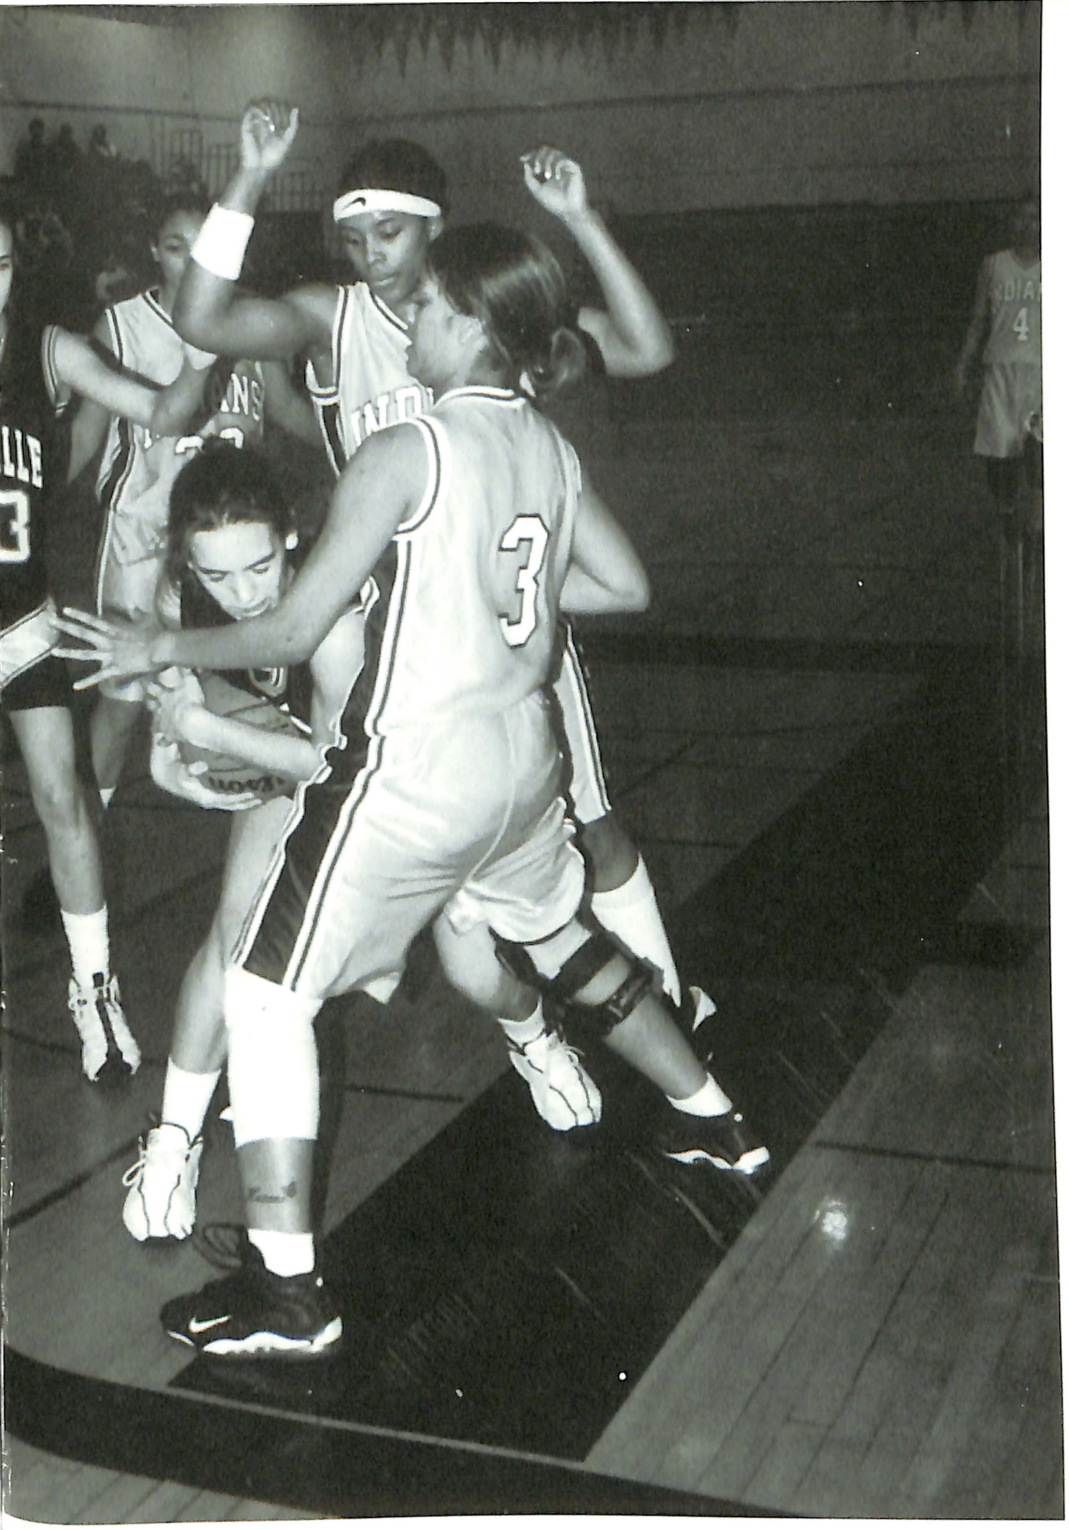

At the break of the new year, the Armijo Girl's basketball teams and their coaches were hard at work preparing for the start of the basketball season. With persistence and dedication the players worked on perfecting their skills. "At first we didn't work together that well, but we came together as a team and became more unified. As the year progressed we communicated better which helped us to come together as a team," said varsity player Rachael Cowham. With an experienced varsity team many were hopeful of a great year. Though there were a number of girls with individual talent, it was the unity that kept them strong, because the game of basketball is a team effort. Unity came easy for the girls, for most of them were friends not only on the court, but also off the court. "We're a very close team. Even though we didn't always come out on top we tried our hardest and gave it our all," said Tameka Haymon. It was all of these characteristics that the players possessed that earned them a great MEL season. "The girls had great spirit and were very determined to do better this year and that was what gave us an excellent year," commented Coach Pickett.

jv Quasana Banks, Jasmine Butts, Camille Castro, Jennifer Causey, Andrea Cuera, Tiffany Garrett, Sarah Gutierrez, Jessica Hunley, Erin Krzmarzick, Tatiara Miller, Jennifer Silva, Akilah Tutt, Luisa Oliver, Lori Yamamoto, Varsity players Hasi Elliot and Marsha McGehee used their strong defensive skills to prevent their opponent from passing the ball. "Playing defense was the best part of the game. It's the intense feeling of the game trying to stop the other team from scoring," said Hasi. Defense was the strongest skill they possessed.

Jennifer Silva leaped over a Vacaville player shooting for an easy two point basket. "I love playing basketball because it gives me such an adrenaline rush. I was always juiced before a game," commented Jennifer. This was her second year playing forward for the junior varsity team.

Varsity player Tracey Allen looked for her target, the basketball hoop. "I was very glad to be a part of the varsity team," said Tracey. Tracey was one of the sophomores on the varsity team; however, she played as though she was a senior.

Senior Karinda Elliot shot the ball to make a simple field goal. "This year was very challenging, especially after returning from a knee surgery, but I had to play my senior year because of the love and fun I've found in the game," said Karinda.

Tameka Haymon kept the ball close to her body looking for an open teammate to pass the ball to. " Passing was a fundamental thing. It's something you should be able to do to win the game," Tameka said. "Tameka played the position of forward for the varsity team.

Quasana Banks shot the ball and nobody was around except for her Armijo teamamtes.
"We're a great team. We work together very well and try to help each other when ever possible," commented Quasana. This was Quasana's first year playing ball on the Armijo team.

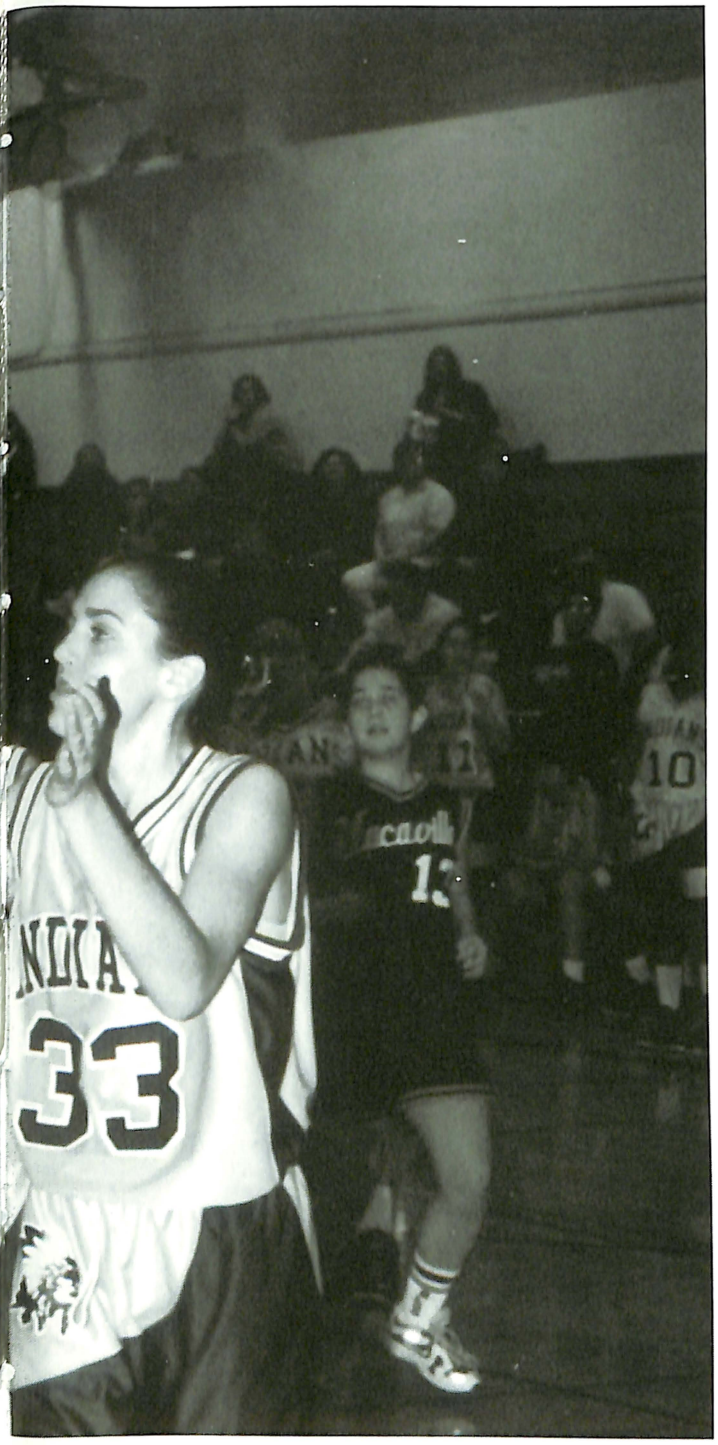

Junior varsity player Tiffany Garret ran around a Vacaville player to make a layup. "I think we had a good season because our team was very talented and very together. Also we should have a great varsity next year because many of us will be moving up next year," said Tiffany.

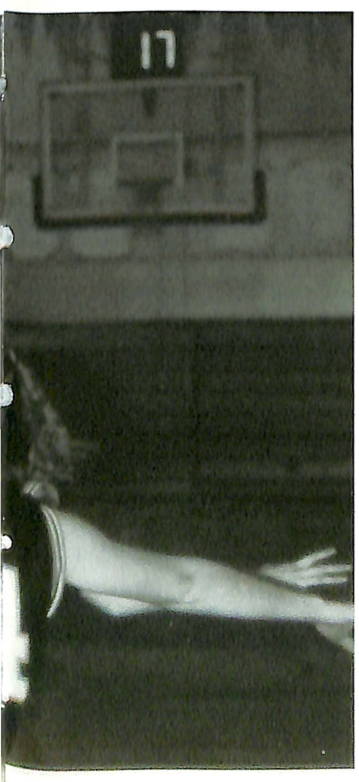

Varsity player Jenny Rush shot the ball over the hand of her Vacaville opponent. "Basketball has been a very good and challenging sport for me all these years," said Jenny. It was Jenny's fourth year playing basketball at Armijo.

"Standing clear of any opponents to prevent her from scoring, Sarah Gutierrez shot the ball. "This year basketball was wonderful. We played as a team and worked together. We had a lot of good times," said Sarah.

Releasing the ball at exactly the right moment, Marsha McGehee made the free throw. When asked what her most rewarding thing was after being on the team for four years, she said: "Being able to meet new people and playing like a family."

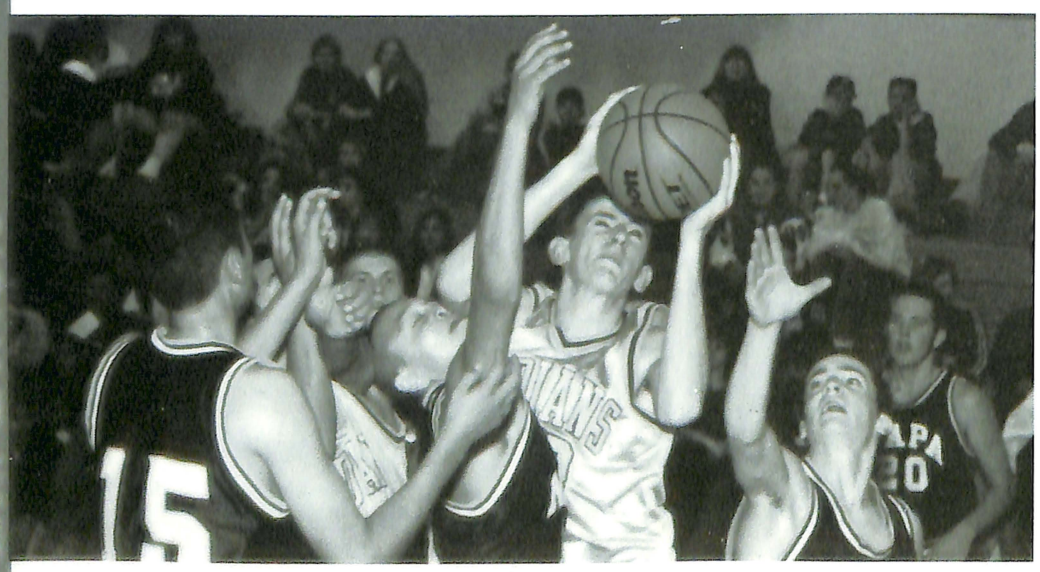

Tatiana Miller squeezes between four Vacaville players to rebound the ball. "Rebounding was a great way to attack and move against the other team," said Tatiana. She was one of several sophomores playing basketball for Armijo.

Wesley Williams leaped high above the rival team to make the shot. "The season didn't go as well as I had hoped. It was still a good experience," said Wesley. The Varsity Basketball team fought hard for their victories, as their respectable losses made them better and pushed them farther.

Columbus Bender aggressively jumps to block his opponents rebound. "This year was good and bad, we learned from our mistakes and they will only make us better," stated Columbus. Having friends on the team was important to Columbus, communication between teammates was key.

Steve Bently forced and broke his way through the wall made by Napa's defense. "This season was a learning experience for me as a Freshman," being a Freshman on the Junior Varsity team is a respectable accomplishment.

Sean Almeida slipped by his Napa opponent pushing towards the basket with ease. "I have developed many friendships with the guys on this team. Through the low and high lights we knew we tried our best," commented Sean. Sean not only played basketball he was also senior class President.

Free Throw

With dedication, comes sacrafice. With perseverance, comes excellence. With all of these things, we have Armijo's Boys Basketball. "I love basketball," said Angelo Jefferson, "because my father played basketball and I am following in his footsteps." The coaches this year did an exemplary job with discipline and skill. Coaches Dahl, Giovanetti and Evans all centered their focuses on become better, more competitive teams. For the seniors on the Varsity team, this is their last season of their High School careers. "This year was very interesting for me," said Sean Almeida, "I'm glad it's finally over." Through both the difficulties and triumphs for Armijo, the teams were determined and persistant throughout the season. The spirited crowd that attended the games helped keep morale up. Jeff Barton explains, "This year was tough for us. It looked good in pre-season, but then we fell short of our capabilities in league." Alan Rooke, a senior, claims, "I loved the feeling of when we ran out of the locker room and ran around the gym with the crowd cheering. It was great to know that they supported and believed in us."

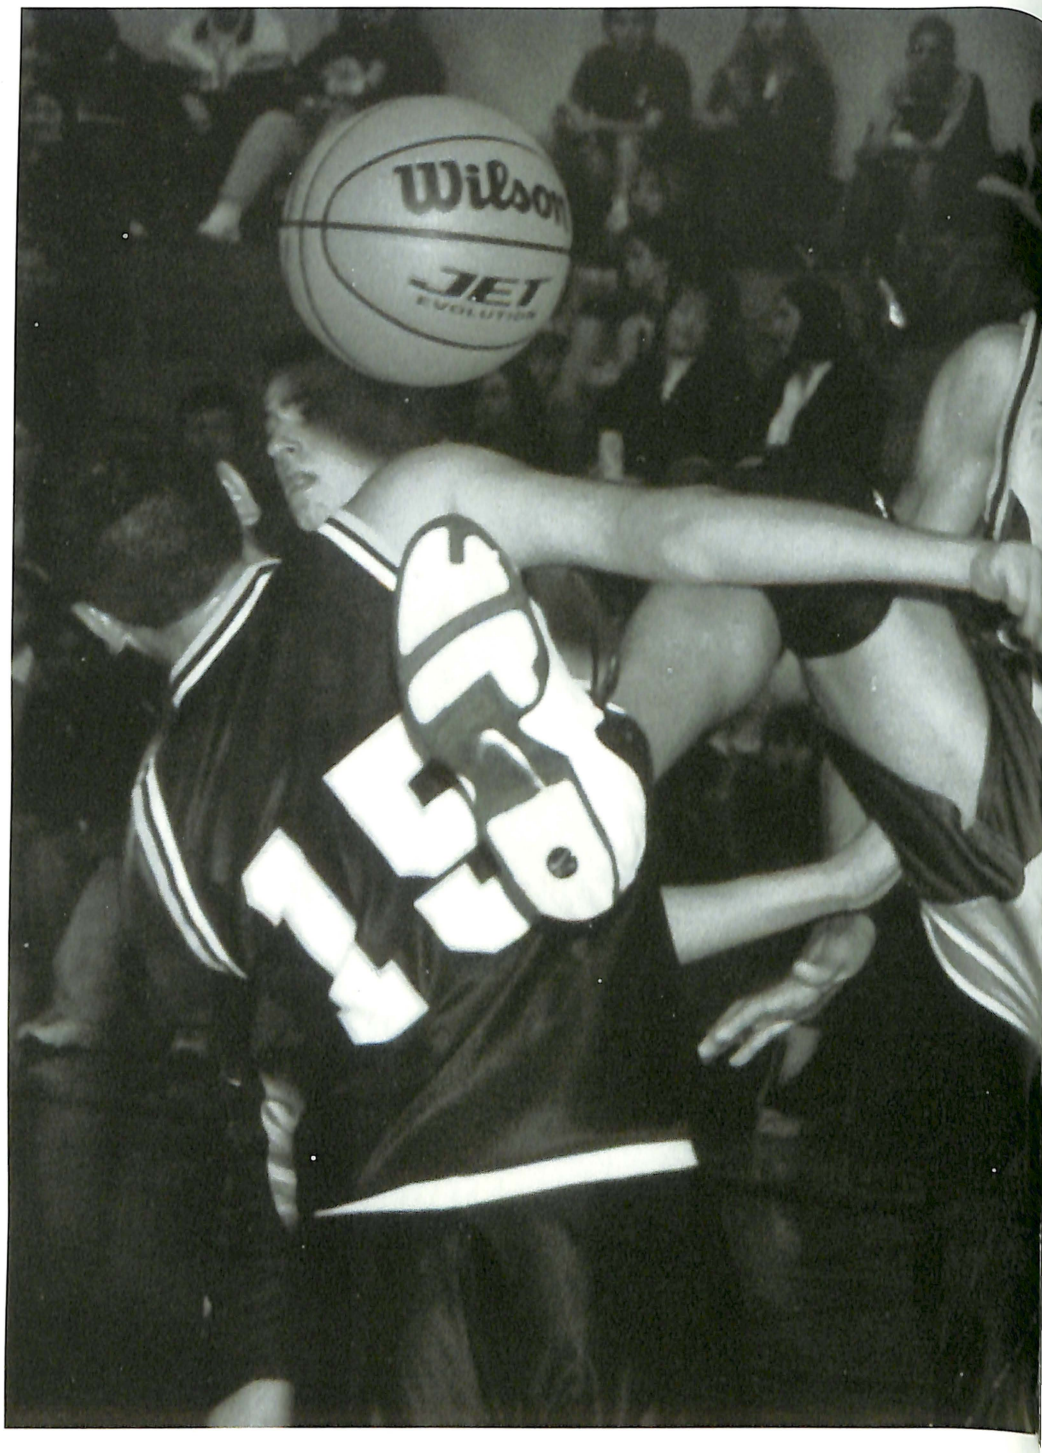

jv Andre Bell, Alex Chavez, Miguel Santiago, Joey Cimo, Coach Gioannetti, Ty Mattern, Brian Newman, Chad Donnelly, Kevin Williams, Randy Wilridge, Craig Giovanetti, Micah Smurthwaite, Angelo Jefferson, Joe Ordona

Ty Mattern palms the ball flying over their opponents defense. "We had a good season because we played together as a team and not as individuals. It helped us win many victories," Ty admits. Ty plans on playing basketball for Armjio until he graduates.

Miguel Santiago forcefully blocks Napa from the rebound, fouling, determined to win. "I thought that we had the best season we could have had. Hopefully we'll be this good next year and win!" he exclaimed. The JV team won Homecoming by a landslide.

Colliding for the rebound, Armijo's JV defense successfully blocks Napa at Homecoming. "Without friends, there is no team. Especially no success," Alex Chavez explains. Alex is a starting player for JV.

Mike Kim runs towards the ball scooping it up before the Napa players even had a chance. "Playing for Armijo is great. Although the gym could use some improvements," Mike admits. Mike has played basketball for Armijo since his Freshman year. He is currently a Junior.

Joey Cimo yells with accomplishment psyching the other team out. "I really love this game. This year has been an experience that will help me and the rest of the team in the long run," Joey replies.

Patiently waiting for a pass, Micah Smurthwaite opens himself up. "The team was really good and we improved. I only hope that we'll get better through the years," states Micah.

Anticipation n-
To Look forward to:
EXPECT

The 1998-1999 school year ended with a bang for Armijo High School. All the hard work paid off. With all the final activities of the school year, Prom, Senior Tea, Senior trip, finals and graduation, the students, especially upperclassmen, were busy. All everyone thought about was getting away.

Summer break, vacations sleeping in until noon on a Monday, sponsored camps, and relaxing were activities that many longed for. The students of Armijo could only day dream about the long time off. Before all the breaks, everyone had to get in the last bit of studying and cramming. Finals were killer. Everyone wanted to spend the remaining of their Armijo days hanging out and kicking back but it was anything but. Many had final college choices to make and plan for their future. So much to be done. The motivation through it all finally shone through. The Seniors walking with their class was the biggest payment of all. The juniors, sophomores, and freshmen promoted to the next grade and used the knowledge gained to prepare for their more difficult classes the following year

Everyone still remembered back to the first day of school, meeting new friends, socializing with old ones, the exams, the pressure, it was all over. For some it was a three month break over summer, for others they were moving on. Things changed for everyone, but the memories of Armijo were never forgotten.

The junior varsity boy's soccer team warmed up before a game. "Mental agility helped me out in the end, and it improved my game," stated Ronnie Lehman. Many players believed that with the hard work and training enabled them to succeed in the end.

Anticipation

All things came to end. Students achieved, created and imagined that took them to higher and better places. Which included graduating, being promoted, and year-round being canceled. Life was good and it was getting better.

My long time friends ever since Crytsal years like Nikki, Angela, Pino, and Ian. I'd like 2 say thanks 4 being the same while others change in this world. And 2 all my other friends in high school thanks for listening 2 my problems and helping me out. I'll never forget yall. -Joe

First I'd like to thank my family, Dad, Mom and Allyn, for keeping my head on straight, I love you all. To all my friends, for all the love and laughter we've shared, thank you. -Aldrich

First, I'd like to thank God for blessing me for everything I have. Also I'd like 2 thank my mom for puttin up wit my bad self. Throughout the years that I've been in school, friends have come and gone, still I was lucky enough 2 meet the best friends I've ever had. Thanx 4 havin my back. Time for me to go. Peace IMPACTZONE...LoStBoYsZ I LOVE YA. -Gabe

Thanks 2 my family and friends 4 everything, I'll never forget you. LAURABELLE 637-Laureto

ERRIE...My first shot out goes out 2 da MAN, (GOD). Next, my love goes out 2 my family, Moms, Pops, my bro and sisters, I love you all.Much love straight goin out 2, Julia and Ate JoJo and my homeboy Bryse. 2 every one else, there's 2 many of yall 2 name but yall know who you are. So take care and yall got love from me. one last thing Yit-Ta-Dee and I'm out. -Harvey

First all my love goes out 2 God, 4 sending me the best friends I could possbly ecer have. My family, thanks for pushing me and helping me through school, I love you all. Thanks 2 everyone, 4 being by my side when I needed yall. You've shown me that there is nothing that could ever tear apart the love and respect that we have for one another. I love you all. Also, 2 anyone that has made me smile the few times in my life, or that has helped me in any way, shape or form. thank you.And 2 anyone else I left out you know who you are...THANK YOU!!!! -Don=)

The closest distance between 2 people is the willingness 2 share a smile. -Jhamarr 3:16

Wassup yo, dis is DERO. First I'd like 2 give all my love 2 God. 2 my family, Mom, Dad, and my bros. Oh and LOLA. I love you all. 10 Q Dad 4 puttin up wit me. You've guided me through the right path and I'd like 2 thank u 4 that. 2 my friends...What can I say, you guys are the best. You've made it memorable 4 me and I'd like 2 thank all you guys 4 being there for me. I love yall. And everyone esle I left out u know who u are.Well I guess I'm up. Peace out. -Dee

Finally, the year has come 2 an end, and sooner or later we're gonna go our seperate ways. Through it all we've stuck by each other not knowing where the the long road will take us. If you ever you forget who we are, here's a few ways to remember us by: Laureto-who looks like Cartman, Joe-who loves wrestling, Mario- who loves soccer, R.J.- buys new clothes every week, Gabe- the dancer, Jhamarr- the video game freek, Don- armijo man/ the guy wit long hair, Aldrich- probably the most successful in the future, Darrel- the most outgoing/ the guy wit the hangy things in his hair, and Harvey- the all around lovable guy.

Before we close and say our good-byes, we feel that we need 2 give out special thanks 2 a few people...the SUPERFREEKS for standing by us whenever we needed you , the class of 99, and each other, 4 making life a little bit easier, THANK YOU!

The happiest day of our lives, when we looked into your beautiful brown eyes for the very first time. Since then, you have made every day special just by being you - the beautiful, sweet, caring, loving, thoughtful daughter we adore. You are our angel from heaven.

June 11, 1999

Eighteen years later, you are graduating on your special day. As you take that step into your future, just remember we are so proud of you and we believe in you. We know you will touch lives in a very special way. Dream and reach for the stars and you will soar.

Friends Forever

Friends are friends forever
If the Lord's the Lord of them
And a friend will not say "never"
'Cause the welcome will not end
Though it's hard to let you go
In the Father's hands we know
That a lifetime is not too long to live as friends.

To are wonderful son, Alek

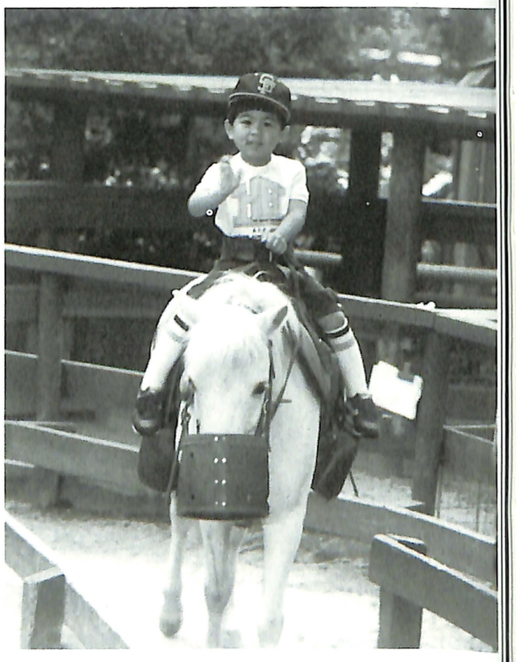

To see you happy
laughing and joking
smiling and content
striving towards goals of your own accomplishing what you set out to do
having fun with yourself and your friends capable of loving and being loved is what we always wished for you

Today we thought about your handsome face and felt your excitement for life and your genuine happiness and we, as your parents, burst with pride as we realized that our dreams
for you came true
What an extraordinary person you have become and as you continue to grow please remember always how very much
WE LOVE YOU!!!
Mom & Dad

Ben and Kristen,

Oh how our lives have been planned out,
Until eighteen without a doubt.
School, college, clubs, and games,
Long- standing traditions, pre- given names.
Idenity given and taken away,
Being yourself at the end of the day.
Parents, teachers, sisters, and brothers,
All caring for you, like most others.
Degrees, qualifications, aims, and traditions,
Trying to fulfil dreams and ambitions.
Constant reminders of glory to come,
We will touch others, i.e., only some.
Remember your success is all up to you,
It's all yours, what will you do?
My mother always used to say: " The older you get, the better you get ... unless you're a bannana."
All Our Love,

Your family Tree

Dear Jennifer,
Congratulations. Good luck and much success in the future. Follow your dreams! We love you.

JAYME,

You have grown from a little girl, to a beautiful young woman in such a short time.

During that time we have watched you make decisions and choose the paths, that have turned you into the special person you are, full of many great qualities, of which we are very proud.

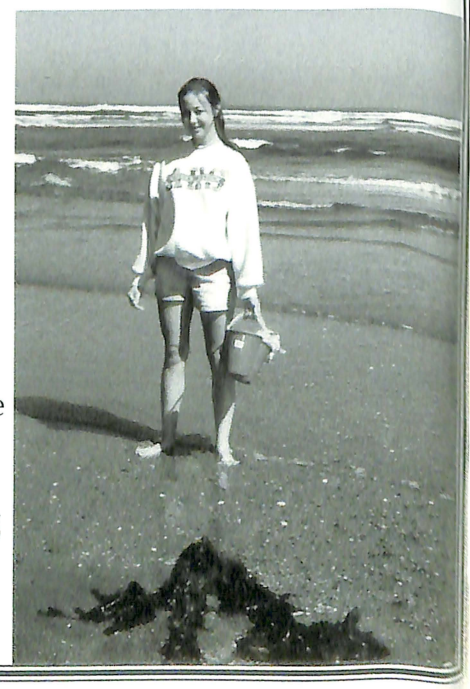

We would like to thank you for the gift you gave us by being the wounderful daughter that you are, this is one of the most rewarding experiences we could ever have.

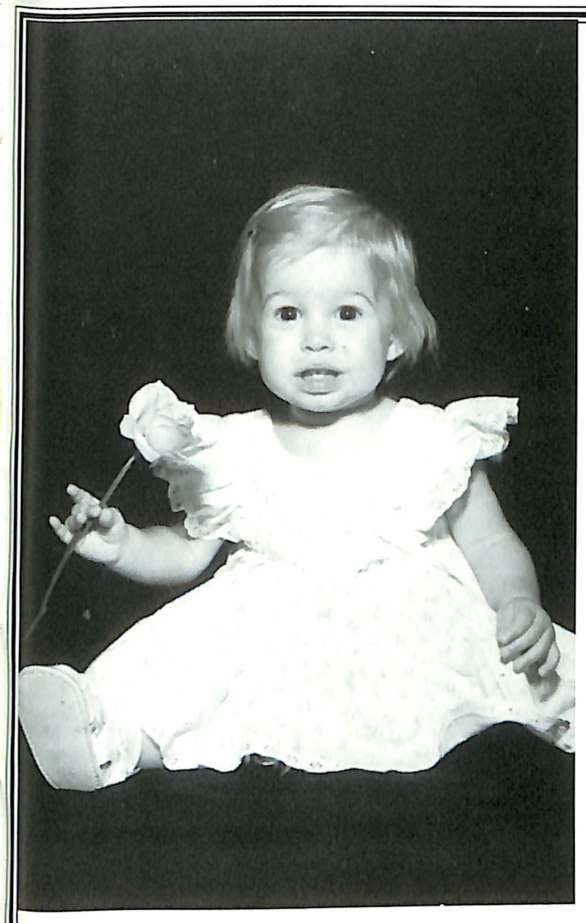

You have a great future ahead of you, make your dreams come true,you will always have our support along the way.

Love Forever,

Mom & Dad

To Shana,

Our giddo,giddo girl. You've gone from an adorable baby to a responsible, caring, ambitious young lady in such a short amount of time. It's hard to believe your days of school and senioritis are almost over. Don't let go of your plans and dreams and remember- I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me. Philippians 4:13. We love you so much!!!

Love,

Dad, Mom,
and Jayson

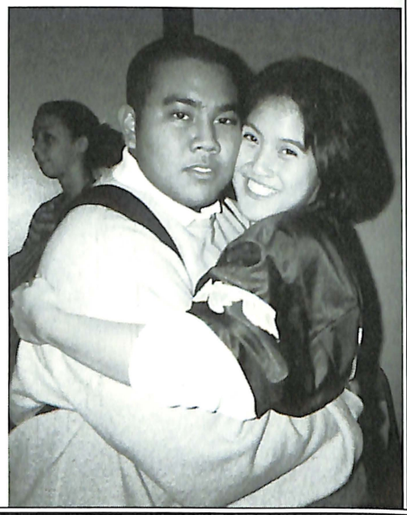

Much success to our Baby Girl. Tinisha wea are so proud of you.

Who else can cause you greif, joy, irritation and genuine delight all at the same time? "A little girl!" She was born with a little bit of sunshine about her and though it wears a little thin sometimes, there is always enough left to lasso our heart.

Just remember most of the shadows of this life are by standing in one's own sunshine.

Bryanna, you are such a special young lady. Time has gone by so fast. It's hard to believe you are already graduating. We are so proud of you!

Keep shining "Baby Cakes" and nothing will be impossible unto you.

We Love You,

This year our theme for our book was Expect the Unexpected. The book was 296 pages long, with an insert of 16 pages. Which was the World Book, produced by Herff Jones. Herff Jones printed up 1500 books for us, which the price range ran from $46-$65, depending on the time of year it was bought. The job number, which hasn't changed for many years, was once again 7042. This year we tried to cut down on the number of fonts we used, for stories, profiles and quote boxes we used Optima. For Captions and the Underclass names we used Tekton. For headlines we used DragonWick Regular or Flora-Bold Regular. For Senior's names we used Clearface- Heavy Regular. For the folio's which flowed throughout the book and the cover, we used the font Flora-Bold Regular. The color of the folio box changed throughout the book to show that the section changed. The spot color we used was HJ -266. The cover was designed by the whole staff and Karen Stanovich, our Sales Rep helped us with the final details. The endsheets were thought up by the La Mezcla staff but the final draft was made by Karen. The layouts were created by the editors.

The class of 1999 gathered together once last time, to reminisce about the first three years of their high school career. Soon they would be leaving to start a new chapter in their lives. Determination, wisdom, and achievement were the backbone of the class but it had always been there. Armijo had brought out these wonderful traits in the students making them stronger, smarter, and more independent, making the legacy of Armijo even more pertinent than the year before. In the background you could hear, a song barely above a whisper, that so many other classes had sung.

Hail Armijo,
Thy praise we sing
Humbly before thee
Our homage here we bring

Still guide us in your wisdom
Where our paths may lead,
Be thou our inspiration--
Hail to Thee!

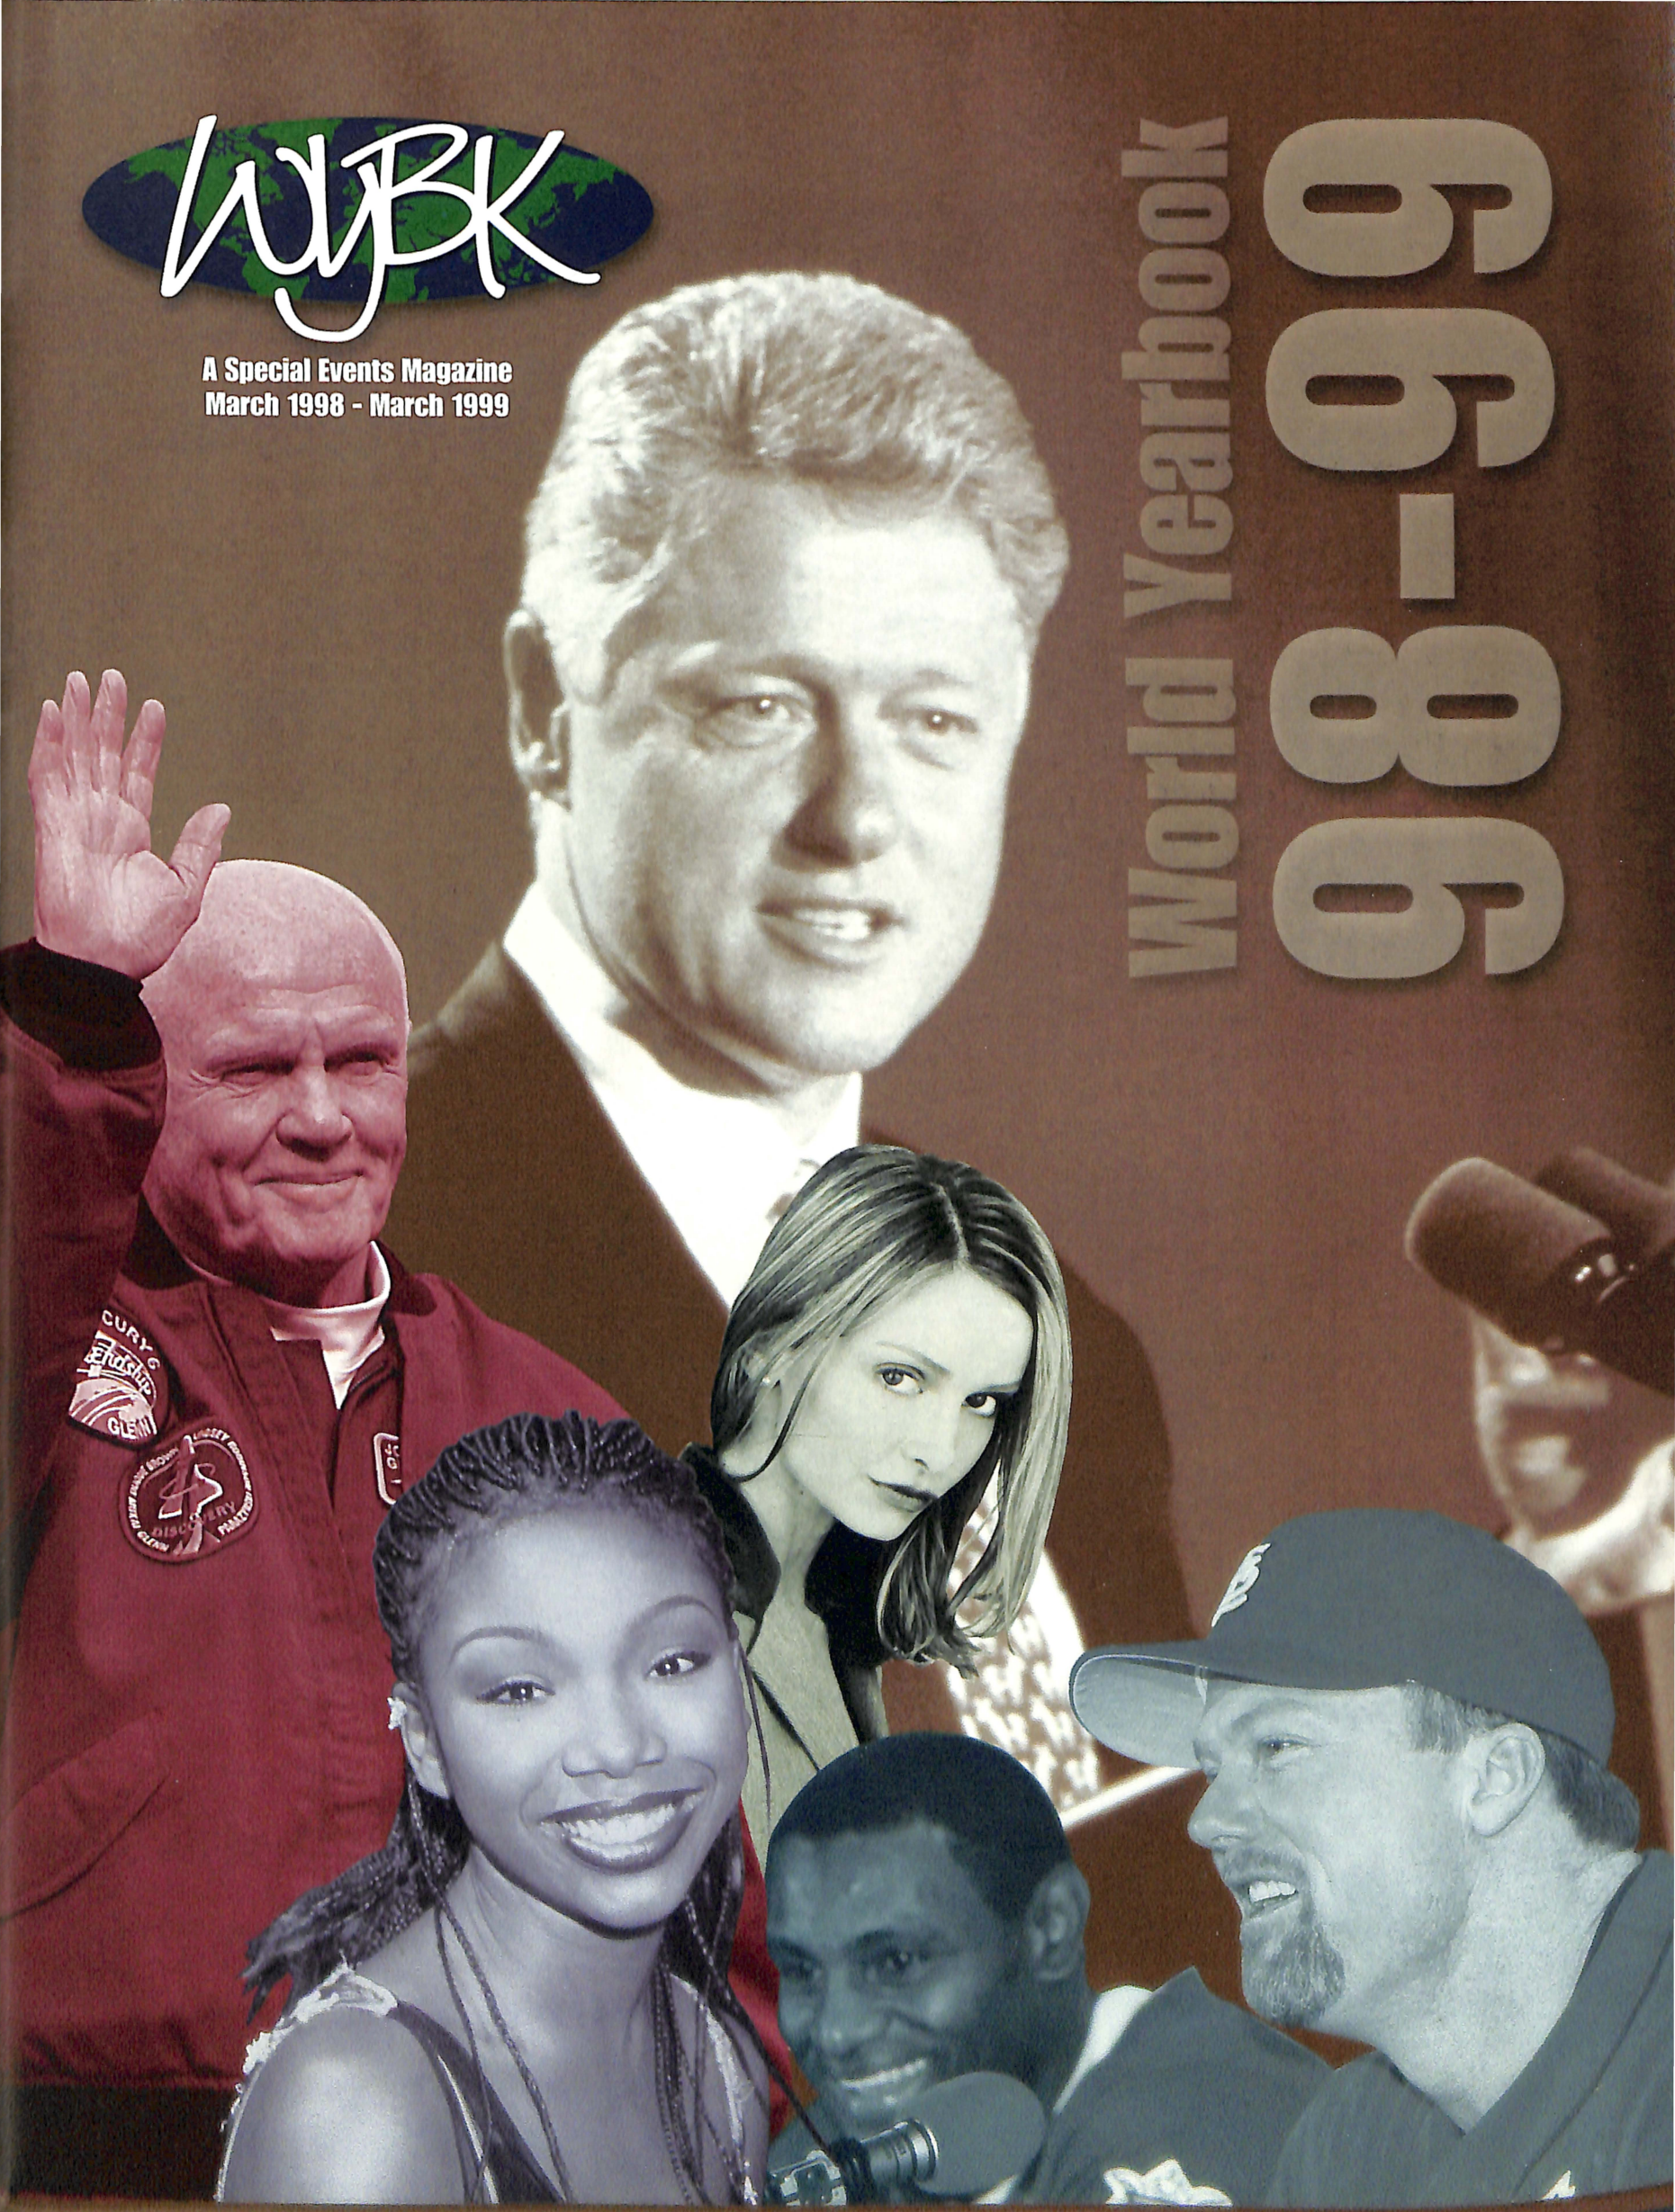

Leaving Armijo symbolized new beginnings and no one knew the next events that would happen in the near future. That is why we learned to ....
